Review of the Report on the Administration of the Mints at Calcutta and Bombay for the year 1916-17.

I.—Working of the Mints.

Receipts, etc., of Gold.

As in the previous year, very little gold in the form of Sovereigns was imported on private account and no tenders were received at the Mints either from the public or the Presidency Banks. The receipts of light weight Sovereigns and of remittances sent for examination from currency chests and treasuries were also negligible.

2. Besides the usual consignments of the products of the Indian Gold Mines, the Bombay Mint also received periodical shipments of gold from the South African Mines for safe custody on behalf of the Bank of England. During the year arrangements were made with the Bank of England for the sale of part of this raw gold, after transferring it to the Currency Gold Bullion Account. The amount so transferred upto the end of March 1917 was valued at Rs. 5,25,00,000, of which Rs. 4,28,31,031 had been sold to the public by the close of the year.

3. At the request of the Egyptian Government, coinage was undertaken at the Bombay Mint of new Egyptian gold pieces of the denomination of 100 piastres. The designs on the coin will be seen on the frontispiece. The total number of 100 piastres struck was 10,001, and their value was Rs. 1,53,765.

Coinage of Silver.

4. The year under review was a record in the matter of coinage and both mints were kept working at high pressure throughout the year. The following table shews in detail the silver coinage executed at both mints for the Government of India during the year 1916-17 :—

	CALCUTTA.	BOMBAY.	TOTAL.
	Value in Rupees.	Value in Rupees.	Value in Rupees.
Rupees . . . . .	15,65,00,000	14,24,00,266	29,89,00,266

Quarter-rupees . . . . .	32,94,581	...	32,94,581

TOTAL FOR 1915-16 . . . . .	1,04,02,141	58,00,058	1,62,02,199

5. Only a small fraction of the above figures represents recoinage of withdrawn and uncurrent coins, the total receipts at both Mints on account of such coins amounting to Rs. 1,38,54,587 only. The bulk of the coinage was from bar and sycee silver, and from silver coins of various foreign countries.

6. The following table gives the details of the silver coinage executed at the Bombay mint on behalf of Foreign Governments.

Denomination of the coins.	Number of pieces.	Value in Rupees.	Government on whose behalf the coinage was executed.
20 piastres . . . . .	1,836,257	40,07,148	} Egyptian Government

20 cents . . . . .	645,232	1,96,643	} Straits Government.
10 „ . . . . .	1,200,014	1,82,839

Coinage of subsidiary coins for the Ceylon Government consisting of 50, 25 and 10 cent pieces was commenced at the Calcutta Mint in March 1917, but was not completed during the year.

Nickel and Bronze Coinage.

7. The nickel coinage for the British India Government, which as usual was confined to the Bombay Mint, consisted of 39,087,087 anna pieces of the nominal value of Rs. 24,42,913 against 7,670,248 pieces of the nominal value of Rs. 4,79,390 coined in the previous year. Cupro-nickel coins of the denominations of 10, 5, 2 and 1 millièmes numbering 11,702,143 pieces in all were also struck on behalf of the Egyptian Government.

8. The bronze coinage which is carried out entirely at the Calcutta Mint consisted of pice, half-pice and pie-pieces of the aggregate value of Rs. 2,65,900 compared with Rs. 1,83,900 in 1915-16. In addition, 8,364,000 pieces of bronze pennies and half-pennies for the Australian Commonwealth, 4,000,000 pieces of bronze half-millièmes for Egypt and copper  $\frac{1}{2}$  cents and  $\frac{1}{4}$  cents numbering 7,000,000 for the Straits Government were also coined during the year at the Calcutta Mint.

Operative losses.

9. Silver.—The loss on the silver coined according to the usual method of arriving at these figures, worked out to Rs. 114.69 at the Calcutta Mint and Rs. 38.24 at the Bombay Mint, per lakh of Standard tolas coined. As was explained in last year's report, these figures are somewhat liable to fluctuation even in normal years. The remarkable divergence between the figures for the two Mints in the year under review is under investigation, it appears to be due in part to differences in the methods of accounting.

10. Bronze.—The operative loss on account of the bronze coinage at the Calcutta Mint including melting and coining losses amounted to 37 maunds giving an average rate of 0.83 per 100 maunds of bronze pieces coined.

11. Nickel.—The total operative loss written off during the year on account of nickel coinage at the Bombay Mint amounted to 33½ maunds giving a percentage of 0.6226 per 100 maunds of metal coined.

Revenue and Expenditure.

12. The statement below gives the usual figures of the revenue and expenditure including interest on capital and other pro forma charges of the two mints for the years 1915-16 and 1916-17:—

Year.	REVENUE.			EXPENDITURE.
	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1915-16 . . . . .	10,50,668	2,08,351	3,59,019	11,13,945	8,44,756	19,58,701
1916-17 . . . . .	35,04,792	37,14,093	72,18,885	18,01,996	14,30,799	32,32,795

The marked increase in revenue at both mints is due to the large receipts under seigniorage on the coinage of rupees from purchased silver. Seigniorage is levied at the rate of Rs. 2 per 100 tolas of standard silver taken up for coinage. The following table shews the receipts at both mints from this source and the similar duties charged on the coinage executed for Foreign Governments :—

	Calcutta.	Bombay.	Total.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Seigniorage on British India Government coinage.	31,58,459	30,31,678	61,90,137
• Ditto Foreign coinage	75,835	3,06,032	3,84,870
TOTAL	32,37,297	33,37,710	65,75,007

13. The high pressure under which the mints had to work to cope with the demand for new coinage necessitated increased expenditure on temporary establishment and overtime pay. The expenditure on salaries and establishments, of the two mints compares as follows with that incurred during 1915-16 :—

	CALCUTTA MINT.			BOMBAY MINT.			BOTH MINTS.
	1915-16.	1916-17.	Increase + or decrease— in 1916-17.	1915-16.	1916-17.	Increase + or decrease— in 1916-17.	1915-16.	1916-17.	Increase + or decrease— in 1916-17.

TOTAL	3,47,208	4,58,582	+ 1,11,374	3,20,052	4,58,460	+ 1,38,408	6,67,260	9,17,042	+ 2,49,782

Munitions Work.

14. For the greater part of the year under review, both mints were engaged in turning out copper bands for shells, the building and repair of ambulance bodies for motor cars and in supplying other miscellaneous requirements for the Engineer Stores and the Supply and Transport Corps.

Miscellaneous Work.

15. Other miscellaneous work undertaken at the mints consisted of the supply of medals, dies, etc., for the Army Department and for schools, colleges and other public institutions, the manufacture and adjustment of scales and weights and miscellaneous supplies and repairs undertaken for Government Departments and the public.

16. The receipts on account of miscellaneous work done in the two mints and the cost were as follows :—

Year.	CALCUTTA MINT.			BOMBAY MINT.			BOTH MINTS.
	Cost of work done.	Amount realised.	Profit.	Cost of work done.	Amount realised.	Profit.	Cost of work done.	Amount realised.	Profit.

The Bombay figures include a sum of Rs. 15,916 on account of melting fees on the Indian mines and other gold deposited at the Mint.

Counterfeit Coins.

17. Treasuries.—The number of counterfeit silver coins of the several denominations cut at the Indian Treasuries during 1916-17 compares as follows with the figures of the previous year :—

	Rs.	½ Rs.	¼ Rs.	⅛ Rs.	TOTAL.
1915-16 . . .	127,233	6,892	9,222	5,920	149,267
1916-17 . . .	117,091	5,937	7,956	5,343	136,327

18. Mints.—Counterfeit silver coins numbering 10,850 pieces were received at the two mints during the year against 10,954 pieces in the preceding year. The details for the two years are given in the statement below :—

The coins received, with few exceptions were palpable counterfeits of low touch silver or base metals.

Offences against coinage.

19. The following table compares the number of cases of offences against coinage brought to trial during the calendar year 1916 with the corresponding figures of the previous year. There was a substantial decrease both in the number of cases brought to trial and in the number of persons convicted, chiefly noticeable in Madras, Bengal and Assam.

II.—Working of the Assay Offices.

Number of assays.

19. The following statement shows the number of gold and silver assays made in 1916-17 and the previous year :—

YEAR.	CALCUTTA ASSAY OFFICE.		BOMBAY ASSAY OFFICE.
	Gold.	Silver.	Gold.	Silver.
1915-16 . . . . .	700	7,301	5,857	5,150
1916-17 . . . . .	1,580	49,899	8,439	58,361

The number of gold assays carried out at the Bombay Assay Office constitutes a record figure being  $1\frac{1}{2}$  times as many as in any previous year. This increase mostly represents assays of private gold. Of the total of 8,439, only 3,483 assays were done for the Mint, chiefly in connection with the Indian Mines gold and the coinage for the Egyptian Government. The increase in the number of silver assays at both Mints was due to the large amount of silver coinage executed during the year.

20. The average fineness per mille of Silver meltings for British India Government Coinage during the year was as follows :—

	Calcutta.	Bombay.
Rupees . . . . .	916.121	915.949
Half-rupees . . . . .	916.182	...
Quarter-rupees . . . . .	915.723	...
Eighth-rupees . . . . .	915.719	...

Gold in Silver Coins.

21. The average of gold found by monthly parting assays in the silver pyx coin in the two Mints is shown below :—

	Calcutta.	Bombay.
Rupees . . . . .	0.321 per mille .	0.073 per mille .

4. Owing to the heavy demands for gold medals, miniatures and Indian Title Badges, the Mint was obliged to purchase under sanction of Government Rs. 17,407 worth of fine gold to replenish stock, and meet urgent requisitions.

5. There was no remittance of gold from Mint Balances to England during the year under review.

S I L V E R.

6. Receipts.—The receipts of silver into the Mint consisted of silver purchased by the Secretary of State for India, and by the Bank of Bengal, Calcutta, for Rupee coinage, and uncurrent silver coins from Treasuries for re-coinage into new coin.

7. The receipts from the Secretary of State consisted of Bar Silver, Straits Settlements Subsidiary coins, Mexican Dollars, Sycee Silver and cut Pesos.

8. As regards the local purchase of silver by the Bank of Bengal, the entire amount was in the form of Bar Silver.

9. The Standard value of the silver received from the Secretary of State, and the Bank of Bengal, amounted to Rs. 15,79,22,975 for which a purchase price of Rs. 12,19,73,001 was adjusted in the Mint Accounts.

10. Of the above receipts only 326.56 lakhs of tolas were premelted, the remainder being placed directly into alligation.

11. The nominal value of the uncurrent coin receipts amounted to Rs. 89,76,971 details of which are shown in the following table:—

Half Rupees . . . . .	6.21	64.1
Quarter Rupees . . . . .	51.54	63.9
Eighth Rupees . . . . .	41.99	58.9

These percentages are slightly lower than the average of previous years, due to urgent demands for rupees having alternated throughout the year with heavy demands for small coin, which made it difficult to maintain the rolls in perfect order. Further complications were, a temporary breakdown in the lapping and repairing machinery for the rolls and the failure of some die steel received from England, which produced a larger percentage of wasters than usual amongst the finished coin.

19. Pyx Trials.—The Assay Master's report on the Pyx coin sent to him for test show that the weight and fineness of the silver coinage was maintained at the prescribed standard.

20. Silver Operative Losses.—I append below the usual balance statement for the verification year from 1st March 1916 to 31st March 1917, showing the loss sustained in silver coinage operations :—

Balance in hand	409,699	Issues (b)	162,072,259
(a) Receipts.	167,759,716	Closing balance	5,907,430
	168,169,415	Operative loss (Government of India coins).	187,105
		Ditto, Ceylon coinage.	2,621
		Total	168,169,415

(a) Includes 870.0 standard tolas of refined silver of 1915-16 recovered in 1916-17.

(b) Includes 13626.5 standard tolas of refined silver of 1916-17 recovered in 1917-18.

21. As there were 1631.3 lakhs of standard tolas coined during the period, the rate of loss on the coinage works out to Rs. 114.69 per lakh or 15 per lakh in excess of the average of the two previous years when only uncurrent rupees were melted for coinage.

The rate of 115 per lakh is high, but this is explained to some extent by the fact that the outturn of good coins, on which the rate has been based, averaged 3.7 per cent. below the mean of the previous year, vide paragraph 17 of this Report and paragraph 8 of the Report for 1915-16. Had the same mean outturn rate of good coins been maintained this year the loss would have appeared as 108 instead of 115 per lakh.

22. As a loss of even 100 tolas per lakh appears high, experiments are again being conducted to see if it will not be possible to effect some reduction in the losses of the operative departments of the Silver Mint in future years.

It was found necessary to penalise the Bullion Keeper to the extent of Rs. 1,000 for an apparent loss of that amount of silver, which occurred in the Rolling and Cutting Departments of the Silver Mint in January 1917, and which has not yet been satisfactorily explained or accounted for. This amount of Rs. 1,000 will be made good by the Bullion Keeper and credited to Government in May 1917 under the Head XV.—Mint—"Miscellaneous Gains."

BRONZE AND COPPER.

23. Coinage.—The Mint executed the following bronze and copper coinages during the year :—

		Valued at.
		Rs.	A.
(1) Bronze pice, half pice and pices for the Government of India	29,510,400 pieces	2,65,900	0
(2) Bronze pennies and half pennies for the Government of Australia	8,364,000 „	4,10,250	0
(3) Bronze half milliemes of Egypt	4,000,000 „	30,406	4
(4) Copper half cents and quarter cents for the Straits Settlements	7,000,000 „	43,750	0
		48,874,400	7,50,306 4

24. On comparing this total with that of the previous year it will be found to exceed the latter total by 18,480,800 pieces.

25. Details of the coinage will be found in Statement II attached to this Report.

26. There were no purchases of new copper during the year but a purchase of tin was found necessary amounting to 273 maunds valued at Rs. 27,529.

27. Operative Losses.—The Bronze operative losses on coinages for the Governments of India, Australia and Egypt, written off the accounts, amounted to Mds. 37 as detailed below :—

Melting loss Mds.	33 @	74 per	100 Mds. of new coin
Coining loss „	4 „	09 „	„ „ „ „
TOTAL	Mds. 37 @	83 per	100 Mds. of new coin

28. The operative loss on the copper coinages for the Straits Settlements amounted to Mds. 20.

29. The operative loss on the coinages for the Australian, Egyptian and Straits Settlements coinages, is met from the charges for coinage recovered from these Governments.

MISCELLANEOUS.

30. The Mint was again kept busy with much miscellaneous work. This work, executed in the Die Engraving and Workshop Departments of the Mint, included the striking of medals, etc., for the Army Department, Colleges, and other private Institutions, and also the manufacture of scales and weights and other articles for the Currency Department and Treasuries, urgent demands for which had constantly to be met by the Mint.

31. A requisition for a new silver coinage by the Egyptian Government was fulfilled by the Bombay Mint, but all the necessary punches and matrices for the execution of the coinage was made in this Mint from designs furnished by the Egyptian Government. Unfortunately during the preparation of these matrices and punches, the health of the only European Engraver employed in the Mint entirely broke down, and he had to proceed at once on long leave, and the work for the Egyptian Government was only completed under great inconvenience.

32. The necessity for the early appointment of a second competent European Engraver and Die sinker, to either the Calcutta or Bombay Mints, is being brought to the notice of the Government of India.

33. Specimens of the new Egyptian coinage are shown in the frontispiece attached to this report, which also shows the new General Service badge, many specimens of which have been struck in this Mint.

34. The matrices and punches for the General Service badge were manufactured from a model supplied by the Army Department.

PLANT AND MACHINERY.

35. There were only minor additions or alterations to plant and machinery during the year under review.

36. Owing to continuous work, and to the constant vibration to which the galls of the Silver Stamping Department were subjected, there stability gave considerable cause for anxiety. The matter is now in the hands of the Public Works Department, but until this department has completed the necessary repairs there will be a slight diminution in the aggregate outturn from the Silver Mint presses.

37. The supply pipe from the Silver Mint tank to the Power House condenser has been realigned and relayed at a cost of Rs. 7,437. This alteration has effected a reduction in the temperature of the water passing into the condenser and should generally tend to reduce costs in the Power Station.

38. The following figures show the cost of working the Power Station during the financial year under report :—

B. T. units generated . . . . .	1,012,644
Fuel Establishment and Stores . . . . .	Rs. 49,280
Depreciation at 5 % on plant and 3 % on building and provision for pensions . . . . .	„ 26,280
The cost per unit works out as follows :—
Fuel, Establishment and stores . . . . .	9.3 pies
Depreciation, Interest and Pensions . . . . .	4.9 „
Total cost per unit . . . . .	14.2 pies or 1 anna 2 pies against 2.351 annas last year ; this considerable reduction in cost is due simply to a heavy and regular demand for power.

MUNITION.

39. Munition work continued throughout the year, the quantity of driving bands for shells manufactured being only a degree less than the amount turned out during the year 1915-16.

40. In August 1916 instructions were received that shell manufacture by private firms should cease, but the Mint continued to supply driving bands to the Gun and Shell Factory at Cossipore on requisitions.

41. The weight of copper lost in the manufacture of munitions was Mds. 323 on Mds. 7,553 of metal operated on or at the rate of 4.2 Mds. per 100 Mds.

42. During the year some of the machines lent to the Mint for munition work were returned to the owners as they were no longer required, but the greater portion of the borrowed machinery has been retained and is in regular use.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE.

43. Charges Levied.—The seigniorage on silver purchased for coinage amounted to Rs. 31,58,459. The Revenue under the Head of account was further augmented by Rs. 5,108, being the value of assay fees realised through the Assay Office. There were also premelting fees totalling Rs. 19,015.

44. Gain on Recoinage.—The Assay Benefit, representing the difference between the fineness of the silver as invoiced and its fineness when taken into operation, amounted to Rs. 64,627. The gain by over standard value of uncurrent silver coins withdrawn from circulation is Rs. 2,837 against Rs. 3,922 last year.

45. Cash and Transfer Receipts.—The Receipts amounted to Rs. 1,84,704 as compared with Rs. 83,115 in the previous year, the increase is chiefly due to the receipts on account of charges for Colonial coinages.

46. Operative Losses.—These items of expenditure are dealt with in paras. 20 and 21 of this Report.

47. Loss on Recoinage.—The loss under this Head of account amounts to Rs. 2,02,880 against Rs. 2,29,380 in the previous year. The decrease is due to the gradual decline in the receipts of uncurrent silver coins.

48. Copper used as alloy.—The value of copper used for alloying silver to the standard of fineness necessary for coinage, amounted to Rs. 89,751 as compared with Rs. 15, in the previous year. The increase is due to the heavy coinage from purchased silver.

49. Copper and other Metals used for Contingent purposes.—The expenditure amounted to Rs. 4,642, as compared with Rs. 1,551, in the previous year. The increase is due to additional miscellaneous work undertaken during the year under report.

50. Salaries and Establishment.—The expenditure under this head of Account was Rs. 4,58,582, as compared with Rs. 3,47,208, in the previous year. The increase is due to the heavy pressure of work which necessitated the Extra Establishment being greatly augmented and to payment of allowances for practically continuous overtime throughout the year.

51. English and Local Stores.—The total expenditure amounted to Rs. 3,27,601, against Rs. 1,39,775, in the previous year. The increase was due to the heavy coinage and munition work and also to some extent to the high price of materials prevalent. The items showing the greatest increase are "English Stores" and "Coke and Coal."

The annual verification of Europe Stores Balances was carried out during April and May 1916. The surpluses and deficiencies were investigated and adjusted in the accounts.

52. Contingent and Transfer Charges.—This expenditure amounted to Rs. 64,476.

53. Pro forma Receipts and Charges.—The Receipts amounted to Rs. 65,353 and represent a credit at rates laid down in Finance Department letter No. 1966-F., dated 17th December 1914. The charges amounted to Rs. 3,78,064 and includes Rs. 3,46,819 the interest at  $3\frac{1}{2}$ — on the Bullion, Store Balances and Capital Account.

54. The re-assessment of the Mint Buildings and Land has resulted in a credit in the Capital Account of Rs. 13,19,220, under "Land" and a Depreciation of Rs. 8,40,997, under "Buildings." The valuation of the Mint Buildings and Land as it now stands, is the same as that shown on the Books of the Public Works Department on 31st March 1917.

55. Balances Sunk in the Mint.—The daily average Silver Balance, excluding silver held on behalf of the Currency Department, amounted to Rs. 19,86,695. The balances reached a maximum value of Rs. 30,03,587, on 11th September 1916, after having declined to a minimum value of Rs. 4,93,566 on 25th May 1916.

COUNTERFEIT COINS.

56. During the course of examination of uncurrent silver coins from Treasuries the Mint eliminated during the year counterfeit Rs. 1,954, half Rs. 82, quarter Rs. 455 and one-eighth Rs. 188.

57. A number of counterfeit coins, the majority of which were obviously base coins, were received as usual from Treasuries and other offices for disposal. Details will be found in Statement IV.

OFFENCES AGAINST COINAGE.

58. The usual statement of offences against the coinage is appended to this Report. The total number of cases brought to trial in which convictions were obtained during the calendar year 1916 was less than in the year 1915. The ratio between the number of persons brought to trial and convicted was 61.9 against 54.8 of last year.

GENERAL.

59. Throughout the year, and more especially during periods when the coinage pressure was most severe, it was noticeable that the outturn capacity of the Melting Department was not on the same level as that of the other departments of the Mint.

60. More furnaces are evidently required in this department of the Mint, but their construction will necessitate an extension of the present building.

61. There is also no proper refinery in the Mint, and the method of dealing with the Mint sweepings is both primitive and inadequate. It will, however, be difficult to improve matters until the buildings, which comprise the Silver Melting Department, are extended.

62. To relieve the pressure on the two mechanical concentrators employed in the Mint, which separate out and then collect the silver particles from the Mint refuse after grinding, a simple form of concentrator was built as described on page 110 of the 45th Annual Report of the Royal Mint for the year 1914, and from plans very kindly supplied by the Melbourne Mint. This simple form of concentrator proved very useful and was of considerable assistance on relieving the pressure on the two existing and comparatively expensive and complicated machines.

63. In conjunction with the Public Works authorities, steps were taken during the year to realign and re-lay some most objectionable drains within the Mint boundaries. These steps were most successful and have given considerable relief to the Mint staff and employés generally.

64. In October 1916 Mr. W. G. Forbes, Head Engineer retired after a total of 36 years' service in the Mint and was succeeded by Mr. H. C. Clark, 1st Grade Engineer of the Bombay Mint, under the terms of Finance Department letter No. 39-F. E., dated 13th January 1916.

65. Mr. E. W. Jewett, 1st Assistant to Mint Master, retired in April 1916 on account of ill-health, and the announcement of his death in England, in February 1917, was received in the Mint with great regret.

66. Mr. T. O. Pell, Accountant, obtained a commission in the I.A.R.O. during the year, and was placed on deputation in the Military Department from 10th March 1917.

7. Silver operative losses.—The silver operative losses are detailed below :—

Table A.

	Rs.	A.	P.		Rs.	A.	P.
Opening Balance . . . . .	11,02,811	11	8	Issues . . . . .	16,73,83,804	13	6
Receipts . . . . .	17,83,16,995	12	0	Closing Balance . . . . .	1,19,17,163	3	8
Refined silver of 1915-16 re-covered in 1916-17 . . . . .	729	0	0	Refined silver of 1916-17 re-covered in 1917-18 . . . . .	57,307	0	0
				Operative loss for the year . . . . .	62,261	6	6
	17,94,20,536	7	8		17,94,20,536	7	8

This gives a rate of loss of 38·24 tolas per lakh of standard tolas issued or a percentage loss of 0·3825 per cent.

In this table the item Receipts is swollen by “Assay Benefit” and “Gain by overstandard value of uncurrent coin withdrawn from circulation.” It consequently does not show the real loss incurred by Government owing to the operations of minting. To exhibit exactly this real loss Table B has been prepared which shows under “Receipts” the actual number of standard tolas paid for by Government either in the form of new silver or by withdrawals of uncurrent coin which latter, for the purpose of this table, are valued at Re. 1 per tola of actual weight as representing the conversion value of the silver contained therein at the moment of withdrawal.

	Rs.	A.	P.		Rs.	A.	P.
Opening Balance . . . . .	11,02,811	11	8	Issues . . . . .	16,73,83,804	13	6
Receipts . . . . .	17,82,80,487	12	0	Closing Balance . . . . .	1,19,17,163	3	8
Refined silver of 1915-16 recovered in 1916-17 . . . . .	729	0	0	Refined silver of 1916-17 recovered in 1917-18 . . . . .	57,307	0	0
				Operative Loss . . . . .	25,753	6	6
	17,93,81,028	7	8		17,93,84,028	7	8

This gives a rate of loss of 15·82 tolas per lakh of standard tolas issued or a loss of 0·01582 per cent.

The losses under both tables A and B are at a very considerably lower rate than in previous years and are to be accounted for by the great amount of silver dealt with. The sycee especially contributes to this gain as it was found practicable to assume for this form of silver a fineness of 988 throughout after premelting while the assay reports assigned to it a mean fineness of some 0·5 per mille less. The Mexican Dollars also were found as usual to be considerably higher than the fineness at which they were purchased.

NICKEL.

8. The number of nickel one anna pieces coined during the year was 39,087,087 of the value of Rs. 24,42,943, being Rs. 19,63,553 in excess of last year's outturn. Rs. 34,96,500 worth were taken over by the Reserve Treasury, Bombay.

10,5,2 and 1 millieme pieces, all of cupro nickel, were also minted on behalf of the Egyptian Government. 11,702, 143 of these, worth Rs. 5,92,252 taking 1,000 milliemmes to be the equivalent of R15-6-0 were coined and R5,68,875 issued up to 31st March 1917. The total operative loss written off during the year amounted to 33½ maunds, giving a percentage of 6226 maund per 100 maunds of metal coined.

MISCELLANEOUS.

9. War work.—For the greater part of the year the Mint continued with the manufacture of copper driving bands for shells and throughout the year was kept busy on the building of ambulance bodies for motor cars and to a lesser extent on their repairs and other miscellaneous requirements for the Engineer Stores and the Supply and Transport Corps.

10. Gold work.—Owing to the release by Government in January of this year of the gold held by the Mint on behalf of the Bank of England, large quantities of gold after refining in the bazaar were retendered for assay. To enable the Assay Department to cope with the demands of the Public, the Mint, in addition to the melting of the gold received fortnightly from the Indian Mines, undertook to melt for the Assay Department quantities of gold in excess of the capacity of the melting furnaces in the Assay Department. Cash receipts from this source amounted to R5,954.

11. Miscellaneous work.—This included the usual supply of dies, medals, etc., the manufacture and adjustment of scales and weights and miscellaneous supplies and repairs undertaken for Government Departments and the public, the profit made being Rs. 34,116 of which a considerable amount was due to war work, other than the manufacture of copper bands on which no profit was made.

12. Treasure trove coins.—During the year 120 gold and 116 treasure trove silver coins were received from the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. Coins of the metal value of Rs. 292 were sold during the year.

13. Mint working standards.—The weights in all the Departments were periodically compared with the standards and any differences found carefully adjusted.

14. Visitors.—The Mint was open to the public twice a week throughout the year. Several Indian Chiefs and noblemen were among the visitors.

15. Analysis of revenue and expenditure.—The heads directly affected by the continuous and heavy work during the year and under which the receipts and expenditure are consequently higher than usual are, "Percentage on New Rupee Coinage," "Gain by understandard weight and fineness of new coin issued," and "Cash Receipts" on the revenue side and "Operative losses," "Copper used for alloy," "Extra establishment and overtime" and "Local and English Stores" on the expenditure side.

In addition to these the following are the chief items calling for notice :—

“ Premelting Fees ”—The large credits on this account are chiefly due to the abnormal amount of sycee silver premelted during the year.

Receipts under “ Seigniorage and other charges,” owing to the coinages for the Straits and Egyptian Government.

The large increase in the Assay Office Melting and Assay Fees; as the result of the gold sold by Government coming back for assay after refining.

The reduced figure under “ Transfer Receipts ” is due to the elimination of receipts exceeding Rs. 1,15,000 for War work, credit for which has been taken this year by deduction from the charges under “ Establishment,” “ Contingencies ” and “ Stores.”

16. Resume of Revenue and Expenditure.—The result of the transactions of the year as summarised in Statement No. 1 shows a gain of Rs. 22,83,294 on the year's operations.

17. Balances sunk in the Mint.—The balances of silver bullion belonging to Government valued at one rupee per tola of standard fineness, stood at the beginning of the year at Rs. 7,69,288 and at its close Rs. 33,243. The average daily balance was Rs. 6,71,194. The minimum daily balance was Rs. 33,243 on the 31st March 1917 and the maximum was Rs. 16,59,690 from the 25th to the 29th October 1916.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE COINAGE.

18. Return of Counterfeit Coins.—The usual return of counterfeit coins is appended to this Report :—

H. M.'s MINT;

G. H. WILLIS, Major, R. E.,

REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE BOMBAY ASSAY OFFICE.

No. 49, dated Bombay, the 26th May 1917.

From—Lt.-Colonel J. LLOYD JONES, I.M.S., Assay Master, Bombay,

To—The Controller of Currency, Calcutta.

I have the honour to submit the following report on the operations of the Assay Department, Bombay, for the official year 1916-1917.

2. Number and description of assays.—The number of assays during the year amounted to 67,065 as against 11,114 in the previous financial year.

GOLD.
Assays on gold from all sources . . . . .	7,965	8,439
Check assays on fine gold . . . . .	474
SILVER.
Assays on silver received for coinage . . . . .	8,376	58,361

Assays on various metals and ores . . . . .	176
Do. on Mint dresses . . . . .	9
Total for the year . . . . .	...	67,065

3. Gold and silver assays.—The total number of gold assays from all sources during the year was 8,439 as against 5,857 in the previous year. Of these 3,483 assays were done for the Mint. The Mint assays chiefly represent work for the Mysore Mines and on gold from South Africa, a small amount being done in connection with the Egyptian coinage.

The gold assays constitute a record for this Office, and were nearly 3,000 more than in any previous year.

The total number of silver assays from all sources was 58,361 as against 5,150 in the previous year. Of these 52,850 were done for the Mint.

The silver assays per lakh of coins had to be reduced to former conditions in September 1916, in order to be able to cope with the work. In only one year previously did the number of assays approximate that of this year.

4. Melting for silver standard coinage.—Silver meltings for rupees were assayed during the whole of the year; for 20 Cents in the months of May and June 1916 and March 1917; for 10 Cents, in the month of September 1916 and from November 1916 to February 1917; for 20 Piastres from October 1916 to February 1917; for 10 Piastres from August 1916 to March 1917; for 5 Piastres from July to November 1916 and in the months of January and February 1917; for 2 Piastres from September to November 1916.

The average fineness of the silver meltings was :—

5. Gold in silver coinage.—The average proportion of gold found by monthly parting assays in the silver pyx coins was :—

For Rupees	.073	per mille.
„ Half Rupees	.080	„ „
„ 20 Cents	.031	„ „
„ 10 Cents	.045	„ „
„ 20 Piastres	.057	„ „
„ 10 Piastres	.065	„ „
„ 5 Piastres	.048	„ „
„ 2 Piastres	.083	„ „

The coinage of the year was computed to contain 4,505 Troy ounces of gold of the value of £19,101-4s-0d; a comparatively small item, considering the very large amount of silver coinage.

6. Pyx trials : Rupees : weight.—The trials of these coins for weight amounted to 1,467, the total number weighed being 14,670. 10 coins were weighed in each delivery. The average weight of all was 180.003 grains; the lightest and heaviest coins weighed were respectively 179.10 and 180.90 grains.

Fineness.—The trials for fineness were 1,467.

9,595 coins were assayed singly; from May to September 1916, there were 448 deliveries and 10 coins were assayed singly in each delivery; and from 9th September 1916 to 31st March 1917 there were 1,019 deliveries and 5 coins were assayed singly in each delivery. Of the coins assayed singly, the extreme variations in fineness ranged from 914.6 to 918.6 and the average fineness of 9,575 coins was 916.564 per mille. In four trials only were single coins found to be outside remedy; the fresh pyxes called for in these cases disclosed however no coin beyond remedy.

The 29,340 coins assayed in groups of 20 after melting gave an average fineness of 916.578, the lowest and highest figures obtained for any melting of coins being respectively 915.8 and 917.3 per mille.

7. Half Rupees : weight.—The trials of these coins for weight amounted to 58, the total number weighed being 580. 10 coins were weighed in each delivery. The average weight of all was 90.017 grains; the lightest and heaviest coins weighed respectively 89.60 and 90.40 grains.

Fineness.—The trials for fineness were 58 in number.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri asked :—

1. "(a) Is Government aware that certain persons in high official authority have deprecated the scheme of post-war reforms adopted by the Indian National Congress and the All India Moslem League in last December as impracticable, extravagant and greatly exceeding the changes likely to be granted by the authorities?"

Constitutional reforms in India.

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a report that Lord Islington, in his private capacity and not as Under Secretary of State for India, recently outlined before a meeting of Oxford students the constitutional changes which, in his opinion, were suitable for India?

(c) Is it a fact that both the late and the present Secretary of State for India have declared in Parliament that a statement may soon be expected on the subject of constitutional reforms in India?

(d) Will the Government of India be pleased to consider the desirability of—

(i) obtaining the consent of the Imperial authorities in England to the publication in this country of the scheme of reforms, that is understood to be under discussion? and

(ii) giving the people of India an assurance that they will be afforded full opportunities of discussing the proposed reforms and making representations to the authorities on them before a final decision is taken?"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Sir William Vincent; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma; Sir C. Sankaran Nair; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda; Mr. R. A. Mant.] [21ST SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

“(a) and (b) The answer is in the affirmative.

(c) and (d) The attention of the Hon'ble Member is drawn to the recent announcement by the Secretary of State.”

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

Educational institutions.

2. “(a) Have Government under consideration any practical measures for starting, strengthening and equipping agricultural, engineering, commercial and technological educational institutions, with a view to minimising the dependence of this country on Europe?

(b) If so, have any estimates been prepared and will Government be pleased to state the initial and the recurring cost of such measures?”

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

“The Government of India have recently received proposals for :—

(a) The improvement of the Bihar School of Engineering at a capital cost of about Rs. 3,70,000 and an additional recurring cost of about Rs. 58,000 a year.

(b) The conversion of the existing Survey School at Cuttack into a school of engineering at a capital cost of about Rs. 1,40,000, of which Rs. 20,000 will be met by private subscription, and an additional recurring cost of about Rs. 12,000 a year.

(c) The re-organization of the staff of the School of Engineering at Insein at an additional recurring cost of about Rs. 26,000 a year, and

(d) The creation of an appointment in the Indian Educational Service for a Principal of the Government Commercial Institute at Calcutta, in lieu of the existing post, at an additional recurring cost of about Rs. 7,000 a year.

Consideration of (a) and (b) has been postponed pending receipt of the report of the Public Works Re-organization Committee and (d) is awaiting consideration of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission. The remaining proposal has only recently been received and the action to be taken is at present under consideration.

So far as institutions for the teaching of agriculture and forestry are concerned the attention of the Hon'ble Member is invited to the reply given to him by the Hon'ble Member for Revenue and Agriculture to a similar question at the meeting of Council held on the 27th September 1916. The matter is still under consideration and no estimates of cost have yet been prepared.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

Appointment of a Committee to examine long stapled cotton.

3. “(a) Has any Committee been appointed to examine the question of the cultivation of long stapled cotton and report thereon?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to mention the personnel of the Committee?”

The Hon'ble Mr. R. A. Mant replied :—

“As I said in reply to a question by the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi two days ago it has been decided to appoint a Committee in the coming cold weather to examine the possibility of extending the cultivation of long stapled cotton in India. The Government are not at present in a position to state the personnel of the Committee but hope to make an announcement on the subject very shortly.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis ; Sir William Vincent ; Mr. R. A. Mant.]The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked :—

4. “(a) Has the experiment of releasing juvenile prisoners conditionally for work with selected firms been tried with conspicuous success in the Punjab. Juvenile prisoners.”

(b) Is it a fact that out of 107 boys conditionally released only one misbehaved and two escaped.

(c) If so, will Government be pleased to issue instructions to Local Governments to try the scheme experimentally in other Provinces wherever possible and to report results to the Supreme Government.”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

“(a) Yes.

• (b) It appears from the Punjab Jails Administration Report for 1916, that 107 juvenile offenders were conditionally released during that year to the Dane-pur Settlement managed by the Salvation Army at Lahore, and that of these, as the Hon'ble Member says, one misbehaved himself and two escaped from the Settlement. But these 107 boys released to the Salvation Army are distinct from the juvenile prisoners released to selected firms.

(c) There are other Provinces in which experiments are being made on somewhat similar lines. The subject of the treatment of juvenile offenders is one of the most important of those which will come before the projected Jails Committee after the war and will, no doubt, be exhaustively discussed by that body. In view of this, and of the fact that the experiment may not be suited to local conditions in all Provinces, the Government of India do not consider it necessary to issue instructions in the sense suggested by the Hon'ble Member, but they will send a copy of this question and of this answer to Local Governments.

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked :—

5. “(a) Did the Government of the Central Provinces send for approval to the Government of India certain proposals with a view to enable Settlement Officers to consult Malguzars and tenants when rents are fixed by Settlement Officers at the time of settlement? Fixing of rents by Settlement Officers.”

(b) Is it not the fact :—

(i) that Malguzars have the great responsibility of realizing rents fixed by Settlement Officers in the fixation of which they have no voice?

(ii) that in some places where such rents were fixed by the Settlement Officer, complaints were made that rents were heavy and could not be easily realised?

(iii) that on such representations being made in certain parts of the Central Provinces, the Local Government was pleased to inquire and reduce the rents in response to complaints or representations made by the people or in the Press?

(c) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to state what orders (if any) were passed on the proposals made by the Central Provinces Government.

(d) If these proposals have not been approved and sanctioned, will Government be pleased to state the reasons which led them to disapprove of the same and will they be pleased to reconsider the proposals in consultation with the official and non-official representatives from the Central Provinces and Orissa where the system of fixing rents by Settlement Officers obtains?”

The Hon'ble R. A. Mant replied :—

“The answer to part (a) of the question is in the affirmative. The proposals referred to were returned to the Chief Commissioner for further consideration, and he has since informed the Government of India that he has decided not to proceed with his original proposals. If further information on the subject is desired, it should be asked for in the Local Council.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS; THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

[Captain Ajab Khan; His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [21ST SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan, Sardar Bahadur, asked :—

Civil Sub-Assistant surgeons on military duty.

6. “(a) Is it a fact that Civil Sub-Assistant Surgeons who volunteered for military duty in India and cannot revert to civil duty under the existing rules have suffered loss of their private practice and other facilities enjoyed by them while on civil duty?”

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what compensation and prospects are given to them in lieu of such loss?”

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

“In respect of both questions the reply is as follows :—

Civil Sub-Assistant Surgeons are liable to be deputed for ordinary military duty in India during their first five years' service under the terms of their engagement. Men so deputed are not paid compensation to cover any loss of private practice that may be involved in fulfilling the terms of contract. They receive exactly the same pay as their confreres of corresponding grade in the military sub-assistant surgeon branch and benefit substantially to the extent shown below :—

Maximum pay in civil.			Pay in military.
Rs.			Rs.
30	...	...	...	60
45	...	...	...	75
55	}	...	...	95
100	...	...	...	125

Those Civil Sub-Assistant Surgeons who volunteer for general service in or out of India receive their full civil rates of pay, in addition to the full military rates of pay of their grade, plus a special allowance which varies from Rs. 50 to Rs. 100 per mensem according to their grade. These rates, especially those granted for general service, are considered very liberal and should go far to compensate for loss of private practice.”

THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—“Sir, I beg leave to present the final report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Transfer of Property Act. I may, with your permission, say, Sir, that I propose to move at the next meeting of the Council that the Bill should be passed into law.”

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—“ Sir, I beg to move that :—

‘ This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Government of India should move the Secretary of State to arrange that the examination for the Indian Civil Service should henceforth be held simultaneously in India and in England, successful candidates being classified in one list according to merit.’

“ As we all know, Sir, this question is an old one. In 1793 there was the East India Company Act passed under which appointments under the East India Company were limited to certain members who had the sole right of conferring employment in the higher civil appointments in the service of the Company. But when the Charter Act of 1833 came to be framed, a clause was introduced recognising the natural right of Indians to employment in the higher services of their country. That clause was described by Macaulay as ‘ that wise, that benevolent, that noble clause.’ It recognised that though India had come under the dominion of England, it was the natural birth-right of Indians, that if they were qualified by education and character they should be employed in all the higher offices under the Crown. In the course of the discussion that arose on the Bill which subsequently became law, many excellent sentiments were expressed ; but I will invite the attention of the Council to only one utterance, viz., that by Sir Charles Grant in which he said :—

‘ If one circumstance more than another could give me satisfaction, it was that the main principle of this Bill had the approbation of the House and that the House was now legislating for India and the peoples of India on the great and just principle that in doing so the interests of the people of India should be principally consulted and that the other interests of wealth, of commerce and of revenue should depend upon the legislature promoting the welfare and prosperity of that great Empire which Providence has placed in our hands.’

“ When this great and first principle was recognised that the interest of the people of India should be principally consulted in all arrangements for the administration of this country, it was to be hoped that the employment of Indians in the higher services would come about, but not a single Indian had been appointed. When in 1853, a renewal of the Charter of the Company came to be discussed in Parliament Mr. Bright, Lord Stanley and other gentlemen drew prominent attention to the fact, and it was hoped some remedy would be forthcoming ; it was not however until 1854, that the system of competitive examinations was introduced for the Civil Service. Haileybury College was abolished in 1855, competitive examinations were held in 1855 ; Indians were still not able to compete. After the Mutiny, after the Crown took the direct control of the Government of India, the pledge of 1833 was repeated and reaffirmed by the Proclamation of the Queen and in the House of Commons, that Indian subjects of Her Majesty would be entitled to hold any post if they were qualified ; we all know the gracious words of the Proclamation on which I need not dwell. It was hoped after the proclamation that at any rate the claims of Indians would not be ignored but nothing came of it. In 1860, a Committee was appointed by the Secretary of State to suggest the best means for admitting Indians into the service. The Committee considered two proposals. The first was to allot a certain portion of the total number of posts declared in each year to be competed for by Indians in India, and the second was to hold simultaneously two examinations for the Indian Civil Service, one in India and one in England, candidates sitting for either examination having to answer the same papers to be examined by the same examiners, and to be classified in one list in order of merit. It is important to draw attention to the Report of this Committee which consisted of Sir J. Willoughby, Mr. Mangles, Mr. Arbuthnot, Mr. Macnaghten and Sir E. Perry, all of whom were well acquainted with India. They reported as follows :—

‘Two modes have been suggested by which the object in view might be attained. The first is by allotting a certain portion of the total number of appointments declared in each year to be competed for in India by Natives, and by all other natural-born subjects of His Majesty, resident in India. The second is to hold simultaneously two examinations, one in England and one in India both being, as far as practicable, identical in their nature and those who compete in both countries being finally classified in one list, according to merit, by the Civil Service Commissioners. The Committee have no hesitation in giving the preference to the second scheme as being the fairest, and the most in accordance with the principles of a general competition for a common object. In order to aid them in carrying out a scheme of this nature, the Committee have consulted the Civil Service Commissioners. The Civil Service Commissioners do not anticipate much difficulty in arranging for this.’

“This Report was unfortunately not acted upon; it was not even made public so far as I am aware, until 1876. In the meantime, in 1867, Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji took up the question, and with the help of the East India Association agitated the question in Parliament. Mr. Fawcett moved a Resolution in the House of Commons urging that examinations should be held simultaneously in London, in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay. He urged that unless this was done the people of India would not have a fair chance of competing for these appointments; that if some scheme like that he urged was not carried out the promise held out in the Charter Act of 1833, and in the Proclamation of 1858, would not be faithfully fulfilled.

‘It was no doubt true,’ said he, ‘that the natives of India might compete in these examinations, but as they could only do so by coming to London, at great expense, and then might be unsuccessful, to say that the examinations were practically open to them was an idle mockery.’

“His proposal was that there should be examinations at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay; there should be the same papers and the same tests as in London, and that the successful candidates, whether English or native, should spend two years in England. There would be no difficulty in carrying out the plan for the examination papers might be sent under seal to India, and the examination being fixed for the same day as in London, the candidate’s papers might be sent to England under seal and inspected by the same examiners, the name of the successful candidates at all four examinations being arranged in the order of merit.

“The then Secretary of State expressed sympathy with the object of the Resolution, as has often been done in the case of questions affecting Indians, but he did not approve of the idea of holding simultaneous examinations; he stated that he was going to introduce a Bill by which a certain number of posts would be secured to Indians. Mr. Fawcett pointed out that that would not satisfy the aspirations of Indians and would not do full justice to them, but he agreed that the course proposed might be tried and withdrew his Resolution. After that the Act of 1870 was passed, which empowered the Government of India to frame rules to admit Indians to a certain number of appointments in the Civil Service; that proved unsatisfactory. In 1886 the Public Services Commission was appointed, and it went into the question of simultaneous examinations. A lot of evidence was given in favour of such examinations being held in India and in England, but the Commission reported against it. In 1893, in co-operation with Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, who was then a member of the House of Commons, Mr. Herbert Paul brought forward a motion urging the holding of simultaneous examinations in England and India. That Resolution was carried, but unfortunately the Secretary of State was not in sympathy with it. He sent it to the Government of India. Excepting the Government of Madras, all Local Governments reported against it, and the Government of India did not give effect to it.

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS, FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

" Thus, though we have the Statute of 1833 in our favour, though we have the Proclamation of 1858 in our favour, though the Committee appointed by the Secretary of State reported in favour of simultaneous examinations, and though the House of Commons resolved in 1893, that such examinations should be held in the two countries, the proposal has never yet been accepted by the Government. The question of the larger employment of Indians was taken up in 1911, in this Council by my friend Mr. Subba Rao, who moved a Resolution on the subject. In consequence of that the Royal Commission on the Public Services was appointed in 1912. Unfortunately the Commission have reported against it and one more unfortunate circumstance to be mentioned in this connection is that while before the Commission of 1886, a number of European gentlemen, forty-nine of them, deposed in favour of simultaneous examinations, before the Commission of 1913, no European witness except one spoke in favour of it.

" What is worse, and has pained us most, is that a number of European witnesses, both official and non-official, seemed to delight in giving as bad a character to Indians as they could. The result is that the majority of the Commission have reported against the proposal. But, Sir, our conviction is that justice will not be done to the claims of Indians unless the examinations for the Civil Service are held simultaneously in India and in England. The result of the examinations being held only in England has been that up to 1910, only 80 Indians had succeeded in entering the service by the door of examination as against over 2,600 Europeans. And out of 1,478 officers, who on the 1st April 1917, held posts ordinarily reserved for the members of the Indian Civil Service, including 72 Statutory Civilians and officers of the Provincial Civil Service holding listed posts only 146 or about 10 per cent appeared to be statutory natives of India. Surely this is not a state of things, which is consistent with or carries out the spirit of the Act of 1833, or the proclamation of 1858. I think it was in the debate of 1853, that one speaker had asked how many Englishmen would send their sons to India to compete for the Civil Service Examination on the off-chance of getting admission into it. Speaking in London, about 1878, Mr. Bright said that to hold the examination in England alone and to tell the people of India that they had equal opportunities with Englishmen, was akin to telling them that they must be eight feet six inches in height before they could be admitted into the Civil Service. In view of all that has been said above, the question is whether this recommendation of the Commission is one which the Government ought to accept. I submit most respectfully that it ought not to.

" In addition to our natural claim to which I have already referred and which has been repeatedly supported by many high-minded Englishmen, we have now a different state of things. The Government of India as it is constituted at present has been described by a member of the Indian Civil Service in a manner which brings out the disadvantages of the present system in very clear words. Sir Frederick Lely wrote in 1906 as follows :—

' Perhaps the position may most vividly be brought home to our minds by imagining the same in England. Suppose that in England foreigners were ruling, say the Japanese, who committed the province to one of their statesmen who had never been in Europe before, and surrounded him with a group of men of his own race who got their knowledge of the country chiefly from books and papers at Whitehall, who for the most part could not talk the English language, whose unreserved intercourse with Englishmen was limited to a few Japanese speaking callers in London, and who, when not in London, divided their time between the Scotch Highlands and the Riviera. What sort of Government would it be? It might seem admirable to the people of Tokio but would it be to the men of Yorkshire and Cornwall?'

" I submit, Sir, that this is the result of practically refusing admission to His Majesty's Indian subjects into the Indian Civil Service. If the examination had been held in India, since 1855, I think it is not unreasonable to think that though our English fellow-subjects have very great advantages in the way of educational facilities, and facilities for coaching, and in the fact that the examination is held through their own mother tongue, I think it is not unreasonable to think that there would have been a far larger proportion of Indians in the Indian Civil Service than we have at present. When in 1833, the claims of Indians to the higher ranks of the services were recognised, education had made but little progress. The famous minute of Lord Macaulay had not been written, there were no colleges, no Universities and but a few schools. In spite of that fact the Government of the day recognised that it was only fair that those Indians who could show that by their education, integrity and character they were qualified for admission, ought to be admitted into the higher ranks of the services. Since that time we have had universities established in several parts of India and they have turned out thousands of graduates. They have competed very successfully with their English fellow-subjects in all walks of life to which they have been admitted. In the judicial line, Indian Judges have shown how high they stand both in point of character and ability; they have proved themselves to be the equals of their English brother Judges. In other directions also Indians have proved their capacity in high offices, under the British Government, in Native States, as heads of districts, as Commissioners, as members of Executive Councils, as Dewans of Indian States, those Indians who have had opportunities afforded to them or those who have been able to force admission into the Service, have shown that if they are given an equal chance they are able to render a very good account of themselves. All that we have asked for in this connection from the beginning is, not that we should be put on a favoured footing but that we should be put on a footing of equality. We say that, if two young men are to run a race, all fair rules of the game require that we should start both of them from the same centre, and not compel one to start several miles behind the other, and yet expect the man who started several miles behind the other to succeed in the competition. We want that Indian youths should be subjected to the same test to which English youths are subjected. We do not want any differentiation in that respect. What we do say is that if Englishmen are allowed to sit for the examination in their own country, Indians should also be allowed to sit in their country for the same examination. One might very well say that the more natural, the more reasonable, the more just course would be that examinations for admission into the Civil Services of India should be held in India alone, but the time for it is not yet. In view of the present circumstances of the country, remembering how we are situated at present, in view of the difficulties that have hitherto lain in our path, and of the desire we all have that we, Indian and European fellow-subjects, should move together in brotherly co-operation, and with as little dislocation as possible our prayer at present is, as it has been for the last fifty years, that the examination for admission into the Indian Civil Service should be held simultaneously in India and in England.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

“ Sir, the not holding of this examination in India has exposed us to great disadvantages, political, economic and administrative. The political disadvantages are obvious. Here we are discussing the question of self-Government, and of the larger admission of Indians into the higher services. We are told we have not held charge of high offices, we have not been dealing with large problems and it is not right that we should ask to be entrusted with these problems at once. Well, if we have been shut out from these advantages, from the exercise of these high functions, the fault is not ours. I submit, Sir, that it is an unreasonable proposition that because we have so long been kept out of these advantages, therefore we should be kept out of them in future.

“ I need not refer again to the remarks of Mr. Gokhale, to which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sarma referred yesterday in which he pointed out that the moral evil of the present system was even greater and more serious than the political and economic disadvantages. The people of this country desire that they should be able to feel that they stand on a footing of perfect equality with their fellow-subjects in England and the United Kingdom. That is practically denied to them by the refusal to hold the examinations simultaneously which leads to the inevitable result that but few can enter through the door in London.

“ So far as the economic evils are concerned, they were again and again pointed out by the late Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji. I do not want to detain the Council by dealing with them at length, but I will refer to a few facts to show how serious the economic evil is. According to a return presented to the House of Commons, in 1892, excluding the rank and file of the British Army, the total of the salaries, pensions and allowances received in 1889-90 by public servants and retired Government officials, drawing salaries of Rs. 1,000 and over, annually, amounted to about 18½ crores, while the real revenue was about 61½ Crores. Of this, only about 3 crores was received by 17,000 Indians, while the remaining 15½ crores went into the pockets of 28,000 Europeans and Eurasians. That the lot of Indians has not improved materially since then is evident as my friend Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru points out in his valuable pamphlet on the Public Services in India from the statistics published by the Government of India in 1912, which show that out of 5,390 posts to which monthly salaries of Rs. 500 and upwards were attached, no less than 83 per cent. were held by Europeans and Eurasians.

“ Long ago, Sir William Hunter pointed out, that the salaries paid in India are very high, that India cannot afford to pay at the high rate at which the services are remunerated at present. In his pamphlet ‘ England’s Work in India ’ he wrote :—

‘ The truth is that we have suddenly applied our own English ideas of what a good Government should do to an Asiatic country where the people pay not one-tenth per head of the English rate of taxation. I myself believe that if we are to give a really efficient administration to India, many services must be paid for at lower rates even than at present. For those rates are regulated in the higher branches of the administration by the cost of officers brought from England. You cannot work with imported labour as cheaply as you can with native labour, and I regard the more extended employment of the natives not only as an act of justice but as a financial necessity. .... The salaries of the coveted services are regulated, not by the rates for local labour, but by the cost of imported officials. If we are to govern the Indian people efficiently and cheaply, we must govern them by means of themselves and pay for the administration at the market rates for native labour.’

“ You must recognise the fact that if you want to carry on the administration of India efficiently and cheaply, you must employ a larger number of Indians than have been employed hitherto. So that from the economic point of view it is obviously necessary that a larger number of Indians should be admitted into the Civil Service. Then, Sir, there is the advantage of administrative experience which can only be acquired if Indians are admitted into the higher ranks of the service. Mr. Dadabhai summed up the whole situation in his own inimitable manner in a few words. He pleaded for a beginning for self-government being made by the institution of simultaneous examinations in India and in England, and he urged that that beginning will be the key, the most effective remedy for the chief economic and basic evils of the present system.

‘ A three-fold wrong is inflicted,’

‘ upon us, i.e., of depriving us of wealth, work and wisdom, of everything, in short, worth living for, and this beginning will begin to strike at the root of the muddle. The reform of the alteration of the services from European to Indian is the keynote of the whole.’

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS, FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

[21st SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

“Of course Mr. Dadabhoy did not mean that there should be an immediate or an early replacement of Europeans by Indians as a whole; what he urged was that a beginning should be made in order that Indians should be able to obtain an increasingly large share in the higher services of their country.

“This, Sir, was the state of affairs before the war. What is the position of affairs now? The war, as Mr. Lloyd George has said, has changed things enormously; as one of the members of the Commission has observed, centuries of progress have been effected by this war. Naturally in consequence of it, things have begun to be looked at from a changed angle of vision; and we have been looking forward that our claims, which are based on justice, based on right, claims which were solid and strong before the war and without any reference to the war, will now be regarded as much stronger by reason of the part which Indians have had the privilege of playing in this great world war. I would like to quote here a few remarks from a speech of the Marquis of Crewe. In his speech at the Guildhall in London he said:—

‘It is perhaps even more striking, certainly no less gratifying, that those representing the various races in India, races representing a civilisation of almost untold antiquity, races which have been remarkable in arms, and the science of government, that they should in so whole-hearted a manner rally round the British Government, most of all round the King-Emperor at such a moment as this and I am certain that the House will desire to express through those who are entitled to speak for it, its appreciation of their attitude and its recognition of the part they have played.’

“And Lord Haldane said:—

‘Indian soldiers are fighting for the liberties of humanity as much as we ourselves. India has freely given her lives and treasure in humanity’s great cause; hence things cannot be left as they are. We have been thrown together in this mighty struggle and have been made to realise our oneness, so producing relations between India and England which did not exist before.’

“Now, Sir, in view of this momentous event, I submit the problem should be looked at in a much more sympathetic spirit than it has been heretofore. Our claim to have simultaneous examinations for admission into the Indian Civil Service held in India as well as in England, was quite strong before the war, and without reference to the war; but the attitude of India during the war has given added strength to that claim. His Majesty’s Government have recently announced the goal of British policy in India. In that announcement we have been told that

‘The policy of His Majesty’s Government, with which the Government of India are in complete accord, is that of increasing the association of Indians in every branch of administration and the gradual development of self-governing institutions with a view to the progressive realisation of responsible government in India as an integral part of the British Empire.’

“His Excellency the Viceroy also in the memorable speech, to which it was our privilege to listen on the 5th of this month, told us that the increased association of Indians in the higher services was one of the matters which was close to his heart and to that of the Government.

“We also have the statement of Mr. Montagu in the speech which he delivered a short time before he was appointed as Secretary of State, and which he reaffirmed after he had been appointed Secretary of State, in which he pointed out how necessary it is that the Government of India should be radically altered. I will not take up the time of the Council by reading large extracts from that important speech, but I will draw attention to only one important passage in it, where he says—

‘Your executive system in India has broken down because it is not constituted for the complicated duties of modern government. But you cannot reorganise the Executive Government of India, remodel the Viceroyalty, and give the Executive Government more freedom from this House of Commons and the Secretary of State unless you make it more responsible to the people of India.’

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; The Vice-President.]

"Now that is the position, that the Executive Government has to be made more responsible to the people of India. With the altered state of things which the war has brought about, the recognition of the comradeship of Indians and Europeans, in arms, the recognition of the free contributions and the loyal services rendered during the war, and above all with a full recognition of the fact that the present system has outgrown itself and must be altered, so that the Government shall be made responsible to the people of India, we have to approach this problem for solution. And I submit, Sir, that of all the questions relating to Constitutional reforms there is none which is more important, which lies at the root of the problem, more than this question of instituting examinations for admission into the Civil Service simultaneously in India and in England.

"There is one other aspect of the question which I think I ought to ask the Council to bear in mind in this connection. Things have changed, they have changed greatly. The prayer for simple justice which we have gone on repeating, and, I say it with regret, repeating vainly for fifty years, cannot be disregarded. Indians feel that, in being excluded from the higher appointments of the services of their own country, they are being very unjustly dealt with. They find that the peoples of many other countries have made and are making great progress in all directions, that in many of them the systems of government have undergone a change to the great benefit of the people. They find that a new life has come over Japan.

"In the last fifty years Japan has reorganised itself and has won a place amongst the foremost nations of the world. When they contrast the condition of Japan with what it was in the last fifty years, with the progress made in the condition of India during the last 60 years, since the Proclamation of 1858, they cannot help drawing inferences and making comments which are unfavourable to the present system of Government. Indians dearly want to feel, they want to realise that in India, as subjects of His Majesty the King Emperor George V and his successors, they can and they shall rise to the same height in their own country to which the Japanese have risen under the Mikado. They feel that other countries, even Asiatic countries, have been making great progress and they find a difference in the treatment given to the youth of this country. The British Government have established Colleges and Universities in our midst and have given us good education. We feel grateful for it. But the Governments of other countries have done one thing more, which the Government of this country has not done to the same extent. After having educated the youths of those countries, they have opened all the portals of higher service to those youths. In this country these higher portals have been practically closed against us, and, as has again and again been pointed out by several English writers, if you will not allow the advantages which ought to flow from the acquisition of higher knowledge to come to those who have received that knowledge, you will necessarily create dissatisfaction and discontent. Having regard therefore to the justice of our claim, to the entirety of the circumstances and considerations which have come into existence because of the war, having regard to the circumstances of surrounding countries, and of the civilised world generally, the Government ought not to hesitate any longer in instituting simultaneous examinations for admission into the Indian Civil Service in India and in England....."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I have to remind the Hon'ble Pandit that he has already exceeded the time limit."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I am sorry, Sir, I was not conscious of it. The subject is one which touches the hearts of us all, and I hope you will kindly allow me just a few minutes more to bring my remarks to a close."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I hope the Hon'ble Pandit will be as brief as possible."

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; The Vice-President]

[21ST SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I was going to deal with the question of the character of Indians which has largely, it seems, influenced the decision of the majority of the Commission, but I will reserve it, if it should become necessary for me to do so, for my reply. But before concluding, Sir, I wish to make an earnest appeal to the Government to take up this question in an earnest spirit and to solve it. There ought to be no necessity for discussing it at any great length. We have got the authoritative opinion of the Parliamentary Committee of 1860, we have got the authority of the House of Commons of 1893, we have got the opinions of many gentlemen who appeared before the Public Services Commission in 1886, and of many more who appeared before the Royal Commission of 1912, in favour of simultaneous examinations. We remember that the Committee of 1860 pointed out that there could be no better way of honourably fulfilling the pledges which had been given than by instituting such examinations. I wish also to make an appeal to my friends, the members of the Indian Civil Service. My friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sas'ri made an appeal to them yesterday. I wish, if I may, to support it, I would earnestly ask them to look at the question from the point of view that the honour of the English sovereign, the honour of the English Parliament, the honour of the English nation, is involved in the fulfilment of the pledges which have been given to us during the last eighty years. Many of your own statesmen have said that those pledges have not been faithfully fulfilled. Lord Lytton once said that they had been made a dead letter, and Lord Salisbury cynically urged that there was no good in keeping up an hypocrisy. But I am sure the documents containing the pledges will not be treated by the great English nation as a mere 'scrap of paper.' I am sure they realise that the honour of every Englishman, the honour of every Britisher, is involved in the honourable fulfilment of those pledges, and that those pledges can only be faithfully fulfilled by the holding of examinations for admission into the Indian Civil Service simultaneously in England and in India. One of the members of the bureaucracy has appealed to the members of the Indian Civil Service to decide their duty with reference to this question. I feel that it lies with them more than with any other body of men to help us to realise what we believe to be our birthright. In concluding his book on bureaucracy Mr. Bernard Houghton says:—"

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"The Hon'ble Member must not read quotations at this period of his speech. He has already exceeded the time limit."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"I will take only a minute, Sir."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"Very well, I will give you a minute more."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Mr. Bernard Houghton says:—"

'And the members of the Indian Civil Service, easily the finest in the world,'

I am sure this will gratify the hearts of my friends,

'may recall with pride, even when handing over the sceptre of supreme control they have wielded so long, that their dominion in India has not been without its glories. To have replaced turbulence and disorder by peace, to have established courts of impartial justice, to have cast over the country a close network of roads and railways—all these are achievements which will ever redound to the honour of themselves and of England. But perhaps the greatest of boons, albeit an indirect one, which India has received at their hands has been the birth of a genuine spirit of patriotism. It is a patriotism which seeks its ideals, not in military glory or the apotheosis of a king but in the advancement of the people. Inspired by this spirit, and strong in the material benefits flowing from British rule, India now knocks at the portal of democracy. Bureaucracy has served its purpose. Though the Indian Civil Service were manned by angels from heaven, the incurable defects of a bureaucratic government must pervert their best intentions and make them foes to political progress.

Not all of them, I am sure, Sir.

It must now stand aside, and, in the interest of that country it has served so long and so truly, make over the dominion to other hands. Not in dishonour, but in honour, proudly, as shipbuilders who deliver to seamen the completed ship, may they now yield up the direction of India. For it is the inherent defects of the system, which no body of men, however devoted, can remove, which render inevitable the change to a new polity. By a frank recognition of those defects the service can furnish a supreme instance alike of loyalty to the land of their adoption and of a true and self-denying statesmanship.

"I earnestly hope, Sir, that my friends of the Indian Civil Service will approach this question before us in the spirit in which this appeal has been made to them by one of the former members of their Service, and I trust that, approaching it in that spirit, they will help us to obtain such a solution for which we ask of this very important problem which concerns our welfare."

The Hon'ble Mr. C. H. Atkins:—"I should like to get up at this early stage of the debate, not because I have anything useful to lay before this Council, but to express my own disappointment with the speech of the Hon'ble Mover and to express a hope that perhaps other speakers may give us something more useful to listen to. The Hon'ble Mover has dealt with the subject generally; he has made a passionate appeal to us, members of the Indian Civil Service, to open an access to the service by having simultaneous examinations. He has not dealt with the practical difficulty. He said a few unpleasant things; he said some pleasant things. We all feel the many difficulties; we feel the difficulty of our Indian friends and we also feel the practical difficulties of what they ask for. But the speech we have heard might better have been delivered on yesterday's Resolution, and I do not think it has helped the question which is now before us. I understand that Government wish to hear the opinions of Hon'ble members; they wish to get help from them. We have to consider what the result of simultaneous examinations would be. I think it is generally admitted that the change is not to come too suddenly, and that for a time the preponderance of British officers will have to prevail. Although we grant that there was objection to the proposal put forward yesterday that we should not lay down rules as to a definite number of British officers to be maintained, at the same time, from conversations with Hon'ble Members, I think they all admit that the change must come slowly, that for a time the preponderance must remain. And a result possibly of simultaneous examinations might be that the constitution of Government will be altogether altered.

"There is no doubt about the ability of Indian boys and it is quite possible that in the case of a simultaneous examination they might carry off a very large proportion of the appointments. It would seem prima facie to be better to fix some proportion that should be taken by Indians and that examinations for entry to so many appointments should be held in India. We want, I think, to get ideas as to how this can be worked, to get some solution of the practical difficulties. The question of expense has to be considered. One of the arguments for admitting more Indians is that the present officers are too expensive. Well, I do not think you will get British officers for less, and if any expense is to be saved it means that the pay of Indian officers must be less than that of British officers. That again would mean the maintenance of a separation between the two services, the Indian and the British. That is one of the difficulties, I think, and one that I have not seen the solution of. Of course all the same appointments may be open to members of both services and in that way the services may be one and the same. But I take it if anything is to be saved the pay of the Indian recruited officer will have to be less than that of the British. I would again ask the Hon'ble Members to give us something useful in the way of suggestions. The time for these passionate appeals is past. It has been admitted that something has to be done and the desire is to know what."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar:—

"In this connection I should say that last year by this time one of my good friends Dr. S. Subramania Iyer made an important pronouncement in a public entertainment that the Civil Service Examinations should be held exclusively in India. The other day when we had the notice of this Resolution of Panditji I suggested to him that I had in contemplation a notice of amendment which would make the Resolution mean that the Examinations should be held entirely in India. Even though by this step there is doing justice for Indians and there is more economy and efficiency for the Government, yet the Hon'ble mover asked me that we should wait to suggest the proposal in my intended amendment, till we are able to first secure the co-operation of the Government in this moderate Resolution. On his advice, I did not send in the amendment. Now that the Government of England or India is only attempting at economy and efficiency of administration even at the sacrifice of the luxuries of the different nations I do not think it would be impossible for holding the examination of the Indian Civil Service exclusively in India.

"Whether it is exclusive Examination in India or a simultaneous one, at least one examination should be held in India. The extreme poverty of India does not afford its sons to invest such a large amount on the journey to England and the costly maintenance there. The Home loving tendencies of the Indians and the deep domestic attachment and kinship forming our characteristics retard all the impetus to go a long distance. Only very few parents will be willing to barter a long absence of their sons for even the Indian Celestic services. The climatic conditions of England do not entirely suit our health and habits. Further, rightly or wrongly, there is a scripture to interdict Hindus from sea voyages and many of them are mostly very loyal to their scriptures. The first obstacles are over-ridden by a very few people and our object is only to remove obstacles and place open competition within the reaches of all the gifted sons of the land.

"Further, I know one instance, which would at once show to what extent Indians are subject to disappointments even after overcoming all obstacles and after taking all the risk, trouble and expense by going there for competing the test. The instance I refer to is a talented Indian, who having passed the Indian Civil Service creditably was not taken into the service, because he could not ride his horse well. If India had not got enough of its sons who are not worthy of the responsibility, confidence and ability, then it is another matter and we have no case at all. I can confidently say that the men who are in the provincial services who had passed the old Provincial Civil Service tests can very easily compete for the Indian Civil Service Examination. There was a case in Madras of one who having failed to secure a pass in the Provincial Civil Service, had the pluck to go to England where he creditably succeeded in passing the Indian Civil Service Examination. The test, if accepted to be held in India, would attract the best men and would be doing sheer justice to the sons of the soil. Especially, in times of war, when conditions are such that sea voyages become increasingly difficult, such a course as holding an examination here would be very much urged upon. The Government would do well to take a lesson from the Industrial men of England, who instead of the out-of-date method of importing products from India and sending them back as various finished goods are now resorting to start those Industrial Mills in India itself."

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Sir William Vincent ; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Sir, for reasons which I explained yesterday, the Government cannot accept this Resolution. Indeed, I do not suppose that the Hon'ble Member seeks at this stage to do more than ventilate the subject; and he has done so, if I may say it, with great ability. I may mention here also that I do not share the Hon'ble Mr Atkins opinion that he has not done so with very reasonable moderation, because I think we all understand and know that the subject of this Resolution is one upon which Indians feel very strongly. I am sorry that more Hon'ble Members have not spoken in order that I might have had the advantage of hearing their arguments before I had to speak myself; but in any case I can assure the Council that any arguments that are adduced will receive careful consideration.

"I do not propose, nor would there be time for me, to enter into any prolonged discussion of the arguments for and against this Resolution; but there are some salient points to which I think I ought to draw attention. The first is the suggestion that the Commission seek to exclude Indians from the Indian Civil Service....."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"May I explain? I did not mean to say that the Commission seek to exclude Indians. I said the fact of the examination being held in England alone results in Indians being excluded to a large extent."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I repeat that the suggestion the Hon'ble Member made was that Indians were being and were to be excluded from the Service. Now this is really not so. The Commission propose that a percentage of the Service should be recruited in India and the question which the Government have to consider is the best manner in which the recruitment can be effected with due regard to securing the proper representation of different classes of Indians and so as not to endanger the British character of the administration. These are the real points for decision. The Hon'ble Member also suggested that the adoption of his Resolution would in some way lead to economy. But it has never been suggested, as far as I am aware, that Indians admitted into the Indian Civil Service either through simultaneous examinations or separate examinations should be paid at different rates from Europeans. Turning again to the recommendation of the Commission I ask the Council to remember that there was only one dissentient member on this point, Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim, and that all the other members including Sir Mahadev Chaulal were opposed to the views of the Hon'ble Mover on this question. The reasons which they give are, I think, worth quoting in this Council, possibly many Hon'ble Members are aware of them but some may not have read the report carefully. The Commission say :

'It was also suggested to us, though almost exclusively by the Indian witnesses that there should be simultaneous examinations in England and India, conducted in both cases by the Civil Service Commissioners and with the same papers and a common list embodying the results. Few, however, pushed this suggestion to its logical conclusion. Some, for example, expressly proposed a British minimum from the outset, whilst many, who saw no necessity for imposing a minimum at the present juncture, admitted that a time might come when such would have to be established. In this uncertainty quite apart from the practical difficulties which must surround any simultaneous system in totally different longitudes and in separate continents, will be found the main reason for rejecting this precise solution of the problem. For such an arrangement must either be accompanied by a fixed proportion between Indians and Europeans or it must not and in either case the results will be equally open to objection. In the former, the fundamental anomaly will be introduced, by which men, who pass lower in the examination, will be preferred on racial grounds to those who have passed higher. In the latter the maintenance of the British character of the administration will be made to depend on the chances of an examination.'

[Sir William Vincent.]

Now, I think it may be said that the case against simultaneous examinations rests in great measure on the basis that the maintenance of English methods of Government in India necessitates a substantial proportion of Britishers in the service. Some Members, I dare say, hold this to be incorrect; many more will hold it to be controversial, and I admit that it is controversial, and it was in fact one of the many difficulties which necessitated the appointment of this Commission, a Royal Commission, to investigate the subject. It is quite true that the last word has not been said on the Report of that Commission. But I think that the Hon'ble Member will recognise that recommendations arrived at after such careful inquiry are entitled to be treated with some respect, and it seems better to approach them in a liberal spirit rather than lightly to brush them aside. I have not had time to examine the evidence at all; I have just glanced at portions very cursorily but even that has shown that not a few Indians whose opinions are entitled to respect hold that simultaneous examinations are undesirable. I can give the names of some of them if the Hon'ble Member wishes.

"The views of the Commission on the point are perhaps entitled to the greater respect because they are in complete accordance with the views of previous Commissions and also with the views of the Government of India and of the Secretary of State for many years. The locus classicus on the subject will, I think, be found in the Government of India despatch of 1893 from which I quoted yesterday. The conclusions of which were concurred in by the Secretary of State. I have no time to cite the whole of arguments in the despatch, but I should like to quote one or two portions of the summary at the end. The Government say firstly that no concessions of simultaneous examinations were necessary for the fulfilment of so-called pledges; and secondly that the practical difficulties in introducing a system of simultaneous examination would be extremely serious. Now this is a point to which the present Commission also advert. I do not wish to dilate upon it, and it is not really of primary importance; but there are obvious difficulties in conducting simultaneous competitive examinations vice versa in different continents. Further, recent experience gives some colour to the view that the leakage of information as to papers is not entirely negligible; but I do not want to press this point, because I admit it is a minor one. The Government of India go on to say —

'It is conceded that in order to ensure the efficient administration of the country a minimum of British officials is indispensable, and such a minimum could not be maintained if simultaneous examinations were held.'

They go on.

'Again competitive examinations in India would certainly have the effect of admitting a large number of competitors deficient in the qualifications necessary for the higher ranks of the service and whose antecedents and origin would not be such as to command the confidence and good will of the classes for whose welfare they would be responsible. On the other hand it would exclude the most valuable and capable assistance which the Government could obtain from Indians in the Sikhs, Muhammadans and other races, accustomed to rule and possessing exceptional strength of character, but deficient in literary education.'

"Mr. Shafrill will possibly not admit that the Punjab is behind hand in education just at present, here I should like to pause and place before the Council figures which I have had collected as to the results of the Civil Service examination from 1906 up to date. I have taken figures from 1906 because I believe in that year the age limit was changed. Here are the results. In all 34 Indians got into the Indian Civil Service in the period through the competitive examination held in England. Of these 25 were Hindus and 1 was a Muhammadan. The presidencies of Madras, Bombay and Bengal absorbed 26 out of these 34 places. The Punjab, Burma, Central Provinces and Assam did not produce a single successful candidate during these years. I state these figures subject to correction, and I should be glad if any one will put me right if I am wrong because I have not had time to verify them carefully. Nor do I want to base too much upon them, because obviously the same results might not have followed if simultaneous examinations had been held. But the possibility of similar results cannot on the other hand be entirely neglected, and I think the figures are the more significant when it is remembered that though Muhammadans and others freely resort to the United Kingdom for their education, many orthodox Hindus—and they would be very successful according to what my Hon'ble friend Mr. Ayyangar said—are at present unable to proceed to England for this purpose.

“ In this connection I should like also to refer to certain figures which I have obtained from the Finance Department as to the results of competitive examinations for appointments in that department. The figures, I should explain, are not figures of open competitive examinations and their value is pro tanto diminished. The examinations are held among a number of nominated candidates. I do not therefore seek to base too much upon them, but I do ask the Council to consider them and I put them before the Members more as an illustration of what some of our difficulties are in this matter. Now, in the Finance Department the Government have admitted 24 candidates into service in the last ten years. Of these ten were Madrassee Brahmins. The total number of Brahmins is 14, the total number of non-Brahmin Hindus is 8, and the total number of Muhammadans is again 1. Now, Sir, as I said before I do not seek to build any argument upon these figures. I merely put before the Council facts. It may be right, it may be desirable that the Government should be Government by Brahmins. I am not offering an opinion on the point; but I put the facts before Council that Hon'ble Members may judge for themselves. It is also a question for consideration, I think, whether the races of the North-West Provinces of India would readily accept complete administration of their provinces by gentlemen who, though possessed of the highest intelligence and great educational qualifications, were in their opinion, lacking in qualities which they regarded as essential.

“ It is doubtful, for instance, if the entire Administration of the North-West Frontier Province could safely be entrusted to gentlemen of this class. Indeed, I think myself that if I were a local resident I should be inclined in such a contingency to realize my property and convert it into some portable form. Similarly, in a Province like Burma, it might be argued that if the whole of the Civil Service were filled with Indians the Burman would have a genuine grievance. I may observe that the general trend of the evidence in Burma was against the employment of Indians there at all. Now it may be urged that the whole of this assumes that the result of simultaneous examinations would be to destroy the British element in the service. I do not say that would be the result but I do say that it is one of the possibilities which the Government of India have to contemplate and this question becomes more important if the cumulative effect of the various Resolutions proposed be considered. If these Resolutions are accepted, the Civil Service is to be debarred from all high office whether executive or judicial, and the recommendations of the Public Services Commission as to remedies for grievances relating to pay or pension are to be negatived, in other words this Service which has already lost much of its attractiveness, in the eyes of Englishmen, is to be rendered less attractive still, so that fewer candidates of the best class may be tempted to compete for it. At the same time simultaneous examinations are to be introduced so that the best young men out of 300 million people, some of very high intelligence, very well educated, may compete with the few English lads who would seek to enter the Service under the new conditions. Now, I put it to the Council whether a possible effect, I do not say that it would be the effect, but whether a possible effect of this might not be the immediate Indianisation of the whole Service, if it did not lead to the whole service being filled by Hindus from the South and West of India. I am not committing the Government of India to saying that this result would follow, I am not stating, nor do I wish to say for a moment, that for these reasons the Government of India are unwilling to accept the resolution ; but I am putting before Council considerations which show that this question is one of great gravity which can only be decided after consideration of various possibilities. I do not wish to press the point further, I seek merely to indicate some of the difficulties of the position. Finally though I have already drawn attention to the point I wish again to point out that although the Commission rejected the principle of simultaneous examinations, they at the same time made definite proposals to secure that Indians should receive an increased number of appointments in the Service. In such circumstances it cannot be said that they were biassed or unwilling to consider what are very just claims. The policy of the Government of India and the Secretary of State in this matter has also been explained in the debate yesterday and with that policy the Council is familiar. Nevertheless, I am afraid that for the reasons which I have already given, and without committing the Government in any way, to accept or reject this proposal, I cannot accept the Resolution which has been moved by the Hon'ble Member."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"Sir, the Hon'ble Mr. Atkins wishes us to tackle the practical difficulties in the way of our adopting the Resolution. What practical difficulties there are he has not indicated very clearly, but there was a reference in his short speech to one of the difficulties which I will attempt to tackle, not on my own authority, but on the authority of eminent people, who have been examined by this very Commission. I think one of the difficulties he alluded to was that which may be experienced in holding an examination in India identical with the one that is held in England. On that point I would refer him respectfully to the evidence tendered by Mr. Stanley Leathes, the first Civil Service Commissioner in England. He opined that it was possible to hold such examinations here. Of course it would be necessary to send out some men with experience in the holding of examinations, he even suggested that in the conduct of the viva voce examinations, and where Indian subjects were concerned, he would not object to the appointment of Professors of Indian Colleges. Then the other difficulty which Mr. Atkins suggested was one to which the Hon'ble the Home Member has also referred, at considerable length, and that is the difficulty of obtaining a guarantee that a certain British minimum would be maintained in the Service. This would lead me to cover the ground partially gone over yesterday, but I will try to be very short. The Commission objected theoretically to the establishment of a proportion at all, and, looking at the Statutes great lawyers have held the opinion that to prescribe a minimum either on one side or the other is not lawful. That is not a point on which I am competent to say anything. But what have the Commission done themselves? They have proposed two examinations, one to be held in England and one in India and they have fixed a proportion, a proportion on the Indian side, but they strongly object to fixing one on the British side. They have set 25 per cent as the maximum of Indians that may be admitted into the Services.

"There is only one other point to which, at the risk of being some what invidious, I wish to refer because the Hon'ble the Home Member, careful as he was not to commit either himself or the Government of India, still indicated a considerable diffidence. He told us that if simultaneous examinations were held in India it would lead to the over-representation or to the exclusive representation of certain communities greatly to the detriment of the other communities.

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[*Sir William Vincent; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri;
The Vice-President.*]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I did not suggest that, I did suggest that whether this result would follow was one of the points which the Government would have to consider. I certainly said that, but if I said more than that, I did not intend it."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"I accept the correction, Sir. But still there is a difficulty suggested and I am trying to deal with it. It is not a difficulty which the Hon'ble the Home Member has yet persuaded himself to believe. This difficulty will exist for ever. There are different communities in India, and as far as I can look forward to the future, it is not possible to attain a complete assimilation of all the communities that now are consciously considering themselves as distinct from one another. Then is it proposed to postpone the fulfilment of the pledges and the grant of what we consider our due till this impossible end is attained? That seems to me to be the logical end of those who suggest the difficulty as one that will stand in the way of simultaneous examinations. Muhammadans, Sikhs and other people it seems, would at once start up in clamour if simultaneous examinations were adopted. What are they doing to-day? Have they the representation in the higher branches of the service to which they are entitled and to which they will say they are entitled in future? They have not got that now. If the Government of India, I mean, if the authorities—I should not speak of the Government of India alone in this connection—if the authorities make suitable provision for the representation of those communities, those who advocate simultaneous examinations would be prepared to consider any proposals that might effectuate the object. The Commission themselves, while putting forward this difficulty, have not appeared in my opinion in their own practice, that is to say, as judged by their recommendations, to attach very considerable weight to this difficulty. On the contrary both they and the several witnesses who gave evidence before them, have laid clear line of demarcation between this eminent service in India, the superior service in India, and all other services. While they consider that it would be a suitable object to keep in view in recruiting for the Provincial Civil Service and for the other services to see that all the communities receive adequate representation; they have considered, however, that in the Indian Civil Service, the highest in the land which was called upon to administer on the largest scale, it is not desirable to give this particular object, namely the representation of the different communities, the same importance. In their own recommendations they have fixed the number 9 as the limit of Indian representation. They have allowed 7 to be competed for in more or less an open competitive examination. 2 however are to be retained under the patronage of the Secretary of State...."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"May I rise to say one word, Sir. I think that the Hon'ble Member's remarks would be more relevant when the alternative Resolution of my Hon'ble friend dealing with the question of proportion and numbers comes on?"

The Hon'ble the Vice President:—"I understand that the Hon'ble Pandit's alternative Resolution is only to be moved in the event of the present resolution being lost."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I hope that he will withdraw it."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"Besides, Sir, I am mentioning this only as giving a clear indication of the mind of the Commission themselves, as may be inferred from the recommendations, that this principle of adequate representation of all communities plays only a very small part. Therefore what I am urging is that this difficulty of having adequate representation for all castes and communities in India, for all provinces and for all universities also, should not deter us from adopting what might otherwise recommend itself as a suitable means of rendering justice to Indians.

“ There is, Sir, only one other point which remains for me to touch, and that is the question of the attractions of the Civil Service for English youths. That is a point which would appear again and again in the course of our discussions. I think the Hon'ble Home Member was a little previous in alluding to it, and it is therefore part of my duty to refer to it. The attractions of the Indian Civil Service for British youths, I am not of course in a position exactly to judge, but they seem to me to be very great, and I am not one of those who think that they need at all to be rendered greater. If, however, the apprehensions of the Hon'ble the Home Member or of those for whom he was for the moment speaking,—apparently he was not speaking for himself at the time,—if these apprehensions should prove true, I am one of those who think that that is one of the difficulties that we shall have to face in the course of our upward progress, but in my opinion it is by no means the greatest difficulty that we shall have to face.”

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—“ Sir, the position that has been taken up by the Hon'ble the Home Member is one which, I must say, has not satisfied me. The Hon'ble the Home Member has pointed out every possible argument that he could lay hold of against simultaneous examinations. Having done that, he wound up by saying, very ingeniously, very cleverly, that the Government do not commit themselves in any way at all. Well, if the Hon'ble the Home Member has taken the trouble to solve all these difficulties,—I have no doubt that he as one of the Members of the Executive Council will put all those difficulties before the Executive Council,—I have no doubt that to a certain extent he has given an indication of his own opinion. I would never have taken part in this debate, but since the Hon'ble the Home Member has invited the opinions of non-official members I would like to meet those difficulties. First of all, the Hon'ble Mr. Atkins said that we never put forward reasons for simultaneous examinations but he never put forward any against it except one which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri has dealt with. Now, Sir, I do not wish in any way to convey any idea of criticising the Civil Service unnecessarily. The position is this. The people of India say ‘ you lay down any test you like, but give us equal opportunities.’ Why should the people of India not have equal opportunities? Now, it has been said that the competitive test is the best possible test that we can think of and I propose, with the permission of the Council, to quote the words of Mr. Balfour which I had the honour of putting forward before the Public Services Commission. This is what Mr. Balfour says :—

‘ There can be no doubt for example that a man who can succeed in a severe competition must have great powers of work, great powers of concentration, great powers of maturing a subject, and great powers of reproducing his knowledge. The existence of these mental powers is shown to demonstration by success and they are all of them of the utmost use in every walk of life and not least perhaps in that of the Indian Civilian.’

“ Now the first difficulty which the Hon'ble Member puts forward is that it would certainly not maintain the preponderance of the British element. Now, Sir, may I know why it is necessary to have a preponderance of the British element? Why? If, as we are contemplating, we are not going to have I hope for a very long time a bureaucracy that will be the masters of the people, but a bureaucracy that will be the servants of the people, and that is what we are aiming at, and if our hopes are realised in the reconstruction of the Government, we hope that the bureaucracy which under the present constitution are the masters and the rulers, will be the servants responsible to the people and under the control of the people. If that is to be realised, may I, Sir, know why there should be a substantial element of the British? We want a service, we want men who will serve us, who will discharge their duties efficiently and faithfully to the Government. I have always failed to understand this argument.

“The Hon’ble Member said well, now, supposing you have to send men to the North-Western Frontier, what will be the position? If you have a Brahmin he may be very efficient as a literary man, full of knowledge. In other words he conveyed that a Brahmin, if he got into the Civil Service, would be nothing but a bookworm and would not be a man possessing manly qualifications.

The Hon’ble Sir William Vincent:—“Indeed, I said nothing of the kind.”

The Hon’ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah:—“May I know what the Hon’ble Member meant. Why should not a Brahmin who has passed the test laid down, any test you like, educational, physical or otherwise,—why should not a Brahmin who has passed that test be put in charge of any Province or any district; will the Hon’ble Member explain that? What will happen to the North-Western Frontier if he goes there? The Hon’ble Member says Oh! the man with any property, if he was living there would at once convert his property into a portable state. If the Hon’ble Member is so much afraid of a Brahmin he may be sure the residents of the North-Western Frontier will also obey his orders. But Sir, I go further, how are these Provinces now managed by the Civil Servants? We know perfectly well Sir, that in these Provinces the people are more or less not civilized, people who do not obey the law in the same way as the civilized parts do. We know Sir, military officers have been sent, military officers have been governing these Provinces, even the Punjab was a non-regulated Province for a very long time and surely such Provinces as are of that character can always be managed by other officers who would be able to prevent the residents of those Provinces from turning their property into a portable state.

I have mentioned the two arguments, namely, preponderance and the question of Provinces such as Burma and the North-West Provinces. The other argument was that we have got in this country different classes of people such as the Muhammadans, Hindus, Parsis, Sikhs and so on, and the Hon’ble Member quoted certain figures with regard to examinations in the Finance Department as I understood and with regard to the Civil Service examinations that have been held in London. Well, now, Sir, on this point my answer is this. A man like the late Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji who represents the Parsi community, a man like the late Mr. Gokhale who represents Indians, men like Sir Pheroze-shah Mehta who represents the Parsis and men like His Highness the Aga Khan who, as we all know, carried enormous weight with Muhammadans, they all gave their evidence before this very Commission, urging upon the Commission that they wanted simultaneous examination. Now Sir, are the opinions of such men not to be taken into consideration? Did they not know the interests of their own communities? The Hon’ble Member has given figures; he says the result would be that probably the Muhammadans would not get their proper share. Well, Sir, I can tell you this that the Muhammadans are to-day in a much better position than perhaps the Hon’ble Member knows and are quite prepared to compete with their Hindu brethren, and therefore there need be no anxiety of any kind whatsoever on the part of Government for the Muhammadans. I grant that we are backward to a certain extent. I grant that there is a larger number of Hindus in this country than Muhammadans, but assuming that a larger number of Hindus do get into the Civil Service will that be more objectionable to the Muhammadans than that a larger element of the Europeans should get in? I want to be frank, I do not want to give any offence, but why should it be any more objectionable to the Muhammadans if the Hindus are more than if the Europeans are more? Therefore I say that is an argument which I submit has no place here. What we want Sir, is this, we want an efficient service. Let it be open to competition to any one, to Europeans, Hindus and Muhammadans, Parsis, etc., and the fittest get in—the survival of the fittest should be the rule for recruiting the highest service.

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah; Sir William Vincent; Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi.] [21ST SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

“Then I give you what my objections are at the present moment to the Civil Service examination being held in London only. Sir, we know perfectly well, and let me tell you this that the Indian element which you get now by this door, which is a door which really more obstructs the Indians from getting in because you put so many difficulties in the way, a man has got to go to London, a man has to get money, a man has to take the chance and the risk of working for years and at the end of 5 or 6 years, if he fails in the Civil Service he is good for nothing .....

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :— I always understood he went to the Bar!”

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—“No, the Hon'ble Member is very much mistaken. If he cannot get into the Civil Service he will be much less able to get on at the Bar. However that is beside the point. Therefore you expect people to go to London all the way taking all these risks and then at the end find themselves, if failures, with nothing to do. On the other hand if you had simultaneous examinations in this country you would find better men, better talents will have an opportunity of competing and you will get better men, I venture to say better men will get in, if you had examinations here in India as well as London. Therefore, Sir, I strongly object to the present system of recruiting for the Civil Service, and I say that it is obvious to any thinking man that, while theoretically the Civil Service examination is open to the sons of India, practically every possible difficulty is put in their way and the result of that is that you find (I believe I am right) that out of 1,300 Civilian holding various posts in this country, today there are no more than 60 or 70 Indians. Well, that is the state of things, that although in theory it is open to His Majesty's subjects in India to compete for the Civil Service, to all practical purposes the door is really closed.

“Now we say open that door properly and let there be honest equal competition. Let the best talent of India compete for it. Put any test you like, and then, whoever is the fittest should get into that service. I do not see any reason against it or any objection to or any answer to that proposal. Therefore, I would ask the Hon'ble Mover to divide the Council on this Resolution and let us record our most emphatic opinion on this Resolution, by our vote.”

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi :—“Sir, I am in entire agreement with the Hon'ble the Home Member when he says that my friend the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya placed his case before the Council with extreme moderation. With most of what fell from the lips of the Hon'ble Pandit I am in entire accord. I agree with him that a state of things in which, for the Indian Civil Service, an examination is held in England and in England alone is in the highest degree unsatisfactory. I am further in entire agreement with him that, when we examine the figures and find that only 10 per cent of the appointments in the Indian Civil Service cadre are held by the people of this country, it is a state of things, the sooner put an end to the better. But when we closely examine the speech delivered by my Hon'ble friend, it is directed to establishing the necessity of an examination being held in this country. The Civil Service Commission also have recommended that an examination should be held in India, and the real point for discussion, it seems to me, was whether that

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi.]

examination should be simultaneous, as advocated in this Resolution, or should partake of the nature of the examination, which is suggested by the Public Services Commission. That was the real issue before the Council, and I venture to submit that, as regards this issue, my Hon'ble and learned friend the Pandit has said nothing in his very able and lucid speech.

"The difficulties which, according to the Public Services Commission I do not say I endorse all that has been said in that connection by the majority of the Commission—stand in the way of a simultaneous Indian Civil Service examination being introduced in this country have been stated by them in their Report. My Hon'ble and learned friend in his speech did not deal with any of those difficulties. The scheme put forward by the Commission of the kind of examination which they advocate is supported by them in that Report by certain arguments and certain considerations which they have enunciated. My Hon'ble and learned friend has not combated those considerations and those arguments. I entirely agree with him that the examination for the Indian Civil Service to be held in India should be of the nature of a competitive examination so that the best intellect of the country may have the chance of competing for the appointments held by the Indian Civil Service. I also agree with him that it should be simultaneous in this sense that the same subjects should be the subjects of examination here in India as are the subjects of examination in England and the same papers should be set to the examinees in this country as are set to the examinees in England, so that there should be not the slightest difference whatsoever in the standard of the two examinations. But where I differ from him is this. I am not in favour of the examination in India being an open competitive examination in the sense contemplated by my Hon'ble friend's Resolution. It seems to me that in a country like India the best intellect of every province and of every community should have a fair chance of competing for the Indian Civil Service appointments. That is the sum total of the argument which it seems to me lies at the root of the recommendation made by the Public Services Commission, and I think that is a consideration which is well worthy of consideration by Hon'ble Members. As I said just now I do not want any favour for any community or for any province whatever, but I want that the best intellect of every province and of every community should have a fair chance of competing for the Indian Civil Service appointments.

"So far as what fell from the lips of the Hon'ble the Home Member is concerned, that possibly the people of the Punjab or of the North-West Frontier Province would not like to have for their Collectors, gentlemen from Madras or from Bengal, all I would like to say is this, that I do not for a moment share this apprehension nor do I agree with the view which he has expressed in this connection. I think that once a fair chance is given to the people of the North-West Frontier or to the people of the Punjab for competing in this examination, after that, the best man, the best Indian, no matter whether he be a Punjabi, whether he be a Bombay man or a Madras man, would be welcome to Indians of every Province and of every class. What I want to see secured is that the Muhammadans, the Sikhs and the Hindus of every province should have a fair chance, and that is possible only if a combined system of selection and competition, such as is recommended by the Public Services Commission, is adopted.

"Personally, I do not agree with the majority Report in the Public Services Commission that only 25 per cent of the total number of what are called higher appointments in the Indian Civil Service should be reserved for Indians in this country. I think there was absolutely no reason why 25 per cent only of the higher appointments should have been so reserved and why a certain fixed proportion of the entire number of appointments held by the Indian Civil Service should not be reserved for Indians in this country. Moreover, I think that Why, for the matter of that, I find my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi supporting our argument to-day ....."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi :—" My learned friend should remember that I have to-day expressed the same view that I expressed before the Royal Commission."

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—" I am glad, Sir, to be corrected on that point. Therefore, I submit this bogey of Muhammadan interests being endangered is absolutely unreasonable. When you find Muhammadans of position and eminence who ought to know their own interests supporting this I submit the time has come when arguments of this character, which are really ante-diluvian, should be summarily dismissed. The fact of the matter, Sir, is that the whole system is perfectly unnatural. To ask Indians that they should send their boys six thousand miles away to compete with Englishmen in order that they may come back and serve their own country is absolutely unnatural; and if all this talk about the increasing association of Indians in the higher administration has any element of sincerity, as I hope it has, then, Sir, the only reasonable thing that you can do is to get over those prejudices and not take shelter behind arguments which cannot stand any scrutiny now, and to open the door to us through which we wish to enter into the highest portals of administration. On these grounds, Sir, I beg to support strongly the resolution moved by my Hon'ble friend"

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—" Sir, I am sorry to say that the arguments urged against the resolution brought forward by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya do not convince me. As far as the difficulties are concerned, I have heard of these difficulties before in almost all official arguments brought against simultaneous examinations; these arguments are very old and they are being trotted out every time. I see that this time also they have been trotted out by the Home Member. I remember reading these things thirty years ago when the House of Commons passed a resolution (in 1892) in favour of simultaneous examinations, and the Government of India issued a blue-book in which all these arguments, which are now being trotted out, were repeated. So far, then, they are all stock arguments which are dragged in every time in order to oppose this very simple and just resolution which has been brought forward to-day. Now, as to the difficulties, what are they? The Home Member says there are difficulties in the matter of holding examinations both in England and in India at the same time. How far the conducting of an examination in England and in India is a horrible, a terrible, thing I do not know! The same questions might leak out in England as out here. No, there is nothing in that reasoning. I may say, Sir, that the local Cambridge examinations, Junior and Senior, are simultaneous examinations; questions are, of course, put on the same day in England and in the different centres in India, in Madras, Calcutta, Bombay and elsewhere; the answers are all sent to London where they are, of course, examined and one list is made out in which the results are declared. Where is the difficulty in the case of the Civil Service Examinations? I do not see any difficulty that the Civil Service Commissioners can find so far as these examinations are concerned. Even with regard to the viva voce part of these examinations, surely, there are more than one or two Civil Service Commissioners; one of them can always be deputed when the examination takes place to come out here and conduct the viva voce examination on the same day that the London candidates are examined there. Where is the difficulty? I do not see any at all. Sir, it is the case, that when there is a selfish interest to be preserved and conserved, difficulties always arise; red herrings are drawn across the path and this is one of the red herrings which the Honourable Home Member has brought forward to-day....."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"I really must rise to a point of order. I was only quoting the arguments which had been advanced against the proposal; I did not pretend to put forward arguments of my own. I think that it is unfair to suggest anything else."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"That may be; the arguments in general are the arguments of the Civil Service."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"The Hon'ble Member may say that they are the arguments of the Civil Service, but he has no right to father them on me."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"The Hon'ble Member is a member of the Civil Service, and I consider that he is here as Home Member and as a member of the service which governs India."

"Well, Sir, as to the other arguments. In former days, when the Congress was held, we were told that it was a Hindu Congress and that the Muhammadans did not join in it. Of course, when there is a difference of opinion, how can we agree to all the propositions urged by a Hindu Congress? So we were not unfrequently told by the Government. But the Hindus and Muhammadans are amalgamated. There is unanimity of thought, speech and mind between both communities. Government now trot out the question of Brahmins and non-Brahmins. That is the usual way with the bureaucracy, and there is nothing particular about it. I understand it to be intelligent enough. But what if there are Brahmins and non-Brahmins? There is the Charter Act which lays down clearly that 'proved merit and ability' shall be the only qualifications for the public service. One may be a Brahmin, or a non-Brahmin, or an Australian, or a Canadian, or a Negro or a Hottentot, what about that? So far as the Service is concerned we are to have the best men for the Indian Government. There is nothing further to be said about it. Take the case of the Civil Service in England. Is there any distinction made between the Welsh, Scotch, English, Irish, and so on. There are men of all races and denominations. Take the Austrian Government, does the Home Member mean to say that none of the representatives of the different communities and races there hold very high appointments or are appointed governors or posted to high offices? Did the Austrian Government complain that there was a Magyar or a Slav or a Czech or some one of that sort in its public service? There is that difficulty; but what does it matter? Why then should we have any more difficulty here with Brahmin preponderance or Muhammadan preponderance or Parsi preponderance or any other? The Charter Act is clear on the point; it says 'men of proved merit and ability' shall only be employed in the public service. Then it is laid down that there shall be no governing caste' in India. Where is the governing caste? The governing caste is the Civil Service; they are the governing caste, and yet the Brahmin is denounced. I cannot at all, Sir, understand that argument. Therefore, so far as the two principal arguments urged by the Home Member are concerned, they do not, I am sorry to say, hold water at all. Then, look at the other side. There is what you call a list of 'present discontents.' It is not one discontent but there are six, perhaps more; and in this list of present discontents, simultaneous examination holds the first place. And why? Because it is the oldest discontent against which for more than fifty years, from 1830 onwards, the people have been crying and crying. Time after time it has been brought before Parliament and still nothing has been done. And up to this time not a single strong argument has been brought forward against it. All the arguments that have been brought forward by Government here or by the Secretary of State before Parliament are these specious and fallacious arguments only. That is the position; and yet after fifty years of education, after universities have been established and thousands after thousands of students have passed through them, after being told that India is rapidly progressing in educational matters and in moral and material condition, you say 'No, simultaneous examinations shall not be held.' As my friend, Mr. Jinnah, put it well, 'why should there be any examination at all in England?' The examination is for service in India: if that is the case what does it matter whether it is held in India and in England alike? It is the old story of the Saxons and the Normans. I will not use any strong words as to how the Saxons felt when the Normans got appointments and how they chafed under their disabilities. I wish the Home Member and all the other Members of the Civil Service will put themselves in the category of the Saxons and us in the category of Normans and say how they would feel and how they would like to be governed by them. I say to the Civil Service, enter into our skins, into the skins of us Indians, and find out what the Indian feeling and sentiment is. The answer, as far as India is concerned, is 'the service is Indian and the examination must be confined to India alone.' Let Australians, Canadians, Irishmen come, Let them all come. We welcome them but of course, those who have shown the best merit and ability should alone be employed. But at present these are all the artificial barriers of the bureaucracy and it is for these reasons that simultaneous examinations are opposed by the service. With these words I support the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, having regard to the cardinal principle on which the Government has been proceeding in the matter of recruiting for the Civil Service I quite agree with the Hon'ble the Home Member that there are difficulties which have to be faced by the holding of simultaneous examinations in India and in England. I shall not repeat my arguments used in the debate yesterday as regards the proportion of Britishers. It is urged that there is a danger, an immediate danger and one which will face Government in the not distant future that the preponderance or inequality will disappear if simultaneous examinations are held in India and England. What does the argument come to? It comes to this that as things stand, India must agree to be governed by inferior Britishers because in competitive examinations, more Indians than Europeans will succeed. If that be the result, then certainly we Indians ought to prefer to be governed by superior Indians rather than by inferior Britishers. I for one believe firmly that for a very long time to come such a change will not be possible having regard to the immense progress in Education which has been made by Englishmen and the comparative poverty in educational institutions in India and that therefore the danger is not a practical danger. If a minimum is to be set I think it would be more frank and would give greater satisfaction to the people to do so than to veto simultaneous examinations. A difference in status among the members of the Indian Civil Service and a consciousness on the parts of some that they have entered the service by a more difficult door and under a stiffer examination are equally to be avoided and provided against. The examination in India which has been suggested by the Public Service Commissioners is an examination somewhat different from that in England they recognise it and they get over the difficulty by stating that the order of merit and rank will be arranged according to the total number of marks which successful candidates in India, and in Great Britain would secure at the final examination that is to be held during the probationary period. Englishmen and Indians alike have a right to say 'on ground of policy Government are obliged to add the marks and fix the order of seniority ; we have come in under a severer examination and are consequently superior to you'. Simultaneous examinations would avoid the difficulty and the anomaly of Britishers securing fewer marks being preferred to Indians who get a larger number, in order that the minimum British element may be met. If it is a way of escape that is wanted there is a way out of the difficulty. It may be said that candidates from England take up Latin and the modern languages of Europe in preference to Sanskrit, Arabic and other languages, these are optional no doubt but Indian candidates would take the latter group rather than Latin and Greek and to that extent the examinations are different and therefore the British candidate who secures fewer marks is not necessarily inferior. I think the Government should not press this difficulty against holding simultaneous examinations. There would be heartburning if a man who got more marks is passed over for a man who got fewer marks but the heartburning would be nothing compared to the present when the door is practically completely shut against us. I may point out to the Government that the feeling during recent years against the Government attitude in the matter has been so strong that there is a section of our community which is urging that examinations should be held only in India. I do not say that this is a reasonable attitude nor is it necessary to express an opinion on it, but we must take note of the feeling which is due to the non possumus attitude taken on the subject. The second objection taken by the Public Service Commissioners namely that there are difficulties in the examinations being held in two continents, has been met by previous speakers. Mr. Stanley Leathes pointed out that there was considerable difficulty but that on the whole he did not think there was an insuperable difficulty....."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—The question was put to Mr. Stanley Leathes.

'I understand that the Civil Service Commissioners at the present time think it would be wholly impracticable to conduct simultaneous examinations in England and in India.'

'The answer was—

'Yes'.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"That was what I was alluding to but it would not be an insuperable difficulty to have another examination ; it would not be difficult to send examiners to India ; vice versa examinations might also be held. The third objection taken by the Commissioners is that, simultaneous examinations would be bad for Indian education. That, Sir, would raise a smile among Indians. The whole of educated opinion in England was dead against the lowering of the age, on the ground, that university education would be adversely affected—the Public Service Commissioners were not solicitous about the higher education of Britishers but are very anxious lest the holding of simultaneous examination in India might prejudicially affect Indian education.

"Sir, I think that if the examinations are held here, our educational institutions will be improved considerably, there will be a greater stimulus for more reasons than one for the advancement of higher education, and therefore, far from there being any decay in the quality of Indian education there will be a rapid advance and progress in the quality of Indian education. Well, what was the reason that was suggested? It was said that though the subjects were the same, the groups taken were somewhat different. But if we turn to the curriculum we shall find that apart from Latin, Greek and modern languages there is not the slightest difference between the other subjects or the grouping either under the old curriculum or under the curriculum suggested in India and in England; and, if any argument can be adduced in favour of holding the examinations in this country, I should think that, in Indian interests, for Indian purposes, it would be far better to have a man who matured in British literature and thought is acquainted with the eastern literature, and is educated in the best of eastern thought, rather than one who has read only the Greek and Latin authors. Of course, there is a wide difference of opinion on that subject, but so far as the Indians are concerned, we would certainly prefer one who has been trained in the eastern thought, in Sanskrit, Arabic and Persian, rather than one who has been trained in Greek and Latin alone. Well, Sir, there is not much in that third argument that was taken up by the Public Service Commissioners that the system of holding examinations in India is bad for Indian education.

"Now, Sir, an argument has been advanced here that certain sections of the Indian community would predominate if the simultaneous examinations were held here. I quote from page 400 of the Public Services Commission's Report. This is the opinion of Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim:—

'His Highness the Aga Khan joined his weighty voice with that of the leaders of the congress in demanding simultaneous examinations for the Indian Civil Service and the representatives of the Sikh Khalsa and the Pathans of the Punjab, the Moslem League along with the spokesmen of the communities more advanced in western education, were unanimous in entering their emphatic protest against the suggestion that the presence of Indians in the higher official ranks would be distasteful to the people themselves, and specially in a province or a community other than that of the Indian official.'

"Now with regard to the much misunderstood Brahmin, may I say a word, Sir? I do not mean to claim that the Brahmin has any superior qualities which the other communities inhabiting this country do not possess. But I venture to say that ancient history shows that the Brahmins ruled over the North-West Frontiers and a portion of Afghanistan, the ancient Ghandhara country, that it was the Maratha Brahmins who held sway over practically the whole of India before the British came to this country, that the ancient warriors of Hindustan who led armies were Brahmins, that the Brahmins of the Punjab and the United Provinces are found in large numbers in the armies of Hindustan, and recently in Madras more Brahmins volunteered for the Indian Defence Force than people belonging to any other community, and I am certain that the Brahmin community in India, which is 14 millions strong, has got the nerve, the capacity and the brain power to hold its own against any other class in India or elsewhere, and I feel that the Hon'ble the Home Member need not think seriously of winding up the business if the Brahmins were to rule. May I also ask whether the Britishers preferred the Germans or the French or any other nation in the ancient days to other classes of the nobility; and the higher middle classes and the nobility ruled practically the whole of England for centuries and perhaps do so even now. I therefore think this argument of using certain communities against one another is one which I think had better be dropped in modern times."

The Hon'ble Mr. E. H. C. Walsh:—"Sir, I do not intend to express any views of my own on this Resolution. But I wish to refer to certain remarks and arguments in the speech of the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha.

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Mr. E. H. C. Walsh; Raja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan, Khan Bahadur of Mahmudabad; Mr. F. J. Monahan.]

"The Hon'ble the Home Member has stated certain difficulties with regard to the proposal to adopt simultaneous examinations in England and in India, which will have to be considered before a conclusion on the point can be arrived at. The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha has referred to these as old stock arguments which were brought forward against this proposal thirty years ago, and on other occasions since when the proposal has come up for consideration, and says that they have all been answered again and again, and are now, according to his own expression 'being trotted out again'. And he argues that this shows that they are of no value.

"The Hon'ble Member's argument, however, entirely overlooks the fact that the proposal has, on full consideration, not been adopted on the previous occasions, and it therefore follows that the arguments which were then adduced against it, were held to be substantial. The fact therefore that the difficulties which have been referred to by the Hon'ble the Home Member, were then also pointed out and considered, so far from in any way lessening their force and value, considerably adds to it.

"Had these difficulties and objections not then been pointed out and considered, their present value would be very much affected, and they would be open to the very obvious and reasonable criticism that these difficulties were not found to exist when the matter has been previously considered, and must therefore be groundless as regards the same proposal of the present Resolution.

"As the Hon'ble the Home Member has said that the Government of India will consider this question, and the other questions arising out of the recommendations of the Report of the Public Services Commission after taking the opinions of the Local Governments and also of the public outside this Council, it is I think, necessary to remove the entirely unwarranted idea, which may be produced by the speech of the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha that the difficulties now mentioned are any the less real and material because they have been previously put forward and have been found to be substantial. That very fact on the other hand is essential to them, and adds to their present force."

The Hon'ble the Raja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan, Khan Bahadur of Mahmudabad :—"Sir, I give my entire support to the Resolution which has been moved by my Hon'ble friend Pandit Malaviya. I am sorry to find that the argument of the Hindu-Muhammadan controversy should have been advanced from the Government side. This is a worn out argument, and we are not prepared to accept this argument against a Resolution for simultaneous examinations. Sir, the All-India Moslem League, has already supported the introduction of simultaneous examinations through its Honorary Secretary who gave evidence before the Royal Commission. I am therefore in a position to make this statement on behalf of the All-India Moslem League that the Moslem League and the Moslem community support entirely the proposal for simultaneous examinations."

The Hon'ble Mr. F. J. Monahan :—"Sir, I am tempted to say just a few words mainly because the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha in the course of his speech I think attributed a certain set of views on this subject to the whole of the Civil Service. We have heard today arguments for and against the system of simultaneous examinations in India and England, certain strong arguments against it, arguments against the present system of an examination held exclusively in London, certain arguments in favour of an examination held exclusively in India and against that also possibly I think certain arguments might be adduced. And really one impression that one might derive from the discussion would seem to point to an examination held exclusively at Aden, or

RESOLUTION re SIMULTANEOUS EXAMINATIONS FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Mr. F. J. Monahan.]

[21st SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

I believe there is a place called Port Soudan on the coast of the Red Sea, which is in British territory, and which, perhaps, might be found approximately equidistant between India and Great Britain. But, speaking seriously, I think it has been correctly pointed out that there is a close connection between the subject of this Resolution, and that of the Resolution which was discussed yesterday. Apart from practical difficulties about holding simultaneous examinations, which, as the Hon'ble Home Member admits, is, comparatively, a minor point, the real argument in favour of the present system seems to be the view that the Indian Civil Service should contain a preponderating proportion of British officers, that it is, in fact, mainly a European Civil Service, that there should be a European Civil Service, and that the European Civil Service, logically, should be recruited by examination in London. The arguments in favour of that view are stated compendiously in different forms. It is said in the recommendation of the Public Services Commissioners that the nature of British responsibility for the good governance of India requires the employment of a preponderating proportion of British officers in the Indian Civil Service, or it is stated that it is necessary in order to maintain the British character of the administration. Well, of course, necessarily, these are compendious statements of the reasons, and perhaps not very explicit, but sometimes it is attempted to explain these reasons a little further and reference is made to the inherent qualities of the British race, and that it seems to me is an argument that excites a little resentment, and I think possibly with some reason, although the argument is supported by high authority, because it seems to suggest an inference which is not altogether fair, not altogether just, to the people of this country. There is no doubt that the inhabitants of the British Islands have certain inherent qualities, also certain inherent defects I suppose, and it may be said that their inherent qualities, or some of them qualify them eminently to carry on the administration of this country. On the other hand, it might be argued that some of their inherent defects are a considerable handicap to them in carrying on the administration of any country except their own. And it may also be said that the educated, advanced people of this country have certain inherent qualifications for the administration of their own country, in their permanent interest in the country and intimate acquaintance with the people of it. But, when all that is said, I think it will be admitted that, at any rate when British rule was established first in India, there was a practical difficulty in finding Indian officials qualified to carry on the administration on modern, what we may call advanced and civilised lines. That is no reproach to the people of this country. It was due to certain circumstances in the political history of the country which had retarded its development. Well, in course of time that difficulty of finding qualified officials has been very largely removed as regards certain communities in the country,—not entirely removed as regards all of them, and, apart from that difficulty, so far as it still exists, there is the fact that there are British interests in the country to be considered, British communities and their interests to be protected, and, I take it, those two considerations are the arguments in favour of the continued maintenance of a European Civil Service in this country, and, while there is a European Civil Service, it should, it may be argued, be recruited in London. It may easily be imagined that at some future time the functions of this European Civil Service may be considerably changed,—its position may be considerably changed. It may be relieved of a great many of its present functions and powers, which may, some of them possibly, be transferred to representative bodies, and others to services recruited entirely in India. That is a development in the future which may possibly be looked forward to. Even when such a state of things might come about, it might perhaps even then be necessary to maintain a European service in this country for the safeguarding of British interests. But the Public Services Commission had not to deal, I take it, with the remote future; they had to make recommendations for the present, and their recommendation is that a European Service should be maintained with a preponderating British element in it, that it should be recruited by examination in London because it is a European Civil Service, I take it, and because it is to have a preponderating British element, and they made certain suggestions for facilitating the admission of Indians to that Service. Now, Sir, it is not my intention to give, and I trust that I have not given, any more than the Home Member, any indication of my own opinion on this question. I have merely attempted to state a few issues that might have become obscured clearly for the consideration of members of this Council."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—" May I say one word of explanation. In no Act of Parliament has this question of predominance been laid down. It is only the view of the Public Services Commission."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" Sir, I am very thankful to the Hon'ble the Home Member for the way in which he has received the resolution, and to my Hon'ble friends who have made up for the deficiencies of my very poor speech in supporting the resolution. I may assure the Hon'ble Mr. Atkins that I do not resent his remarks; I really wish that I had done my duty in putting forward this resolution before this Council, in a far better way than I have done. I wish I had not been presumptuous enough to take it up, but it fell to my lot to take it up, and I have done it in the way I could. But Sir, I wish that when he complained that I had not met practical difficulties, Mr. Atkins had mentioned what in his opinion those difficulties are, so that possibly I or some of my friends might have met them. As the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri has pointed out, he has not done so. The one or two he mentioned are of a very small character. One of these was the difficulty of arranging for the viva voce examination in this country. That was a difficulty which was referred to by the Hon'ble the Home Member also. But that was answered sixty years ago. The Civil Service Commissioners were consulted on that point by the Committee which was appointed by the Secretary of State for India.

" They clearly said in their report that in order to aid them in carrying out a scheme of the nature they recommended—

' The Committee have consulted the Civil Service Commission, and the Civil Service Commissioners do not anticipate much difficulty in arranging for that.'

" That was in 1860. In 1866 in discussing the same question in the House of Commons Mr. Fawcett said :—

' An objection might indeed be taken on account of part of the examination being viva voce; but some of the best scholars from English Universities held professorships in India and were perfectly competent to conduct viva voce examinations'

My friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri has mentioned the opinion of Mr. Stanley Leathes and the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha has also pointed out that this is not a real difficulty.

" The second point mentioned by the Hon'ble the Home Member related to the leakage of questions. Unfortunately recently, there have been some leakages; but these have been very recent, and they have been very few and far between in the history of even the Calcutta University; and all the other Universities taken together have on the whole done very well, and I submit, Sir, that if the Government of India can preserve the secrets of the Finance Department it should not be impossible for those who will be entrusted with the carrying out of the examination for the Civil Service to preserve the secrets of the question papers. A secret of the Finance Department might mean untold wealth to a person who might disclose it. But be it said to the honour and credit of those Indians and Europeans who have been connected with the Finance Department of the Government of India, that never has such a thing happened and, I hope it never will.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

"It seems to me, Sir, rather late in the day to put forward these old arguments which, as the Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha has pointed out, have been trotted out over and over again. A Government which is able to meet the Germans, an inveterate foe, with their 20 or 30 years of preparation for a gigantic war, a Government which is able to call forth all the aid of knowledge and science to combat that enemy, should certainly not be found wanting in capacity and ability to devise means for holding an examination simultaneously in India and in England. Then, Sir, India has not been found to be deficient in anything which science and knowledge have discovered. Why not then have certain examinations for the purpose of dealing justly with the people of this country?

"Now, Sir, the one thing that lies at the bottom of this question is whether my European friends, members of the Civil Service and others, if they think at this time of the day that the present state of things is just or fair to Indians, or that it should be allowed to continue without repeated protests, protests which will continue until the Government will find the situation intolerable. I ask in all sobriety, not in anger, nor in bitterness, all my friends sitting here whether they desire that the members of the Civil Service and a certain number of our other English fellow subjects should retain a preponderance in the Indian Civil Service and the other services at the cost of the goodwill of the people of India? I am sure, Sir, no reasonable man would say 'yes' to that. We know, as the Hon'ble Mr. Monahan said, that, when British rule was first established in India, for certain reasons it was necessary to invoke the assistance of British officers. Those reasons do not now exist. Thanks to the education which the Government have provided for us, thanks to the progress which has been made in various other directions, we are well able now to compete with our English fellow subjects, and to fill many offices which have been filled by them heretofore. We do not ask that the preponderance of our English fellow subjects, in the services should not remain for some time. That preponderance will continue for a long time to come even if simultaneous examinations are introduced next year. The preponderance arises from the fact that our fellow subjects have had the start of us for seventy years. It will be maintained for the reasons that they have greater educational facilities. For these and several other reasons the preponderance will continue for some time. And we do not object to a fair number of Britishers being in the service for some time. But I think the object should be steadily to work for the fulfilment of the promises, of the pledges made. I am sorry that any body should call them so-called pledges, and the more so that any member of the Government should use any such expression. They are honest pledges, solemnly made, and an honourable, fulfilment of those pledges demands that Indians shall be admitted in increasing numbers into the Indian Civil Service and that the number of Englishmen shall decrease year by year, not because there is any ill-feeling in us towards Englishmen, but because it is right and just that Indians should preponderate in the service of their own country. I do not think that my European fellow subjects, my British fellow subjects will urge that, taking into account the entirety of circumstances as we find them in India, there is any justification for imposing the additional burden upon the Government of India. The Suzerainty, as one of my Hon'ble friends pointed out yesterday, does not demand the maintenance of a preponderating British element in the services of the country. We own and acknowledge the suzerainty gladly, because we have been assured that our natural claims will be dealt with justly, because those solemn promises and pledges have been made. It will be idle at this time of the day for any one to say that those claims are not going to be honestly satisfied. Any Britisher who said so would be going entirely against the Act of Parliament of 1833, and the Proclamation of 1858, and will be showing himself wanting in that faithful devotion to the pledges of the British Crown and Parliament which is expected of him.

"Sir, there are certain objections which have been raised on the ground that opinion in India was divided and that, with the exception of one member, the whole Commission voted against it. Well, Sir, as my friend the Hon'ble Dr. Sapru has pointed out, the composition of the Commission was very unfortunate. Protests were made against it at the time, but, I am sorry to say, those protests were not heeded, and more representatives of educated Indian opinion were not put on the Commission. We are proud that Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim has put forward the case of educated Indians with the ability and clearness that he has done. That he expressed the general sense of educated India is evident from the resolutions passed in support of his views by the Congress, the Muslim League, the various provincial conferences and by numerous public meetings throughout the country. I am sure the Hon'ble the Home Member will find from the records of his office that my statement is absolutely correct. I believe sufficient evidence has been placed before the Government of India to show that the minority report of Mr. Justice Rahim expressed the sense of educated India, and not the report of the majority.

"With reference, Sir, to the statement that Indian opinion was divided on the question of simultaneous examinations, I wish to read to the Council the opinion of one widely esteemed countryman of ours and that is H. H. the Agha Khan. In supporting the demand for such examinations, he said:—

'I am in favour of simultaneous examinations in England and India. I would give full effect to the Resolution of the House of Commons of June 1893, which will do away with any feeling of discontent that may exist at the idea that the Indian Civil Service has been kept as a preserve for Englishmen and that the children of the soil are kept out from their proper and legitimate share in controlling the administration of the country.'

"Then, Sir, it was said that the Sikhs were not in favour of it. Three Sikh gentlemen gave evidence before the Commission, one of these had to be interpreted through an interpreter, and of the other two, one expressed himself in favour of simultaneous examinations. It is thus clear that enlightened Muhammadan opinion, which commands respect of the community, is in favour of simultaneous examinations, and that Sikh opinion is also partly if not entirely in favour of such examinations.

"Lastly, Sir, an argument has been advanced which, I must say, every one of us Indians must regret. We know that we have many religions and castes in our country; but is there a country in the world in which there are not many religions and many communities? Is it the misfortune of India alone? I am proud that we have so many religions and so many races inhabiting this country. But I am glad to be able to say that Hindu-Muhammadan differences, Brahmin and non-Brahmin differences are not so widespread or so deep as they are said to be and that there is a general agreement among us in connection with the demand we are putting forward. It has been said that if the number of Brahmins is large in the higher services, there will be a general feeling of jealousy against them in the other section of the community. Well, Sir, I make an offer to the Government of India, though I do it without consulting my friends. If that is the only objection the Government have to urge against the holding of simultaneous examinations, I venture to say on behalf of my Brahmin friends throughout the country, that for as many years as the Government will think that the public interest demands it, Brahmin boys will keep back from competing for this examination if the Government will let the rest of my countrymen compete for it. I do not wish to raise any question of Brahmin or non-Brahmin. The late Mr. Gokhale was a Brahmin. The late Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji was a Parsi, but is there an Indian who does not hold them in reverence, who would have hesitated to fall at the feet of Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, and who does not regard him as the greatest Indian patriot?

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Sir [21st SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

“Is there a Muhammadan in the country who did not love Mr. Gokhale as dearly as he loved any other brother?”

“There is my friend Mr. Sastri, the honoured head of the Servants of India Society. He is a Brahmin. But what is it to him that a man is a Hindu, a Muhammadan or a Christian? Is he not serving all his countrymen alike? Does he not want and work that justice should be done to all? It is in that spirit that many distinguished Brahmins have worked in the past. If any have worked in a contrary spirit, I am sorry for them. But it does not behove the Government, or anyone speaking on behalf of Government, to bring forward this argument against the Brahmins, that they alone have intellect and ability to enable them to hold their own against other competitors. It has been said that if the races inhabiting the North-West Frontier Provinces were asked to submit to Brahmins, there would be rebellion, that life and property would not then be safe in that Province. With all deference I am surprised that the Hon'ble the Home Member should have allowed this argument to appear in his speech even by way of narration of other people's arguments. I do not speak of Brahmins in any spirit of vainglory. Brahmins, non-Brahmins, Muhammadans, Christians, Parsis, Europeans, all castes and communities inhabiting India are alike the subjects of His Majesty. It is our duty to cultivate and promote good feeling among us all. We are working here in that spirit and in no other spirit. But Sir, to say that these Frontier Provinces will not submit to Brahmin domination.....”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“I really said nothing of the kind. The Hon'ble Member will allow me to correct him.”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—“To suggest a doubt as to how the Frontier races would look upon the domination of Brahmins.....”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“I referred not to Brahmins particularly but to persons from the West and South of India generally.”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—“Language it has been said, was not made to conceal thought. I fear my Hon'ble friend, without any disrespect to him, uses language which is meant to conceal the full meaning of the suggestion. I do not mean any disrespect, but there it is. However, I will take it in the way he said it. If I am wrong in doing so, I am sure he will excuse me.

“Not long ago, in the reign of Ranjit Singh, a Kashmiri Brahmin—General Nand Ram—was the Governor of Kabul. There have been many other Brahmin Governors, and administrators. In Mysore, in Travancore, in Gwalior, in the Holkar's territories, in Kashmir as well as in many Native States in Rajputana, Brahmins have filled the highest posts with credit to themselves and benefit to the States. The Government have no right to say that if Brahmins are appointed they will be lacking in those qualities which are needed in executive work. But we are not pleading here either for Brahmins or non-Brahmins. What we say is put our educated young men to a fair test along with your British youth. If they succeed in that test, admit them into the service: If they do not succeed, no matter whether they be Brahmins, non-Brahmins, Musalmans, Christians, Parsis or any other class of Indians, keep them out of the service; but do not in fairness exclude them merely because they have the misfortune of being Indians, merely because they happen not to possess the unnatural advantage which has arisen owing to our weakness and your strength, of being in this country in the possession of its government. I mean no disrespect to any one, but every Englishman must recognise that it is owing merely to a fortuitous circumstance that Indians are to day under British rule. Before that rule was established in this country, Indians governed India, and even today one-third of India is governed by Indians. If it should please His Majesty the King-Emperor to allow Indians tomorrow to govern their country in a larger measure than heretofore, I am certain they will not be found wanting. All that I am pleading for is fair play. Let us have fair play. English gentlemen pride themselves on playing the game. I ask my British fellow subjects, and Irish fellow subjects too—I ask them to play the game. Is there one gentleman here who will deny in private that it is not fair to Indians to require them to go to London to compete for admission into the service of their own country? I cannot believe there is. I therefore ask for support from each and all for the proposition I have laid before the Council. I plead earnestly for such support, and I hope my friends will recognise that I am justified in doing so. I hope I will not be misunderstood. I am speaking with the best of intentions. I feel that it is good for my country that British Rule should continue here for a long time to come; and I hope it may never be necessary for Indians and Britishers to part company. But an essential condition of that co-operation is that Indians and Europeans should have equality of opportunity, that Indians should not feel that in their own country, in their own motherland and under their own King-Emperor, they cannot rise beyond a certain limit merely because they are Indians, whatever talents they may possess, whatever character they may possess, whatever qualifications they may possess and whatever their services to the Crown. However unspotted and unsuspected their loyalty may be, they cannot rise beyond a certain point simply because they have the misfortune of being Indians. I submit, Sir, that it is against that we are fighting, and I assure you we are fighting in the best interests of the connection between India and England.....”

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—“I must ask the Hon'ble Pandit to bring his remarks to a conclusion. I have already allowed him to exceed the time-limit. It is nearly 2 o'clock and I think the Hon'ble Member realises that we must finish this debate today. As it is I shall only be able to give the Hon'ble the Home Member a few minutes to reply.”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—“He has replied, Sir.”

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—“The Member in charge has the right to the last word under the Rules.”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—“Very well, Sir, I will finish in a minute. As I am pressed for time I think I cannot do better than conclude by quoting one passage from the report of Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim in which he has put our case in a nutshell. He says:—

‘The main object of the proposal is to remove the otherwise insurmountable handicap against Indian candidates which now artificially secures for British candidates a virtual monopoly of the most important and best paid civil appointments. It is based on the principle that appointments to public offices in India must be settled on the test of qualifications and not on presumptions arising from race or place of birth. If the desire to secure what is mildly called a ‘British minimum,’ but which, in the contemplation of the majority of the Commissioners, really means 80 per cent. or more of these posts, is to be given precedence over the test of qualifications, that can only be justified on a priori considerations of racial superiority. This according to the Indian view, should be regarded as inadmissible. Their contention is that the test of an examination such as that conducted by the Civil Service Commissioners should be supreme and the advantages which racial characteristics or training give to British candidates ought to, and will in fact, find expression in the results of the examination. The English candidates have the advantage of the language and of a more efficient system of training and education: that ought to suffice—as all Indian witnesses think it will—to secure for such of them as are of average intellectual gifts a predominance in the service. Only those British candidates whose mental powers are below the average will fail in the competition. Any arrangements which would secure men of the latter class, far from ensuring the British character of the administration, would only do serious disservice to it as well as to the prestige of the British people.’

“I have nothing to add to that, Sir. I hope my Resolution will be accepted.”

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA AND ENGLAND.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah; the Vice-President; Sir William Vincent; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

[21ST SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"Sir, I rise to a point of order. Has the Member in charge the right of reply after the mover has replied."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"Certainly. The Hon'ble Member has no doubt read the rules."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Sir, I have only a very few words to say in reply, and I seek really to remove one or two misapprehensions which seem to me to have crept into the debate. In the first place, it has been assumed that the Government is definitely committed to opposing this principle of simultaneous examinations, because I said for particular reasons. I could not in present circumstances accept this Resolution and because I cited certain arguments against the proposal. Well, I tried to make it clear and if I failed it is due to some fault of mine—that the Government are not committed to any decision on this question.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah charged me with only quoting arguments against the proposal. Sir, my answer is really a very simple one. What was there left for me to say on behalf of the proposal after the Hon'ble Pandit had spoken? He had exhausted all the arguments in favour of it, and in the circumstances I wanted to place the Council in possession of particular arguments against it which must also be weighed by the Government of India. There has again been a suggestion that the Commission and the Government really intend to be unjust to Indians and that they intend to make it necessary for them to go to England in order to secure entry into the Civil Service....."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"May I rise to point out, Sir, that we have never suggested that the Government want to be unjust. We are fighting against the recommendations of the Commission."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"If I am incorrect I withdraw the statement. I understood that that was the suggestion. There was certainly a suggestion that injustice was contemplated in regard to Indians in that they were to be forced to go to England to enter into the Civil Service. This is far from what the Commissioners, as I understand them, propose. They distinctly propose to open an avenue in India for Indians to get into the Civil Service and the only question really is whether the scheme which they propose is as suitable as a system of simultaneous examinations.

"Then we have been told that Sikhs and Muhammadans, I think it was Mr. Sastri's argument, do not at present secure proper representation in the service and that they will therefore not lose by the proposed changes? I think also that the Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah suggested that there was no reason why Government should assume that Muhammadans and Sikhs would prefer Europeans to Brahmins in the Civil Service. Well, the answer is that the Commission do not seek to perpetuate the present state of affairs, and if there is any injustice to Indians I am sure the Government will support them in getting it removed. What the Commission seek to introduce is a system by which the number of Indians in the Service may be increased and pro tanto the number of Europeans decreased. But the further question will arise for consideration as to whether something should not be done to secure due representation of all classes by means of a separate examination in this country.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Jinnah also referred to a period when the character of the whole administration would change and when it would be no longer necessary to maintain the British character of the Indian Civil Service, because they would be, as I understood, servants of the people, that is to say under the control of some form of legislative or popular assembly. Well, the answer to that is that we are at present considering the position of things as they are. If these recommendations of the Commission are accepted they will have to be put in force at once, and whatever the future may hold during that transition period at any rate it is—I do not wish again to put it too strongly—it is of importance that the British character of the administration should be maintained. If however during the whole course of this debate I have failed to make one point clear, namely, that the Government are in no way hostile to the idea of Indians being more freely admitted to the Indian Civil Service, that they approach that question perfectly openly and that they are not committed even on the question which is now under discussion, then I can only regret my failure to express the intentions of Government more explicitly.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg asked:—

Sale of Council Bills.

I. "(a) Is Government aware that the recent alteration in the rate at which the Secretary of State will sell Council Bills has aroused considerable anxiety in commercial and banking circles in India and that the prevailing uncertainty as to the future exchange policy of Government is seriously hampering the finance of exports of national importance ?

(b) Will Government remove the uncertainty by making a pronouncement of their exchange policy and stating whether the recent change is a war emergency measure only, or is to be regarded as an abandonment of the policy of a fixed and stable exchange ; and, if it is a war emergency measure only, whether further changes may be expected during the continuance of the war in the event of any considerable rise or fall taking place in the price of silver ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

" I will answer both parts of this question together. As the Government of India announced in a recent press communiqué dated the 19th September, a copy of which was supplied to my Hon'ble friend at the time, the Secretary of State has authorised the Government of India to make the following statement with regard to the conditions by which he is being, and will for the present be, guided in fixing his Council rates. These rates are being, and will continue to be, based roughly on the price at which the Secretary of State is able to buy silver. He cannot be expected to sell rupees at appreciably less than their actual cost, but he intends to apply this principle with considerable latitude so as to avoid changes as far as possible.

It will thus be seen that the recent raising of the price of the Secretary of State's Council drawings has been brought about by abnormal increase in the price of silver, which is in its turn a product of the special circumstances of this worldwide war. The measures adopted to meet these circumstances must not be considered as amounting in any way to abandonment of the policy of a fixed and stable exchange.

The Government of India recognise that a rise in the rate of exchange is per se prejudicial to our export trade just as that trade is hampered by the limitations which it has been necessary to impose on the volume of the Secretary of State's Council drawings. But as has been repeatedly explained, the Government of India and the Secretary of State embark on any such action with the greatest reluctance and simply in order to prevent greater evils. In short, the abnormal circumstances of the war require, every now and then, action in restraint of trade which the Government would not impose in time of peace."

The Hon'ble Captain Ajab Khan, Sardar Bahadur asked:—

2. "Is it a fact—

(a) that retired Indian officers who hold the honorary rank of Lieutenant or Captain and are re-employed in the army get none of those privileges, e.g., travelling allowance, lodging, etc., which are enjoyed by officers of similar rank in the other branches of military service? and

(b) that when retired Indian officers holding the honorary rank of Lieutenant or Captain are invited to attend Durbars and other ceremonial functions, they are not given the privileges as to conveyance and lodging which their rank entitles them to under the Army Regulations?"

Retired
Officers holding honorary rank of Lieutenant or Captain.

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied:—

"(a) Retired Indian Officers who hold the honorary rank of Lieutenant or Captain and are re-employed in the Army travel on warrant on all occasions except when warrants cannot be issued by road, when they draw travelling allowances at the rate of two annas a mile. The fact that these officers hold honorary rank does not entitle them to draw travelling allowance as for officers holding equal substantive rank, and when travelling on duty they draw allowances according to the scales laid down for Indian officers.

Neither British nor Indian officers receive lodging allowance under Indian regulations. Detention allowance is, however, granted under certain circumstances.

(b) When they attend Durbars or other ceremonial functions they are entitled to the privileges enjoyed by Indian officers. Their honorary rank does not entitle them, in the absence of any rules in Army Regulations, to the privileges enjoyed by officers of equal substantive rank."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked:—

3. "(a) Has any Circular letter been addressed to Local Governments inviting suggestions for amendment of the Indian Universities Act?"

The Indian
Act.

(b) If so, will Government lay on the table a copy of the Circular letter and the replies, if any, received?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied:—

"(a) Yes.

(b) The Government do not now propose to lay the correspondence on the table."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[ Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda ; Sir William Vincent. ]

[ 24TH SEPTEMBER, 1917. ]

The Hon'ble Mr Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

The Irish Home Rule question.

4. " Is it a fact—

(a) that the Irish Home Rule question has been before the British Government and nation for about half a century ?

(b) that it has times without number caused bloodshed and serious outrages against life and property ?

(c) that only last year there was a rebellion in Ireland which had to be put down by the Military ?

(d) that the British Government has taken up the question of its immediate settlement and even granted an amnesty to all political prisoners and invited representatives of all parties in Ireland to form a convention to discuss the question ?"

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—

" With regard to Question No. 4, I beg to say that parts of the Question as sent by me have been disallowed. I do not think that it will serve any useful purpose to put the question as it stands on the agenda. I beg leave to withdraw it."

The question was by leave withdrawn.

The Indraprastha Girls' School in Delhi.

5. "(a) Is there a girls' school in Delhi called the Indraprastha Girls' School established in 1904, and is it a fact that Miss Gmeiner was Lady Superintendent thereof from 1905, and that last year this school with an enrolment of 350 girls, was raised to the status of a High School, and that the school was receiving a grant-in-aid of Rs. 200 a month ?

(b) Is it a fact that after the opening of a Branch Home Rule League at Delhi, the grant-in-aid has been withdrawn on the ground that the Lady Superintendent Miss Gmeiner had joined the League and that she must withdraw either from the school or the League ?

(c) Is it a fact that at the same time the payment of the scholarship money which was then overdue was also withheld ?

(d) Is it a fact that the said school is the largest girls' school in Delhi and that though all other schools were given one evening in the week to visit the Delhi Fort Gardens no day was allotted to it.

(e) Is it a fact that the Lady Superintendent and the Honorary Secretary of the School Committee gave an assurance to the Chief Commissioner that the Home Rule League is quite apart from the school and that no member of the School Committee nor any person connected with the school besides Miss Gmeiner and an Honorary worker, Miss Priest, had anything whatever to do with the Home Rule League ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

" (a) The Indraprastha Girl's School, Delhi, had at the time of its last report 325 girls on the Register. It received a grant-in-aid of Rs. 289 per mensem.

(b) The Head Mistress informed the Chief Commissioner that she has started and was Honorary Secretary of, a Branch of the Home Rule League. As he held it to be contrary to public policy that teachers in schools enjoying grants-in-aid from public money should be allowed to take a prominent part in a political agitation of this type, he informed the managing committee that unless Miss Gmeiner withdrew from active participation in the work of the League, it would be necessary to withdraw the grant. On the Committee declining to compel this lady to take this course, the Chief Commissioner withdrew the grant-in-aid from the School.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Sir William Vincent ; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda ; Mr. F. C. Rose ; Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi.]

(c) The grant-in-aid having been withdrawn the school became 'unrecognised' for the purpose of the Education Code and the payment of scholarships ceased in consequence.

(d) It has been ascertained that the Inspectress of Schools conducted parties of girls from certain schools in Delhi to see the Fort Gardens but did not conduct a party from the Indraprastha Girls' School. The matter was not one which came before the local Administration and no orders were passed on the point.

(e) The Chief Commissioner, Delhi, reports that the Honorary Secretary informally stated that the work of the League was separate from the work of the School and at the same time expressed his own disapproval of the connection of the Head Mistress with the Home Rule League. The management of the school have not addressed the Chief Commissioner on this subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

6. "(a) Is it a fact :—

(i) that a reading room called the Home Rule Reading Room was lately opened at Delhi, and

Home Rule
Reading Room
in Delhi.

(ii) that the management of the reading room complained of harassment at the hands of the Criminal Investigation Department, not only by crowding the room but making it a rule to follow and harass visitors so as to make them discontinue their visits?

(b) If so, was any inquiry made about the complaint?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"(a) (i) The fact is as stated.

(a) (ii) and (b) The management have made no complaint either to the Chief Commissioner or to other local authorities of harassment by the Criminal Investigation Department."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda asked :—

7. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state if the Public Works Reorganisation Committee has submitted its report?

Report of
Works Reorganisation Committee.

(b) Is the report unanimous?

(c) Will this Council be given an opportunity of making observations on the recommendations of the Committee before action is taken by Government thereon?

(d) Will Government be pleased to place the report on the table?"

The Hon'ble Mr. F. C. Rose replied :—

"The answer to part (a) of the question is in the negative.

Answers to part (b), (c) and (d) cannot be given until the report has been received."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

8. "(a) Have any Bills to provide for compulsory elementary education been introduced in Legislative Councils in India? If so, in which of the Legislative Councils have such Bills been introduced?

education.

(b) Have any other private Bills for the same purpose been forwarded to Government for sanction? If so, for what Provinces and areas are they intended?

(c) Do Government propose to introduce any Bills on their own initiative for this purpose in Provinces where no steps have yet been taken to introduce compulsory elementary education?"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis ; Sir William Meyer.] [24TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

" (a) A Bill to amend the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901, with a view to empowering Municipalities under certain conditions to make elementary education compulsory, has been introduced in the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay.

(b) No other private Bills for this purpose have been forwarded to the Government of India for sanction. But the Government of India have officially received a copy of a Bill further to amend the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, for making elementary education compulsory in the city of Bombay.

(c) The Government of India have at present no such intention."

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis asked :—

The Income Tax Act.

9. " (a) Is the question of a revision of the Income Tax Act under consideration as stated on the 9th July by the Hon'ble Sir George Barnes at the Bombay Chamber of Commerce ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to indicate the nature and scope of the changes under contemplation ?

(c) Is it a fact that at present refund can only be claimed by application on forms which have to be signed at least in some of the Provinces by applicants before the Collector of Income Tax or a Justice of the Peace or a Magistrate ?

(d) If so, is Government aware that compliance with this rule is not practicable in the case of pardanashin ladies or small holders of securities in the interior ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to consider in connection with the general question of revision the desirability —

(i) of embodying a statutory provision for refund after inquiry of income tax deducted from interest due upon Government Promissory Notes, Port Trust Debentures and like securities upon claims preferred by the persons referred to in (d) ; or

(ii) of issuing instructions to the same effect to Local Governments and Administrations ?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer replied :—

(a) Yes. As I explained to the Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce last month, the Government of India hoped to introduce a Bill for the purpose towards the end of the present session of the Legislative Council, the intention being merely to introduce the Bill and then to publish it and refer it to Local Governments and Administrations and to the public for criticism. The revision of the Act has, however, proved to be a more difficult and complicated task than we expected, and owing to this cause and to the pressure of work during the present Council session, it has not been possible to complete the preparation of the Bill in time for introduction before this session closes. We propose, however, to carry out our previous intention as far as possible, and, as soon as the drafting of the Bill has been completed, to publish it. This we now expect to do during the course of next month. Ample opportunity will thus be afforded to the public for consideration of the provisions of the Bill and for putting forward suggestions. The Bill will then be formally introduced in the next Delhi session of the Legislative Council.

(b) The main object of the revision of the existing Act is to bring together all sources of an assessee's income for the purpose of determining the rate at which he shall be assessed on each part of it. Legislation for this purpose became essential with the adoption of graduated rates of tax in 1916. A detailed examination of the existing Act has shown that in order to give effect to this object, it will be necessary to recast the whole Act. Apart from this, the replies which we received from Local Governments and others to our reference on the subject have shown that numerous amendments are required in order to bring our income tax machinery as a whole up to date and to make it efficient. As the various alterations suggested are still under examination, it is not possible at present to make any definite statement as to the nature and scope of the changes contemplated, but, as I have just explained, it is our intention to publish the Bill for general information and criticism as soon as we can. I may add to prevent any misapprehension, that the new Bill deals, as has been said with the improvement of machinery and is not intended to make any alteration in the rates of income-tax leviable. That is a budgetary matter, and if and when any modification in the existing rates of taxation should be found desirable, it will form a part of a Budget programme.

(c) The rules governing applications for refunds are made by Local Governments and Administrations, but the Government of India understand that in some Provinces at least the position is as stated by the Hon'ble Member.

(d) The Government of India have received no representations that pardhanashin ladies or small holders of securities in the interior of the country find it impracticable to comply with any of the rules relating to refunds which have been issued by Local Governments. It would be for Local Governments to deal with such representations, and the Government of India have no doubt that in the event of any difficulties arising, these will be duly considered by Local Governments.

(e) The Government of India recognize the importance of ensuring the grant of refunds promptly and with a minimum of inconvenience to applicants who may be entitled to them. Thus in addressing Local Governments on the subject last year, they explained that they wished simplicity and the convenience of assesses to be studied as far as possible in the procedure to be adopted for refunds, and that they would be glad to co-operate by assenting to any details of procedure which would tend to this object, should their sanction be required on any particular point. Some difficulties occurred at the outset before the procedure for dealing with refund applications was settled, but the Government of India are sure that Local Governments are doing what they can to minimize inconvenience to assesses. We have at present under examination the manner in which refunds in respect of income-tax deducted from interest on Government promissory notes and other securities can most conveniently be dealt with in the Bill above referred to and we shall in due course consider whether any general instructions are necessary to supplement the provisions of the Bill.

(i) The proposed Banking legislation for India, and

(ii) the post-war trade reforms?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table the opinions which have so far been received?"

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) I lay on the table copies of the replies* received on the subject of Banking Legislation. The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to move the following Resolution :—

" This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Government of India should move the Secretary of State that, in case it be decided that a certain proportion of the Indian Civil Service officers recruited every year should be selected on the result of a competitive examination held for the purpose in India, that proportion should be not less than one half of the total number of the posts included in the cadre of the Indian Civil Service and not one-fourth as recommended by the Public Services Commission."

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya]

“ Sir, the resolution which I moved relating to the question of simultaneous examinations expresses, I venture to say, the sense of the bulk of the educated community of India, as has been made very clear by the resolutions passed at the Indian National Congress and the numerous conferences and by the Moslem League, and the meetings which have been held throughout the country. It is the conviction of Indians that in order to satisfy the legitimate aspirations of educated Indians this is the one means which should be adopted, the means which was recommended as most necessary for fulfilment of the pledges given to Indians by the Act of 1833, and the Proclamation of 1858, and was recommended by the committee appointed by the Secretary of State. For these many years we have urged that this should be done and we still urge that this is the right course to pursue. The reasons for it I do not wish to dilate upon at this moment because I have dwelt upon them already. But I wish to make it clear that if I am putting forward an alternative resolution, it is not to be understood that I in any way abandon the position taken up by educated Indians generally on the question of simultaneous examinations. We feel that this is the best solution of the problem. We want to obliterate distinctions of race and creed, between Europeans and Indians who are to serve His Majesty's Government and this great country. We want that Indians and Europeans who enter the Indian Civil Service should feel in every respect that they stand on a footing of equality and we feel that that equality can only be secured if they are submitted to the same intellectual test, if they enter by the same door of open competition, if they are placed in all respects on an equal footing with the members of the Civil Service. Now Sir, if unfortunately the Government should decide that simultaneous examinations shall not be held I am certain that there will be a great deal of dissatisfaction in the country, I am certain that the solution will not be accepted as satisfactory. But if simultaneous examinations are not agreed to, and if the Government decide to fix a certain proportion of posts in the Civil Service to be competed for in India, then the second question which I wish to urge upon the consideration of Government is that the proportion of the appointments to be competed for should be such as would give some satisfaction to the educated community. The proportion which has been recommended by the Royal Commission is one-fourth, one-fourth of the superior posts, Mr. Chaubal has pointed out how that works injuriously even so far as that proportion is concerned. Mr. Justice Abdur Rahim has urged that the proportion should be one-third.

“ The Government of Madras urged, so far back as 1893, that one-third of the appointments in the Indian Civil Service might well be left to be recruited for in India. Mr. Barrow, a senior member of the Bombay Civil Service, also urged before the Commission that the number might well be one-third. That indicates, that, in the case of one of these provincial governments and in the case of one senior member at least of the Indian Civil Service, it was recommended that the number might well be fixed at one-third. As I have submitted Sir, that number will not satisfy the aspirations of Indians. The numerous protests that have been made against these recommendations should probably convince the Government of this, and if the proportion must be fixed I submit that it should be half of the total number of the posts in the Civil Service and not one-fourth as the Commission recommend.

“ I do not think, Sir, that I need advance any arguments in support of this proposition. It is a matter mainly to be considered now in what attitude, in what frame of mind, the Government will approach the solution of this question. If they approach it from pre-war conditions, if they approach it from the conditions which existed before these three years of great change had occurred, then they might as well spend their time in considering whether the recommendations of the Commission should not be accepted. If, on the other hand, they will bear in mind the announcement of the policy made by His Majesty's Government that responsible government is the aim of

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

[24TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

British policy in India, if they will bear in mind the announcement made by His Excellency that the employment of Indians in an ever-increasing measure in the higher services of the country is essential to the attainment of the goal of self-government which His Majesty's Government had announced then I am sure the Government will consider it their duty to revise the whole question in that light, and if they do so they will have to consider what it is that will satisfy the aspirations of Indians. Now, Sir, we are not asking merely for a few loaves and fishes of the higher services. We want that in our country, in the course of a few years—it may be a few decades—Indians should be able to occupy the same positions of trust and responsibility as the educated men of other countries occupy in their own country. For the attainment of that object we have urged an equal intellectual test. If that is not accepted, we say 'very well, fix a proportion, but half of the posts is the minimum that can reasonably satisfy us.' Our British fellow subjects who compete at present for the Indian Civil Service do so because, owing to circumstances which existed here in India, they have been doing so for a long time and the claims of Indians have not been properly admitted and acknowledged or properly given effect to. But in the future that lies before us, they will have to consider whether, if Indians are to have responsible Government, they should not be admitted in a larger and larger measure into the administration of their country.

"There are two questions which arise in this connection. These two questions were urged in the debate on the previous occasion. One was that the British character of the administration has to be maintained. On this point, Sir, I wish very respectfully to point out—and I hope none of my European friends will misunderstand me—whether it is not time for them to look at this question in a different light, whether instead of harping upon the necessity of maintaining the British character of the administration, they should not now say that the character of the administration should be Indian, as modified, influenced, corrected, if you please, improved, by association with our British fellow subjects. The British character of the administration does not require that Britishers in large numbers should be employed in the Indian Civil Service and other services. The British character of the administration has been imprinted upon the country by the institutions which our British fellow-subjects have established in India. Those institutions are not going to be interfered with. The ideals which they have led us to appreciate, the ideals which they have established in this country, will be maintained in their full entirety, even when the number of British officers in the services is diminished, even when it is very largely diminished. The principles for which British administration stands are not confined only now to the administration of India. It is the proud boast of England that it has led other countries, with which it is not even connected in any way, to adopt many principles of British administration, British justice and British ideas of freedom and self-government. Those ideas, those institutions, will be maintained, I hope, and improved in their maintenance by their being Indianised wherever it is necessary; but the great thing to be aimed at for the full development of India and to enable her to work out her own destiny, is that the character of the administration, while it preserves all that is best in the English system of administration, should be specially, particularly, definitely Indian, and that means that all that was best in our own Indian civilisation, Hindu and Muhammadan, should now be blended and mixed, in order to improve the present British system of administration which obtains in India. That system, Sir, as it obtains in this country is not, I am sorry to say, either purely British or purely Indian. It is not purely British because it does not conform to all the principles which govern British administration in the British Isles. It departs from it in many respects into which it is not necessary for me to go on this occasion. It is not Indian. What is needed is that in future a system should be developed which should be mainly Indian, influenced and

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

improved, as far as it may be, by the adoption and maintenance of the principles of British administration which have been accepted and found to be good and sound in practice. And here I may say that this has already been very much realised in practice in those Indian States where the British administration and the Indian administration have been blended together with very happy results and with results which are far more satisfactory than have yet been obtained in British India.

"Now, Sir, the second point I would refer to is the consideration of British interests. It has again and again been urged that, as British interests have to be protected, the admission of a very large number of Indians into the services is a matter of doubtful expediency. The other day one of my friends urged that the railway, steamer and other industrial interests had to be protected. Railway interests are largely Indian. It is the people of India who have contributed 500 crores and more for building up the railways. They are owned by the Government of India. The few railways that may be owned by Companies will, I hope, before long be bought up by the Government of India. So far as steamers are concerned the interests of trade and commerce are of a temporary character. They come and go. Every week they make purchases and they make sales, and those interests we have no fear of suffering if the administration is somewhat modified. As far as industrial interests are concerned, we wish to have more of these. We wish that our British fellow-subjects who desire to come and establish concerns amongst us will come and co-operate with us in doing so, and I do not see why they should apprehend any danger. There are other countries besides India where English capital is invested. I suppose it is invested in Japan; I suppose it is invested in China also; and I do not know that my English fellow-subjects desire that they should have a hand in the Government of either China or Japan. I submit, Sir, that English interests even when they are represented by English industrial interests compare as nothing before the vast interests of the 315 millions of His Majesty's Indian subjects. The question to consider is what the interests of the great bulk of the population demand, and in considering those interests undoubtedly to bear in mind the interests of even the smaller body. I do not wish that there should be any conflict of European and Indian interests in that direction. This country is a very vast one and I think that even when we develop, as we hope to develop in the not distant future, into a country with full self-governing institutions, even then I venture to think that we shall have very great room for our European fellow subjects who will wish to come and trade with us. Therefore, I submit, Sir, that neither the argument of British interests nor the argument of the necessity for maintaining the British character of the administration ought to stand in the way of determining the proportion of Indians which ought to be employed in the public services of their own country.

I have submitted that so far back as 1893, one Provincial Government recommended that it should be one-third, and I urge now that, if a minimum is to be fixed, it should be a half and not less. I suggest that, bearing in mind that the London door will be open still to Indians; because our whole object is that there should be no limit placed to the number of Indians who should be employed, the only limit being the limit of intellectual test, capacity and character. If we are found on a fair and equal intellectual test to be inferior to our English fellow-subjects, we shall be content to keep back. If we prove that in an equal test we are not inferior to our English fellow-subjects, we have every right to enter the service of our own country. I say without hesitation we have a preferential right, a very much preferential right to enter the services of our own country as against our English fellow-subjects. Therefore I submit that there should be no limit placed, and that an equal test should be open to all; or, if there must be a limit placed, that the limit should be only so far as recruitment in India is concerned and that it should be not less than half.

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ; Rai Bahadur Bishan Dutt Shukul.] [24TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

" I hope Government, in considering this question, will bear in mind that they have to satisfy Indian aspirations in such a way that all feelings of acerbity, all feelings of harshness, in considering the position of Indians in the public services of their own country, should be obliterated. Indians should feel that they have as good, as reasonable, as fair an opportunity of rising to the higher ranks of those services as their English fellow-subjects have in the services of their own country. In order to bring that about the question has to be approached, not from the point of view of how many Indians may be admitted into the public services, but from the point of view of what are the facilities which should be given to Indians in order that they may enter it in as large numbers as possible. The appointment of Englishmen to the public services of India should in future be regarded as an abnormal thing to be maintained only for a certain time. The normal thing that should be aimed at is the appointment of Indians in as large numbers as possible.

" For these reasons I commend this Resolution to the consideration of Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Bishan Dutt Shukul :—" Sir, the various aspects of the question now before the Council have already been so exhaustively dealt with during the previous debates and in the eloquent speech of the Hon'ble Mover to-day that in according my support to this Resolution I do not propose to enter into all those details and speculations, as to what the position of Indians in the higher services of the country should now have been, if the provision of the Act of 1833, and the Proclamation of 1858, in the matter, had been loyally carried out.

" I would rather rest the case for the recruitment in the future of Indians and Europeans in the Indian Civil Service, in equal numbers, on those very grounds, which have induced the responsible authorities now, as is apparent from Lord Islington's speech, to advocate that the Executive Councils should be composed half of Indians and half Europeans. As I said in the speech which I made in support of Hon'ble Mr. Shafi's Resolution Government will hereafter be subjected to continuous and incessant popular pressure and to my mind Government would be lacking in one of the essential elements of strength, if Indians are not, equally with the Europeans, made responsible for the administration of the country. In that view of the case, where once the departure is made in appointing men to high office, it is no use, in fact, it is even dangerous to appoint a few men only here and there in the service. As Justice Rahim has put it, 'that will solve no problem.' The proportion to be fixed should be such as would dispel the feeling of helpless isolation which is sure to take possession of their minds under present conditions, and as would enable them, in the words of Mr. Chaubal, collectively to feel, that the responsibility, for strong and wise Government of the people, rests as much on them, as on the European members in the services. Sir, there is a constant call for our co-operation made in these days. In local bodies, Legislative Councils and other spheres, that co-operation is being rendered in varying degrees. But the co-operation can never be complete unless in the Services themselves Indians occupy an equal status and enjoy equal privileges. As in the case of the Executive Councils so also in the Indian Civil Service considerations both of justice and expediency seem to me to require an equal proportion of Indians and Europeans. Sir, there is plenty of administrative talent available in this country and it is but fair that an equal chance is given to it, and that it should be unreservedly drawn upon.

" Sir, I think the time has come, especially in view of the abundant proofs of loyalty given by Indians in the present war, that questions arising from jealousy of races and the rivalry for public employment should altogether vanish. We are now on the eve of an important reconstruction of the Empire. We expect before long that there will be a large extension of the principle of representation in this country. The Resolution now before the Council is therefore not only modest but most opportune. It definitely lays down the exact proportion of posts in the Civil Services, which should go to Indians. It places before the Council that 'irreducible minima' nothing less than which will satisfy the legitimate aspirations of educated Indians. An adverse decision on this point is sure to lead to disappointment and create a feeling of dissatisfaction amongst the influential educated classes of this vast country. On the other hand, if this Resolution is accepted, it will not only remove a long standing grievance, but will also bring about between the Government and the people that complete sympathy and that mutual understanding of each other's motives and actions, which is absolutely essential in the best interests of the country and that of the good Government as well. For this reason, above all, I am sure this Resolution will commend itself to the acceptance of the Council.

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Rai Bahadur Bishan Dutt Mahabir, Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi.]

"The Hon'ble the Home Member already assured us the other day that Government would be quite willing to concede to us a fair share in highest services of the country and that fair share, I beg to submit, Sir, is 50 per cent. as demanded by the Hon'ble Member in the Resolution he now moves."

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi :—

"Sir, though it was unfortunate that Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan's Resolution on simultaneous Civil Service Examinations in India and in England was lost at the last meeting of the Council, I hope my Hon'ble colleagues will not be reluctant to accept the motion which we are just discussing. Sir, in the opening speech of His Excellency the Viceroy at this Council on the 5th instant, His Excellency was pleased to observe that one of the three ways in which we were to travel on our way to the final attainment of our goal was the greater admission of our countrymen into the higher and more responsible offices of the State in various departments. Speaking in a different language, the late Secretary of State for India, Mr. Chamberlain, said not many months ago that Indians could no longer remain content as mere hewers of wood and drawers of water. Sir, with the growth of national consciousness among my people, there has been a greater and greater demand for admission into ranks which for a long time have remained closed for our people. The Government is now getting awakened to the fact that it would no longer be wise or expedient to refuse admission to Indians of proved merit and qualifications, and almost every year some new offices and some new doors of employment are being opened out for Indians. But, Sir, it must not be forgotten that the Indian Civil Service is the highest service in the State and is the service to which a very large number of our educated countrymen naturally desire to get admitted into. Unfortunately, the conditions of the Indian Civil Service Examination have not hitherto been greatly helpful to the fulfilment of their aspirations. Sir, it is no good to deprive ambitious Indians of the opportunities of life they seek, for, ambition deferred, like hope, 'maketh the heart sick.' The consequent disappointment naturally resolves itself into a grievance of the people and a source of considerable embarrassment to the Government. I would, under the circumstances, very much wish the Hon'ble Home Member to accept the present motion of my Hon'ble friend, for it does not make an impossible demand or a demand that the Government should be reluctant to accept. The Public Services Commission recommends a sort of competitive examination to be held in India for the purpose of filling up not more than one-fourth of the total number of posts included in the cadre of the Indian Civil Service, but this recommendation even if given effect to will be far from satisfying the requirements and aspirations of the Indian people. I think Pandit Madan Mohan's proposal to increase this number from one-fourth to one-half is only a fair and reasonable demand, and I, therefore, feel no hesitation whatever in supporting this motion."

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir William Vincent.]

[24TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis:—"Sir, this resolution is a practical solution of the differences of opinion that exist in the country concerning the higher appointments that should be given to Indians. I am sure that the suggestion embodied herein will be more in conformity with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission and with the expert opinion that has been formed on the subject. In gradually following the line of action laid down in this resolution there will be not much disturbance in the machinery of Government as at present constituted. It is a machinery which, as is said somewhere is very delicately poised. I am sure that this proposal if approved and gradually given effect to will for a good long time meet the requirements of this country. The concession is not asked for as a reward for services rendered by the people in this crisis. That is a duty which the people as loyal subjects of the King Emperor have to do; but this proposition with salaries adjusted according to Indian conditions will be a relief to the finances of the country when help will be most necessary, and when the country along with an accelerated progress in matters like education, sanitation and development of communications will be required to pay very heavily for the defence of the country, both as regards per Army and Navy."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, I have great pleasure in supporting this resolution, and my reasons are briefly as follow. For the purpose of my argument I shall assume that the strength of the Indian Civil Service officers that is found necessary at present in the several provinces will continue to be found necessary hereafter also. I shall take for my example the province of Bihar and Orissa. This province was formed in 1912. It has gone through the stress of the war; its people cannot be said to be less warlike or turbulent than the other people of India. Patna or Pataliputra was the ancient capital of India for a very long time, and therefore if the virile qualities of the people continue much the same I am sure that it cannot be said that the requirements of that province would be in any way less than the requirements of other provinces. Now this province has a population of 34 millions and we have been able, thanks to the officers there, to manage successfully the administration of that province through a trying period with 104 officers—I believe it is between 104 and 112. At that rate, taking the population of British India at 231 millions, I think the number of British officers that will be absolutely required would be about 728. We have at present 1,411 officers. Therefore taking it that the requirements of security demand as large a British element as exists at present in Bihar and Orissa, I think Indians can be safely granted half the number of posts in the existing Indian Civil Service Cadre. It is to be noted that the Commissioners recommend the increase of the Indian element therein.

"I may be permitted to point out in this connection that there are certain provinces whose districts are very small in area comparatively speaking, and which seem to have too many British officers. I am not going into the past history of those provinces; at the time those provinces were formed it may be that it was felt to be necessary owing to the recent conquest of those provinces that a large British element should be introduced. But from the observations which fell the other day from His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, we may take it that a province like the Punjab could at present be managed with a very much smaller percentage of European officers than are at present found therein. His Honour paid a tribute to the common-sense and sanity of the people of that province and to the perfect loyalty therein. If that be so, and if 34 millions of people in Bihar and Orissa can be managed by 104 officers, why should a population of 19 millions in the Punjab have 153....."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—"May I ask the Hon'ble Member what population he assigned to Bihar?"

RESOLUTION PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Sir William Vincent.]The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" 34 millions. "The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" Yes ; that is correct. "

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Similarly with regard to the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh. The United Provinces have 47 millions or say 28 more, and they have got 237 officers there. The Hindi-speaking people occupying the United Provinces, a large proportion of the population thereof, are very nearly allied to those in the adjoining province of Bihar ; and I fail to see why the Indian element in the United Provinces cannot be safely enlarged to a very considerable extent.

" The same observation holds good as regards Bombay. That is one aspect of the question. I know that there are differences in the revenue, and judicial work therein ; wide differences ; but I may point out, Sir, that the Indian has been found to be as good a Collector of Revenue as the European ; and as to judicial administration, it has been recognised by all that the Indian is efficient, and several witnesses have deposed that the number may be increased to as much as two-thirds. Consequently assuming that the revenue which some of other provinces realise larger than that of Bihar and Orissa, which is a permanently-settled province, I take it that so far as the security question is concerned, the British element need not be as large as it is at present in those provinces.

" Then again the evidence shows that many of the witnesses did not think that it would be unsafe, so far as the executive services are concerned, to go so far as one-third, and the judiciary according to some could be almost wholly composed of Indians and according to others two-thirds, half and three-fourths. Turning to page 223 of the Public Services Commission Report, we have there 1,208 officers in the executive line and 242 in the judicial line. But I am afraid that the assistant collectors who form the training reserve and leave reserve have been put almost wholly under the head executive rather than under the judicial.

The number of superior judicial officers is 193, and if we take the training reserve at 95 per cent, I think the total number will come to about 376. If we give two-thirds to Indians the total will be 259 and then one-third of the executive officers will be 345. The total would come to about 600 or a little less than half the present strength of the Civil Service. There is another point that the Public Services Commission have realised and that is that some of these districts may have to be broken up and Additional District Collectors may have to be appointed. In such a case the number of Indian members can be safely increased and that would bring us to a limit of half, as has been pointed by the Hon'ble Mr. Malaviya. The reason perhaps why Bihar is content with a small number is the fact that it has been constituted recently and that its revenue is small compared with the revenue of the other provinces. From the security point of view, and that is the point I am now dealing with, I do not think that there is any difference. There is not much complaint with regard to the sufficiency of the number of officers, it has been vaguely suggested before the Public Services Commission but it has not been pressed. Turning to the cadre of the superior services we find that only Collectors are in it in Bihar and Orissa. Whereas, in Madras Sub-collectors are included therein which accounts for the differences in the strength of the cadres in the several provinces. I have another observation to make and it is this : hereafter it will be extremely difficult to induce very clever men to come from the United Kingdom having regard to the fact that after this devastating war there will be fewer brilliant men there. In these circumstances it seems to me that the Government will have to be satisfied with the best Indian talent for a long time to come and for that reason I would urge that there should be an increasing proportion of Indians in the Civil Service. May I also point out that if the strength of the executive councils be increased it follows necessarily that in the administration also the Indian element will have to be strengthened. With these words I beg to support the Resolution."

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru ; Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda.] [24TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru :—“ Sir, I confess that I can accept this Resolution only as a second-best. The real sentiments of the educated classes are those which are embodied in the Resolution which was moved by my Hon'ble friend on the last occasion. Sir, the moment you begin to fix a minimum or proportion you must recognise the fact that you are proceeding against the oft-repeated rule that only fitness and capacity shall be the test for admission into the higher ranks of the Services in India but perhaps we must recognise that in the circumstances existing at the present moment we must be prepared to accept the second-best. Now Sir, throughout the debate which took place on that occasion reliance was placed upon the desirability of the British character of the administration continuing in India. Sir, history does not record an instance of one nation giving up its character altogether and assuming the character of another nation and if we analyse this argument we find that we cannot look forward to any time in the future history of India when Indians will have ceased to be Indians and become Britishers in character. It therefore follows that for all time to come we must be prepared to find this argument about the British character continuing to dominate the administration in India put forward. This will be if I may draw an analogy from law, the worst of perpetuities in politics. Fortunately there is an experiment which has been tried in India and which I submit should be taken into consideration. For 50 years from the year 1831 to 1881, what is now called the State of Mysore was under the British administration and in 1881, it was given back to the Maharaja of Mysore. Well, I take it that it requires some hardihood to maintain that the administration of Mysore after 1881, has suffered in virility of character or general efficiency. This only during this period that India has witnessed the spectacle of the State being ruled by such wise and far-seeing statesmen as Sir, Shahdri Iyer and Sir, Serhayya Iyer. Again we cannot forget that the administration is not so simple as it may appear ; there are British interests to be protected, mining interests to be safeguarded ; and it cannot be maintained that merely because the administration of Mysore has since 1881, been in the hands of Indians, foreign capitalists have suffered or that their interests have been sacrificed in any particular manner. We have been under British administration certainly for 100 years and we have been receiving education in our universities for about 60 years ; we have daily been observing the course of British administration and coming in contact with British administrators. If in spite of our long association with British administration and British traditions, we have not been able to alter our point of view in regard to certain matter, then I venture to think that even after 200 years the same argument will hold good, viz., that we have not absorbed anything of British character. Sir, we have been accustomed to associate fair-play and justice and a scrupulousness for the fulfilment of pledges with British character, and it is to this element of British character, that I would appeal on this occasion. I would earnestly urge that British Administrators in India must rise above these petty considerations and must cease to urge in season and out of season arguments of this character which really are devoid of any merit ; they must recognise that new forces have now to be reckoned with. You cannot always count upon people accepting arguments which as the Hon'ble Sir D. Wacha pointed out were urged 30 years ago and which are now urged again. They cannot bring any conviction to those who hold different opinions. On these grounds, Sir, I strongly support the Resolution.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Kamini Kumar Chanda :—“ Sir, I have to say only a few words. I think that the matter was fully gone into in the discussion on the earlier part of the Resolution and has moreover been re-argued in the speeches of my Hon'ble colleagues. I only wish to say this, that after the declaration the other day by His Excellency the Viceroy of the goal of British Administration in India, and that it is essential to progress towards that goal that Indians in steadily increasing proportions should be admitted into the higher grades of the various services and departments, and that if we are to make any progress at all, India must have an increasing number of men versed not only in the details of every day administration but in the whole art of Government. I say that after this you cannot resist the principle of the Resolution unless you are disloyal to His Excellency. We are not surely making any extravagant demands, trying to oust the British Officers altogether and monopolise all the higher appointments, but what we do ask is this, that you should give up a portion of the monopoly which you have been enjoying for the last 150 years. I do not think, Sir, that our friends the representatives of Commerce and Industry need at all be alarmed at the prospect of half the appointments being given to Indians that the capital which they have invested in the country is in any risk, and it may be pointed out in passing that that capital has been realised many times over in the shape of high profits and dividends which they have earned. But that apart, I submit, Sir, there cannot be any reasonable belief that the Indian officers of the Civil Service will do anything to rob them of their capital and if there was the slightest chance of that, why, the British portion of the service would protest it. With these few words, I beg to support the Resolution "

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy :—" Sir, I wish to contribute only a word to this debate. In wholly associating myself with my Hon'ble colleagues, I deem it my duty to point out that the proportion of one-fourth recommended by the Public Services Commission is wholly inadequate and is not sufficient to meet the growing aspirations of the people."

The Hon'ble Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg :—" Sir, I had not intended to take part in the debate on this Resolution, because I think that the question of the exact proportion of Indians to be admitted into the Civil Service is one which should be very carefully and thoroughly discussed during the forthcoming visit of the Secretary of State to India, and I admit that it is a subject on which I have no hard and fast opinion as to what the exact proportion should be. But the Hon'ble Mover has asked why the members of the European community should regard with any misgiving the unrestricted admission of Indians into the Indian Civil Service, and why we should wish the process to be a gradual one, and I think that a similar question was asked by my Hon'ble friend Mr. Sastri the other day. Well, Sir, I do not wish to take up the time of the Council by going over the ground again which was covered by the speech of my Hon'ble friend Sir Hugh Bray and by myself last Thursday. But I do wish to give to Hon'ble Members just one reason which arises out of recent events, and in giving it I do not think that I shall say anything that should give legitimate offence to any one. We have recently heard and seen the discussion of the policy of passive resistance in the press and on the platform as a legitimate weapon of political agitation. I do not know exactly what was intended by the term but if it means anything at all, it implies deliberate resistance to and obstruction of Government in some shape or form. At the present time, Sir, the Empire is engaged in a life and death struggle, for freedom and existence and needs the whole hearted support of every one of its citizens in the prosecution of the war. I wish to say with all the earnestness at my command that this need of the Empire cannot be met and this duty of its citizens cannot be fulfilled by passive resistance to or obstruction of Government in any shape or form whatever. My community viewed with great regret and grave disapproval the discussion of a policy which they regard as wholly illegitimate and inconsistent with.....

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" May I rise to a point of order. I submit that the question of passive resistance has no connection with the question of admitting Indians into the Civil Service."

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[The Vice-President ; Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg ; Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur ; Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.] [24TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I think the Hon'ble Member will recognise that the only question before the Council is whether the proportion of Indians and Europeans in the Civil Service should be half and half."

The Hon'ble Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg:—"I bow to your ruling, Sir. I was only trying to answer the question which was put by the Hon'ble Mover. I therefore have nothing more to say except that my point was that the recent discussion of this subject was one of the reasons of our misgivings."

The Hon'ble Rai Sitanath Ray Bahadur:—"Sir, instead of remaining a silent voter which may indicate my lukewarmness in a matter of such vital importance to my countrymen, I feel that it is necessary that I should give expression to my warm sympathy with the Resolution which has been moved by my Hon'ble friend. The experiment of placing districts, I would say, important districts in charge of Indian officers has proved everywhere very successful. As pointed out by Mr. J. N. Gupta, the present Officiating Commissioner of the Rajshahi Division, in his evidence before the Public Services Commission during the noisy days of the Bengal partition agitation it was found that districts in charge of Indian officers were those which were more quiet and kept well in hand and which manifested lesser signs of restlessness or discontent as compared with the districts in charge of European officers."

"At present in Bengal there are two very important Divisions which have recently been placed in charge of Indian Commissioners and which are being well administered. There is no whisper of mismanagement there; nor is there any symptom that those Divisions are falling into pieces."

"As for the judicial administration of the country by Indian judicial officers, the universal testimony is that nothing could be better and that the administration of justice and of law by Indian officers has indeed proved very successful.—it has proved an unqualified success."

"Now it has often been said that the British character of the administration would be gone if a larger number of Indian officers were employed. To that my reply is, that these Indian officers have received English training and by long association with British officers they have imbibed a good deal of that British character of which now-a-days we hear so much. They are, therefore, quite fitted to conduct the administration of Districts and Divisions admirably. Under these circumstances as the first Resolution has been negatived, I give my humble support to this alternative Resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay:—"Sir, I was almost going to rise to a point of order when my friend Mr. Sarma in the course of his remarks on this Resolution insinuated that the province of Bihar and Orissa could be 'turbulent'."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"I said also that the people of Bihar and Orissa were as loyal as any other people."

The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Krishna Sahay:—"I am glad to have this disclaimer. Sir, I do not pretend to know much about the activities of Madras, but from what I do know of them I can assure my Hon'ble friend that there is no chance, not the ghost of a chance, of Bihar and Orissa ever trying to imitate his province in those activities. Now as to the Resolution which is before the Council, I give my hearty support to it on behalf of the province which I have the honour to represent in this Council."

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Mr. Mazharul Haque ; Sir John Donald.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haque :—" Sir, I am afraid I cannot support my friend the Hon'ble Panditjee in this Resolution. When he moved last Friday that the Civil Service examination should be held simultaneously in England and in India, I gave him my hearty support and I do not wish that the principle underlying that Resolution should be frittered away by the limitations which are contained in today's Resolution, and on this ground only I am going to vote against the present Resolution. Sir, what is the fear in the minds of my friends the members of the Civil Service which makes them oppose this Resolution? What is at the bottom of this nervousness? I believe they would admit that it is an injustice, a long-standing injustice under which the people of this country have been suffering. The fact is that the Members of the Civil Service are afraid that if the examination be held both in England and in India they will not be able to hold their own with the Indians and compete with them in the Civil Service examination. Has the British Government come to this pass, that they are going to administer this country by a class of people who cannot compete with Indians intellectually? If the British nation has come to this pass, then I say, Sir, it has come to a very bad pass indeed. We Indians want no favour, we demand merely an act of justice and nothing else. We say let every one compete with us and those who succeed let them administer the country. We will not have inefficient and incapable in our Government. Sir, it has been said repeatedly, that the people of this country are not unanimous in their views and opinions. Hindus are fighting Muhammadans and Muhammadans are fighting Hindus. I confess that there was a time in the history of India when the two communities did not pull on well together, but now that time has passed, and I believe there is hardly a Muhammadan, not even my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Shafi, who would say that Hindus would not like to be governed by Muhammadans or that Muhammadans would not like to be governed by Hindus. The people of this country are absolutely united and they do not want that the services of this country should have any incapable or inefficient in their midst.

" Sir, it is rather strange for me to get up and oppose my Hon'ble friend the Panditjee, but I am afraid that the country will not approve of his Resolution and I cannot find it in my conscience to perpetuate inequality between Indians and Europeans as this Resolution intends to."

The Hon'ble Sir John Donald :—" Sir, may I bring to the notice of the Council one important point which does not appear to have been considered at all? It might have come up before the Public Services Commission, but on taking up the Report I discovered that the Commission decided to have nothing to do with the Political Department to which I belong, so I did not read it with avidity, and indeed it would be waste of time to read it, if the criticisms of certain Hon'ble Members are correct. The point is this. In the part of India from which I come the people firmly believe and honestly believe that the Government of India, as at present constituted, is carried on by means of the 'Iqbal-i-Sirkar.' There is something spiritual about this idea, and the people of the North-West Frontier Province think that this 'Iqbal' has been bestowed by an invisible power higher than any man. As long as this 'Iqbal-i-Sirkar' is in the ascendant, so long will life and property be safe in India. Should the changes now advocated be followed by the disappearance of the 'Iqbal-i-Sirkar' it is impossible to conceive what might happen in this country, and for this reason alone innovations in the public services in India should be introduced with the utmost care. It has been decided that the British character of the administration must be maintained and I presume that by this is meant the employment of Britishers to a reasonable extent in all the services. If this is really so, then there is no need for alarm. With regard to the safety of property, it has been suggested that in my Province it would be as well for some people to convert heavy goods into something portable to make them safe. I will here refer to a personal incident which bears on the manner in which the North-West Frontier Province is governed at present and for this reason I hope it may pass. Only in May last my gaiters and boots were taken by some robbers—and they were portable enough! Within three days of the robbery some of my Muhammadan fellow subjects seized 12 camels belonging to the tribe to which the robbers belonged, with the result that I got some measure of redress, which I would not otherwise have got. Such action though summary, was quite legal and in accordance with the provisions of a tiny book by means of which the Frontier is ruled at present. It is called the Frontier Crimes Regulation and in it will be found a good system of co-operation between the rulers and the ruled for the maintenance of order in my simple Province in which many members of the Indian Civil Service as at present organised have done a lot for its prosperity. It has also been said that because there were Brahmin Kings of Kabul, there should be now or in a short time Brahmin members of the Indian Civil Service to rule over the North-West Frontier Province. Up to 1009 there were Buddhists in Ghandhara, the modern Peshawar, but that is ancient history. It has also been mentioned that Ranjit Singh had an Agent in Kandahar, but I do not think this is correct. All I know is that in certain parts of the North-West Frontier Province Hindus have still to wear a distinctive head dress at the bidding of their Muhammadan compatriots, and only in recent times Hindus were only permitted to ride donkeys, but this invidious practice was put an end to on the advent of the British Raj through the intervention of the Indian Civil Service.

“I hope, Sir, patience and toleration will always be the attributes of this assembly”

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—“Sir, I wish to make one observation in reply to the criticism which the Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haque passed on the resolution we are considering. I sympathise with his point of view, but there really is no abatement on the part of the Hon'ble Pandit of the demand made for simultaneous examinations. It is true we lost the Resolution in this Council, but it by no means follows that the Government of India and the authorities in England will fail on that account to give due consideration to the arguments that have been put forward. That Resolution is before them, we are not abandoning it, but at the same time, considering the strength of the feeling on the other side, considering how strongly the question of simultaneous examinations will be opposed, it is necessary on our part to consider any alternative proposal that the Commission or the Government of India may put forward.

“I do not think there is anything wrong in doing so. It is not part of wisdom to go on crying ‘simultaneous examinations, simultaneous examinations’ even when that question is, to take the worst that may happen, put aside altogether. Supposing simultaneous examinations became out of the question when the whole matter comes up for consideration before the highest authorities, should we not have something to say with regard to the alternative that has been proposed? The Commission have proposed a proportion of 25 per cent. Ought we not to say clearly what we feel on the subject of that proposal? And it is because of that I conceive that the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya has thought it proper to bring forward this Resolution.

“Having said so much, I also think, Sir, that there is something on the merits of this question to commend it to the favourable consideration of members on both sides. If we are not to have the moral and theoretical equality implied in the simultaneous examinations, there ought to be at least a numerical equality between Europeans and Indians, and that is what this Resolution asks for. We do not want to be put behind in our own country. That is all that we ask for in this Resolution.”

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi:—“Sir, when I came into the Council Chamber this morning, I intended to give a silent vote in favour of this Resolution, but, in view of what has fallen from the lips of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haque, I think it is necessary to say a few words. My friend the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri has in his usually sober manner made it perfectly clear why it has been necessary for my friend the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to put forward an alternative proposal. It is unnecessary for me to add anything to what he has said except this, that perhaps the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri might have considered that the speech delivered by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Mazharul Haque was intended for this Council. I, for one, think that he was addressing really not the Council but a certain section of the public outside.

"With these few words I support the Resolution."

• The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"Sir, so far as I understand the present Resolution it is this, that half the number of the members of the future Civil Service should be Indians. The objection urged against it is the maintenance of British character, that is to say, that the Indian administration should have as its chief characteristic British character. Well, Sir, I fully and very frankly admit that the British character of the Indian administration must be maintained. British character has done a great deal of good to India during the last 125 years. I believe, that for the good of India the stamp of British character on the administration should be maintained. I believe that, so far as that feature goes, even my Indian friends will not dispute the proposition. It is understood, of course, that the British character should be there. The question then is, why there should be any preponderance? As I, Sir, said in my speech last time, the Charter Act of 1833, only prescribes that in the services of India men of 'proved merit and ability' alone should of course be requisitioned, irrespective of creed and race; and in subsequent Acts up to now, so far as I am aware, there has been no such condition made that there should be a preponderance of the British, as far as the Civil Service is concerned. In order to understand clearly the whole question, we must go back to the genesis of this covenanted Civil Service. Those who have studied the history of the East India Company will easily understand that the covenanted service came more and more into existence with the territorial sovereignty of that Company. The company was a trading company at first. Then it became a territorial sovereign and its territorial sovereignty demanded, of course, a certain amount of administrative ability. That administrative ability in those days was not to be found in India. The administration had to be carried on in English and a knowledge of English was non-existent in India at the time. As they advanced, Indians have, of course, risen to high offices on account of the English education they have received. Universities have been established and so forth. But the genesis is this, that because the East India Company from the days of its sovereignty was obliged to import covenanted servants, or clerks as they were then called, the tradition of predominance has gone forth, and from that time that tradition has remained as many other traditions have remained. But a time came, particularly after the transfer of the East India Company to the Crown, when there was a change. From that time forward a sort of rivalry began, very dim at first. But it became very transparent and acute later on as the competitive Civil Service examination was established in 1855, and Indians began to compete. Then, of course, with the advance of Indian education on one side and the numerical strength of the Civil Service on the other side, there ensued that rivalry, a rivalry of supremacy, as to whether it was the British service which should preponderate or whether it was the Indian service which should preponderate; and all the friction that has occurred and which continues to prevail is owing to this rivalry for offices on the one side and on the other. Every time this question has been discussed the Government of India have brought forward this expediency of maintaining British character on the administration. But, admitting as I say, that the British character of the administration should be maintained, where is the necessity to have this limit that only 25 per cent of the appointments should go to Indians and no more ? I think, Sir, that the cause of justice and the cause of fair play, both demand that this limit should not exist. If I, personally, were asked, I should say have no limit whatever. As Indians advance more and more in administrative capacity and ability, and in strength of character, I think, that the character of the British administration itself should be so amalgamated with that of the Indian character, that, necessarily, the future Government of India must consider that the Indian administration should be Indianised as far as possible, and, therefore, the number of Europeans in the Civil Service should, as far as may be practicable, be limited to a very small number. 'Thus far and no further,' should be the limits. We have not yet come to that finality, and, I am afraid, that finality will not be reached for another quarter or even half a century. In the meantime, of course, the administration must be carried on, but simultaneously Indian aspirations now rising, should be reasonably satisfied. It is the duty of the Government to see that those aspirations are so satisfied. The question is how may they be satisfied ? All this unrest which is going on in the country has its root cause in many things. One of these, one of the most important, is this question of preponderance of the British in the Civil Service. It is but fair that as Indians advance in administrative ability, in strength of character and in other desirable ways the Government of India should see that the administration is more and more Indianised, slowly and steadily. That being my opinion, I consider, Sir, that the proportion of half and half is a very good one to be given, though, as I say, the time must come, must inevitably come, when even this half and half proportion must be increased, and the present figures will have to be reversed, that is, the Indian Civil Servants should consist of 75 per cent. and the British Civil Servants of 25 per cent. That will be the final stage. I am not a prophet, but living among my own countrymen and knowing their spirit of loyalty and appreciation of British administration, I have no doubt that that will eventually be the outcome. But for the present, Sir, I consider the Hon'ble Pandit's Resolution is a very good one, and that the half and half proportion it recommends should be established."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :— I think I may say, Sir, that this Resolution illustrates very cogently the difficulties with which the Government of India have been confronted in dealing with these various resolutions on the report of the Public Services Commission. Historically the position is something as follows.

"After the enactment of the Government of India Act of 1870, it was decided that a number of Indians commonly known as Statutory Civilians should be nominated to the service up to a maximum of one-fifth of the cadre. That system of appointment was found unsatisfactory and has now been discontinued. In lieu thereof we have a certain number of listed posts, that is, posts ordinarily occupied by members of the Civil Service but which are filled by men promoted from the Provincial Service. The Commission now recommend—I think I am right in saying—some reduction in the number of listed posts. On the other hand, they recommend that a minimum of 25 per cent. of the superior posts should be allotted to Indians who should be given direct appointments in India. I think my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sastri, said the other day that this figure was the maximum. If I am wrong will he correct me ? It is not so. It is the minimum proposed by the Commission. This would mean that altogether 189 superior posts and 102 inferior posts would be allotted to Indians appointed in India. And here too I should like to correct an error which I think the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma made the other day when he suggested—if I understood him correctly of course—that the Commission had recommended that Indians should be appointed to 189 posts in the service in all.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Superior posts."

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Sir William Vincent; Sir Dinshaw Wacha.]

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" I think the Hon'ble Member at that time did not specify superior posts; but anyhow I am merely putting before Council what the facts are. Mr. Justice Rahim was in favour of simultaneous examinations, but as an alternative he suggested that one-third of the cadre should be recruited in India. Sir Theodore Morison and Mr. Chaubal recommended that 25 per cent. of the service should be Indian. Mr. Chaubal at the same time suggested that 30 per cent. of the superior posts should in this way be reserved so as to secure a general rate of 25 per cent. all round. He pointed out—and it is a valid argument—that the proportion recommended by the Commission really only meant 21 per cent. of the total cadre and not—as people who examine the matter superficially might think—25 per cent.

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—" Sir, may I remind the Hon'ble Member of one thing, that in the minority report of the Commission half and half was suggested ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—" I think I am correct in what I am saying, namely, that Mr. Justice Rahim recommended one-third. If I am incorrect I can only express my regret, but I have checked the statement recently. Various Indian witnesses suggested either 50 per cent. of the posts or 33 per cent.

" Now with all these various suggestions before us, supported by arguments of more or less weight, I think that it is a little harsh to ask the Government of India to make on this subject any definite statement until they have consulted Local Governments and considered the very different requirements of different provinces. I am grateful to the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma for the compliment which he paid the province of Bihar and Orissa. I am afraid, however, that I suspected that there might be something—shall I say ?—some unpleasant motive for it. At any rate I acknowledge gratefully the pleasant part of it. The actual position in Bihar is this: there are approximately 35½ million residents and about 140 civilians in the province. I am speaking here from recollection. There are about 1,200 or 1,400 civilians in the whole country for 315 million people. So the proportion is pretty well the same in Bihar as in the whole of the rest of India. The Council must also remember that Bihar is a very thickly populated country, so that its population is concentrated in a small area, and that in estimating the number of officers which is required for administering a province the question of area is of considerable importance. This is so for instance I believe in the Central Provinces. I think my Hon'ble friends from these Provinces will bear me out in this matter. Again, the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma compared my Province with the United Provinces. But it must be remembered—and this is a very important consideration—that in the United Provinces they have a temporary settlement except I believe in the Benares Division, whereas in Bihar and Orissa there is a permanent settlement. In any case the arguments which my Hon'ble friend adduces would appear to me to be more cogent on the question of reducing the general number of Civilians than in support of any alteration in the proportion of Indians and Europeans.

" Now in dealing with the question to what extent appointments in the Indian Civil Service should be filled by recruitment in India, I think that the Council will admit there are certain points which will have to be considered. First of all, as I have said and I repeat, is the important question of retaining the British character of the administration. I do not say that this should necessarily be the determining factor, but it is a point which cannot be lost sight of if this country is to remain an integral part of the British Empire. Further the Government must consider British interests in this country. I do not say that they would necessarily be endangered by a change such as is contemplated. I do not want to suggest that. But I say the question of what change should be effected must be considered in relation to these and other important interests and the very grave responsibilities of the Government of India. I have been told that English capital in Japan and other countries does not need to be so protected. I dare say it does not. But those who have invested British capital in this country have invested on a very different understanding from that on which they invest it in foreign countries, namely on the understanding that the administration would continue British in character, I do not say necessarily in personnel. I think there is a great deal to be said for the argument that Indians who have been educated for some years in England might wholly or partially preserve that character—the British character of the administration—at any rate more effectively than Indians who are educated in this country. I do not know that this necessarily follows, but I think there is some force in this argument. Their outlook is widened and they do acquire a knowledge of facts and conditions outside this country.

RESOLUTION re PROPORTION OF INDIAN RECRUITS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Sir William Vincent ; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

“A minor point but of importance that would have to be considered in this connection is the number of listed posts which would have to be or which would be awarded to the subordinate services; and I think that the Council will recognise that officers who have rendered excellent service in the subordinate ranks are entitled to consideration. But I do not understand whether my Hon'ble friend the Pandit wishes to exclude them from his recommendations. I should like to be sure on that point. If they are included in this minimum of 50 per cent. then this argument is of no weight at all.....”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—“No, I want half the entire Cadre to be reserved for Indians.”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“Including those listed posts or excluding them?”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—“Whatever is the total number of posts reserved for the Indian Civil Service when the new constitution comes in, I want half of that number reserved for Indians who will be recruited in this country.”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“I again ask the Hon'ble Member, does he include the listed posts or does he exclude them?”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“I must say that that is not an answer to my question.”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“If they are excluded, the Council must remember that a large number of posts may have to be reserved for these officers of the Provincial Service, and that pro tanto the number of Englishmen in the service will be diminished below even 50 per cent. And this is a question that will also have to be examined. I have pointed out that the requirements of different provinces will have to be considered. These are the reasons for our not accepting this resolution at the present stage. I do not know if it is necessary for me to assure the Council, as I have done frequently before, that the Government of India has an open mind on this question, and they will only decide it after consulting all the authorities interested. They have every desire to increase the number of Indians in the service with a view particularly to associating them in the government of the country and affording them opportunities of training and administration which they at present, at any rate in some branches of the service, lack ; and I think the recent announcement of the Secretary of State, which was, as Mr. Montagu said, in complete accordance with the views of the Government of India, indicates this clearly. The Government of India cannot however accept any resolution binding them to any definite decision on this point at present. I think however that the Council may rest assured that the Government of India are approaching this question in a very reasonable and really sympathetic spirit.

"I have now got before me the actual quotation from Mr. Rahim's report, which was the minority report to which my Hon'ble friend, Sir Dinshaw Wacha referred."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha :—"No. It was the Welby Commission Report ; that was 20 years ago."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"I beg your pardon ; I understood you to mean this report."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"It seems to me, Sir, useless to discuss these resolutions in view of the attitude of the Government which is now very clear, viz., that they are awaiting the opinion of Local Governments and have not yet come to any decision. Therefore, it seems to me really that the time of the Council need not be taken up further. The other resolutions may be regarded as our expressed opinion on this side of the Council, unless the Hon'ble Members who are the Movers of the Resolutions think otherwise and wish to discuss them.

"With regard to this Resolution, the Hon'ble Mr. Haque said that as he voted for the first Resolution for simultaneous examination he could not logically support this Resolution. I certainly agree with him ; strictly logically he is right ; but supposing it is not possible for us to persuade the Government to accept the Resolution of simultaneous examinations....."

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"Until we have consulted the Local Governments."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"Then in that case it is but right that this Council should consider the alternative and express its opinion whether the alternative should be accepted or not. Well, the only objections that have been raised against this alternative are the same objections, viz., that if 50 per cent of Indians get into the Indian Civil Service it would imperil the British character of the administration. Well, Sir, I want to know what is meant by the 'British character of the administration.' Is the meaning of this phrase, European element ? Is the meaning of this phrase, colour ? Or is the meaning of this phrase, those great qualities which have distinguished the European administrators of this country ? If the phrase 'British character of the administration' means those great qualities, viz., uprightness, honesty, integrity, high sense of duty, —and I have no hesitation in acknowledging that many members of the Civil Service have displayed them in this country—I can understand it. If an Indian also has those qualities, and if such Indians are the preponderating element in the Civil Service, does that mean British character of administration or not? Or must it mean that we must have so many of a particular race, or colour. If latter is the meaning, Sir, I strongly object to such a rule or standard. No race, no question of religion or creed has to be considered in recruiting, our highest service. Efficiency is the only test and those qualities which I have mentioned above

"I come next to the argument of the commercial classes which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Hogg represents. I have got very great respect for Mr. Hogg, Sir, and I know that he holds very liberal views. But I was really surprised that he should have brought in the question of passive resistance as an instance of how the commercial community might suffer. With very great respect for him, I submit it is not only irrelevant but, if it had any relevancy of talk at all, one might retort and say that some of the Anglo Indians at the present moment notably 'Madras Mail' are preaching and are guilty of insubordination. But those questions really must not be mixed up with this question before us today. How is the commercial interest going to suffer? If you have men who are competent and properly qualified in the service, how is the commercial interest going to suffer because they happen to be Indians. After all, it is nothing but the service we are recruiting, and why should there be any danger to the commercial community? What is going to happen to the commercial interests, I have not yet heard of. We know perfectly well that British capital is invested and employed in many parts of the world including India. For example, you have a large amount of British capital in South Africa where there is an overwhelming majority of Boers; and as a matter of fact we know that soon after the war broke out there was a great deal of disturbance there."

"Sir, as regards British capital, if this argument is to stand good what is and what will be the result? British capital on the one side, but what is it after all as against the enormous interests and stake of the people of this country, and of the sons of this country? What is this British capital that is trotted out over and over again? Are the interests of the people of India not to be considered? If you are going to apply this test of British capital in this country to maintain preponderating element of Europeans in the service, why, till doomsday you will never get over it. For when will the British capital disappear from India—God forbid I do not wish it to disappear. I trust that more may come in. But if that argument is to stand good for having preponderating element of Europeans then I say there will never be a change. I ask Sir, is that logical? I would answer and say that this argument is fallacious. All that we want is that the services may be recruited properly and efficiently. It is for this reason that Europeans are employed as foreign skill; but once you get the sons of the country who are capable and competent there is no justification for maintaining that there should be a certain number of Europeans. Therefore, Sir, I have no alternative but to support this Resolution. I must say that I am opposed to any proportion being fixed in favour of Indians or Europeans, Sir, we must have justice. I do not fully agree with any system where a proportion is laid down of any class, but if there is no other way, if there is no other course open, then I would vote for and support this Resolution as an alternative Resolution.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—"Sir, I think my friend Mr. Jinnah must be satisfied after he made his speech that the time of the Council has not been uselessly taken up, the contribution he has made strengthens the Resolution before the Council. We feel it our duty to lay our views before the Council because we know that reports have been called for from Local Governments and that the matter is being considered. Therefore we desire to place the complete case, so far as it lies in our power, before the Government. I must say, Sir, that I am thankful to the Hon'ble the Home Member for the concluding words of his speech where he said that the recommendations we were making will be considered in a reasonable and sympathetic spirit. I have no doubt that Government will give that consideration to the views we have placed before it. I wish that Government, and particularly the Hon'ble the Home Member, would approach the question in the spirit of those last words and would endeavour to find as many reasons to support our views as they do to oppose them. I am sure that with his great judicial acumen, his ability and long experience of the affairs of this country, he and his able colleague the Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay are in the best position to lend their strong support to the cause of the educated community. We are satisfied with the decision we have heard today that they have promised to look at the matter in a very sympathetic and reasonable spirit. I beg to ask the Council to accept his assurance once for all on behalf of us Indians that we put forward this scheme in no spirit of hostility to Europeans or the Civil Service; we want to approach this question as would be done by private gentlemen who wished to dispose of it as friends and fellow-subjects. I shall be content to leave the matter in their hands; we have claimed no favoured treatment, we do not ask that our inefficients should be admitted as against the efficient of our fellow-subjects of Great Britain, what we ask for is equal tests, e.g., equal opportunities, for the same standard to be exacted from all and that those who have proved fit in that test should be admitted as surely as has been promised by Acts of Parliament and by the plighted word of the Sovereign of the United Kingdom. As regards the Resolution, so far as Government is concerned, I did not expect that they would be able to make a definite pronouncement as to whether they will accept the recommendation—we are content with the assurance of the Hon'ble the Home Member that the matter will receive sympathetic consideration. But I have one or two observations to make in regard to the speeches of the Hon'ble Mr. Hogg and the Hon'ble Sir John Donald. The Hon'ble Mr. Hogg need have no apprehensions that there will be any untoward consequences arising from a large number of Indians in the Civil Service. I do not want to take up the question of passive resistance as it was objected to as irrelevant, but I am not quite sure that it was irrelevant, I think that our friends should express clearly what fears are in their minds so that we may be able possibly to help to remove them. I have very strong authority, I need not go into it at present, for stating that passive resistance is a thoroughly loyal and constitutional method of drawing attention to grievances. But my friend should know that passive resistance was not preached in this country during the time of the war, by the great bulk of our fellow-men, it was preached with reference to one unfortunate event which happily has now been solved. For the rest I would ask that....."

The Hon'ble Mr. Malcolm N. Hogg :—" May I rise to a point of order. If I was irrelevant in referring to this subject I think the Hon'ble Member should be in the same position."

The Hon'ble The Vice-President :—" The Hon'ble Pandit will no doubt recognise the justice of this intervention."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" Quite so, and I shall be content to leave it there. I bow to your ruling, which I always do. I hope the needs of the war have been met not by preaching passive resistance but by active, loyal assistance to Government, by contributions in money and men during the three years so as to ensure that victory shall crown the efforts of our allies. For the rest, I should like to say a word with regard to what fell from the Hon'ble Sir John Donald. He belongs to the Political Department and naturally has something to say about the North-West Frontier Province. He says that people in his Province believe that it is by means of Iqbal that the British Government is carrying on the administration. That is very true; the Iqbal of the Government is a great asset, a great political asset in the administration of this country, and my friend has a right to say that so long as the Iqbal rests there need be no fear; but that Iqbal rests not on British battalions but on British rights and the people of this country feel that so long as the principles of justice and righteousness are the guiding principles of the administration the Iqbal of Great Britain will continue but the Iqbal may change and it may be that instead of the principles of justice racial pride and racial prejudice may be substituted. On this question nothing is more important than that the principles of justice should be the guiding principles in determining what policy should be adopted rather than racial considerations. My friend has spoken of the security of property in the North-West Frontier. I am sorry that he has referred to it because though he may take a different view, still we who know something as to what has happened in the North-West Frontier from communications made to us, are not at all sure that property is so secure and safe as my friend would try to make out. I recently received a few communications from the residents of the North-West Frontier Provinces which led me to ask a number of questions which of course in the exigencies of public interest were not allowed to be put in the Council, but that gave me very good evidence that life and property were not so secure in the North-West Frontier as my friend tried to make out. Now, Sir, there have been Mahsud raids and other raids, and the Hindu Sahib of the Punjab sent a memorial drawing the attention of Government to the very great risk to life and property there. We listened to some other remarks regarding the security of life and property, so I thought I would mention it.

"Then, Sir, my friend referred to the satisfaction of the people with the decision contained in the tiny little book called the 'Frontier Crimes Regulations.' That satisfaction is not shared by Indians, as I can testify from the personal knowledge that I have from respectable Muhammadan residents in the North-West Frontier. I wish those Regulations would be revised, I hope they will be revised before long.

"My friend then spoke of the difficulties that would arise if a Brahmin were to rule over the North-West Frontier Province. Well, he does and he will remember if I tell him that General Nandram ruled over Afghanistan at one time, and he asked Prince Maharaj Singh a favour to introduce his coin and there is a couplet in this connection. I might remind my friend, that General Nandram had his coin introduced there. Even to-day I am certain that if Brahmins who are fit by their education, their integrity and character are entrusted with the charge of the Frontier Province, they will not be found inefficient or wanting, and I am sure that Hindus and Muhammadans will be able to pull on as amicably as the British Officers and Muhammadans or Hindus. I am strengthened in that view because though my friend referred to the privilege which is allowed to certain Hindus to ride on donkeys, he forgot that in Afghanistan itself Hindus hold high offices under His Majesty the Amir. He also forgot that under Akbar Hindus held very high offices, Raja Toder Mull and others were Governors of provinces. He also forgot that in the Dominions of His Highness the Nizam, very high offices have been held by Hindus for generations. Those are facts which might remind my friend of the unfairness of the comparison which he instituted.

"Now, I will ask my friend one thing. Is he so sure that that partiality, religious partiality or prejudice, is confined to Hindus and Muhammadans alone? Has he forgotten that it was not very long ago in England there were so many disabilities under which the Roman Catholic laboured, that the highest and the holiest of the Roman Catholics were debarred from holding offices which they had a right to enjoy, and is my friend so sure that even at this moment that the Roman Catholics and Protestants have entirely bridged their religious gulf. I remember a case where a high scholar, a Protestant, would not invite a medical man, a Doctor, because he was a Roman Catholic. If this is the case in the twentieth century among....."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—" I must point out that the Hon'ble Pandit's time is very nearly up and I shall not be able to give him any indulgence, as I consider that he is digressing a long way from the Resolution which is before the Council."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" I shall finish, Sir, before my time is up. But I will refer to this because my friend Sir John Donald....."

The Hon'ble Sir John Donald :—" All I meant was that it was because of the advent of the British Government the distinctions between Hindus and Muhammadans were done away with."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" That again is a statement which is more comprehensive than facts can justify, however, I do not wish to go again into the question of the distinctions between Hindus and Muhammadans. Sometimes Hindus ruled over Muhammadans and sometimes Muhammadans ruled over Hindus, and I claim that there was a great deal more happiness under those administrations than some of my friends are willing to admit. We are now neither under Hindu rule nor Muhammadan rule, nor under the European rule,—I hope we are under British administration and I hope that that will be made a reality, by a proper, reasonable, fair and an increasingly larger admixture of Indians in the services of India. That is my point. I will not dwell any longer on the character of the two administrations, British and Indian, which have been so fully dealt with. I shall be content if the Government will give the matter a reasonable and sympathetic consideration. With these remarks I leave the Resolution in the hands of the Council."

RESOLUTION re AGE FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri to move the following Resolution :—

‘This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Government of India do represent to the Secretary of State that the age limits for the Indian Civil Service examination should not be reduced as recommended by the Public Services Commission.’

RESOLUTION re AGE FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

"Sir, I beg to move that this Council recommends to the Governor-General in Council that the Government of India do represent to the Secretary of State that the age limits for the Indian Civil Service examination should not be reduced as recommended by the Public Services Commission. In the history of this question there have been many changes of age for entrance to the Indian Civil Service examination. I will not, Sir, go back into the history except to remind the Council of the great principle enunciated by the 1854 Committee, under Lord Macaulay, to the effect that what we want in this examination is to catch the finished product of the best English education. From that principle we have departed now and again, but not always to the greatest advantage. The chief change to which I must refer necessarily in this discussion is the change that was introduced for the first time in the year 1878, when the age fell to 17 to 19. Afterwards, in the year 1892, as the result of considerable discussion it was once more raised to 21 to 23. Then in 1906 it was once more raised by a year and it stands now at 22 to 24. The evidence that has been given in favour of the reduction of age in comparison with the evidence against it, I should think, both numerically and otherwise, weak. This question was discussed as I said before, in 1878, when the age stood at 17 to 19. In the discussion that preceded that change many Europeans and Indians were examined, and I am concerned here only to point out that Lord Northbrook, summarising the evidence, said this:—

Out of 121 officers of all ranks, 5 either do not refer to the subject of age, or give replies of doubtful import. Of the remaining 96, only 27 recommend a reduction of the present limit, 63 would retain the present limits, and 83 would raise the maximum age. Most of our leading Professors, I would suggest that it could be raised to 22."

"This was in 1878. Now during the inquiries that this Commission instituted the question was prominently asked of the witnesses likely to give useful evidence. The result may be summarised as follows:—Out of 82 European witnesses who gave evidence regarding the Indian Civil Service, 20 were silent on the subject, 5 gave doubtful answers, and 37 were definitely against the Commission's proposal, that is in regard to the reduction of age. Only 20 were in favour of reducing the age limit to 17 to 19 or 18 to 20. In England out of 20 witnesses examined, no less than 19 expressed themselves against it. Of these, with the exception of one witness, no one suggested a lower age than 20 to 22. The representatives of all the Universities, except the London University, were opposed to the age limits proposed by the Commission. Oxford and Cambridge were willing to accept the lower age limits if the Government considered them necessary from an administrative point of view, but their own opinion was decidedly against it. Recently we read in the papers that the University of St. Andrews had memorialised the Secretary of State against the reduction of age and more recently still, within the last few days, we read of a Headmasters' conference in London which likewise protested against the reduction of age. In the face of this strong evidence, the Commission have recommended this reduction. The grounds on which they rest their case are briefly these. In the first place they say a man at 20 is more likely to be pliable and to be bent to the needs of Indian administration than a man might be at the age of 24 or 25. Now that is perhaps true to some extent. I will not dispute the principle of that proposition but it seems to me that that is a problematical opinion and it is too much to rest a case for the reduction of an age limit against which there is so much authoritative evidence on it alone.

"Let us, therefore, examine the other points, urged. One strong point is this, that a man of 24 or 25 is more likely to get married than one at 20 or 21. Now, Sir, that is a somewhat ticklish subject to deal with. Marriage brings its joys to all, I expect—I am thankful I have been blessed in that respect, but the Commission evidently thinks that it is bound to consider the financial embarrassments into which a young man is led on marrying in India. Those embarrassments, I suspect, Sir, with all due respect to the other sex, follow where a man marries in the first year or in the second or third year of his office. So that, unless the Commission wishes these men to remain bachelors for a great part of their lives, it does not seem to me to be very wise to make a change like this because of the difficulties that a man gets into when he marries.

RESOLUTION re AGE FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

" Really, the strongest argument the Commission have put forward is this, that one year's probation in England is insufficient. They wish to have a probation of three years. Now, during this period of three years' probation, they expect that a very large number of candidates will proceed to the degree of a University; they also expect that they will be well trained in the use of different languages for which they may find use and that they may also learn some subject like Indian Law or Indian History with advantage. Now, let us examine this question of University degrees. I wish on this subject not to say anything of my own, but to quote merely from the opinion of Sir Charles Aitchison, which was recorded in the year 1884. At that time this very question was urged and he was considering whether, on account of the reduced age, boys had gone up to the University and taken degrees. He said

'The age, it appears, has been lowered, that the men may be sent to a University, and because (so it is said) a University education cannot be insured for the candidates by any other course. Whether or not it is desirable that all the candidates should receive a University education is a point on which opinions may well differ; but in the argument as stated there is a confusion of ideas. University education is one thing; University residence is another. The benefit of University education is its breadth. The boys of 17 or 18 or 19 now recruited do not get the benefit of a University education because they reside at Oxford or Cambridge for two years while prosecuting their special studies. There is not magic enough even in these venerable abodes of western learning to evolve culture out of Indian Law Books and the Urdu Alphabet. If the young man has not been generally educated before he passes the open competition, he never will be. Obviously the general education which it is the function of the University to bestow should come first. The limit of age has been lowered in order that the general and special education may be mixed up together. The University education which is sought is not only not attained, but made impossible; for all are too young to have gone through it. All that is attained is University residence for youths who have been compelled to break off their general education at the time when its effect on the mind is of most consequence.'

" The situation now, Sir, if the age limit were lowered, as the Commission recommend, would be identical with the situation of which the result was described by Sir Charles Aitchison in these words. If, then, this University degree question is put aside, what we have got left is that in the three years probation our young men will have time to get up a knowledge of the Indian languages. Now, I submit, Sir, with all due respect, that languages should be learnt on the spot where they are spoken, so that when these young men are, merely to come out in the course of a year or two, it is not necessary, I think to spend much time so long a time as three years at all events, in preparing them to learn languages where they could never acquire them to any good purpose. It is well known that English people are not endowed with much linguistic capacity, and it is very doubtful whether mere residence in England and study under European masters is likely to give them that real living acquaintance with the vernaculars of the land which they can acquire on the spot. For that purpose, then, a probation or a period of training in India would be far more useful than probation in England.

" Then, Sir, I have considered the question only from the point of view of the English candidates so far. If the evidence is not strong enough in the case of English candidates that the lowered age and the three years' probation which they will spend in England are not likely to be so advantageous, and if the Civil Service as a whole is not likely to gain in efficiency on that account, the argument from the side of the Indian candidates comes in to reinforce my contention. From the Indian side it is urged, and I think with experience behind it, that this lowered age limit is likely to cut off altogether such chances as we have of obtaining any entrance from the English door. At the time that this was tried the result was that we obtained during the years 1878—1892 only 2.5 per cent of the successful candidates. Since the age limit was raised, we came to the usual percentage of 5.6.

RESOLUTION re AGE FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; Sir William Vincent.]

“ Now, the Commission have further complicated the situation by adding a requirement that besides this age limit, each of the candidates should produce a certificate of having attended a recognised high school in England for at least three years preceding the examination. Now this is urged, I think, for the reason that they do not want students to come up to the examinations crammed by coaching establishments. They want them to have received such high school education as the first class institutions in England are able to afford. But what would be the effect on Indian candidates? They will have to go there at the age of 14 or 15, even earlier, at 13 or 14, if they are to be for three years in a school before being allowed to sit for the examination. Now that is a sheer impossibility. Of course the Commission recommend that the Civil Service Commissioners should have power to exempt Indian candidates, if they see fit, from this requirement; but all the same that the Commission should not have thought sufficient of the requirements of Indian candidates is, in my opinion, a consideration that should weigh with this Council in settling this matter. I am not one of those who think that everything should be settled from the Indian point of view. There have been many critics in India who have attributed to the Commission a desire, a motive, to cut off the English door from Indian candidates. Now, Sir, I do not repeat it. It is a dangerous, a hazardous game to attribute motives. Nobody can penetrate beneath the surface of a man's action. But certainly in law there is a proposition that anything that is known to result from a course of action is intended by him who embarks upon it. The Commission themselves realise that the effect will be to minimise the chances of Indian candidates; they recognise it because they state their proposition in that clear way. At the same time they recommend it. We cannot, therefore, shut our eyes to the fact that the Commission intend this result to follow. I do not say that they intend to secure that result above everything else. They have other results to secure, but this is one of the things, and I conceive, Sir, that it is our duty to consider, both on the one side and on the other, whether it is just in a matter of this kind, where Indian opinion is so sensitive and liable to be upset, whether it is wise to neglect the Indian point of view altogether; whether it would not have been better, considering that the advantages of the reduction of age are not overwhelmingly strong, and considering that the thing is about even on the one side and on the other, whether Indian opinion might not have been allowed to prevail in this matter. I think that is a point of view that will commend itself to the members of the Civil Service and also to the Government of India. I therefore commend this Resolution, without saying more, to the Council in the full hope that it will receive from the representatives of Government sympathetic consideration.”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent:—“ Sir, I have explained the position of Government in regard to these Resolutions so frequently that I am unwilling to do it again. But I should like at the same time to emphasise one point that is, that I do think the discussions will serve a useful purpose in that they enable Members of this Council to put before the Government of India—and indirectly even before the authorities in the United Kingdom—arguments and opinions of great value. The Government will now have before it the considered opinion of a large number of Members of this Council, and though I am unable to accept the Resolution I hope that the Hon'ble Mover will understand the reason for my not doing so at the present stage. I would emphasise particularly in connection with this Resolution that this action of Government is in no way to be taken as indicative of any definite views on the subject.

RESOLUTION re AGE FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

[Sir William Vincent.]

" Further I may say that the Government of India do recognise that the Commission's recommendation regarding the age limit for the London examination is one of peculiar interest to Indians as it must seriously affect the numbers in which they can compete and succeed at that examination; and while we are not prepared lightly to set aside the deliberate recommendation of the Commission, yet the Government of India are also alive to the fact that there is a large and influential body of opinion opposed to these recommendations. The fact is that disadvantages as well as advantages attach to both the high and the low age limit. Briefly, the arguments which influenced the Commission's recommendation were as follows: Recruitment should take place either at the school leaving age or at the University graduation age, not at any intermediate stage. The present period of probation—1 year—is insufficient and should be extended. On the other hand, it is not advisable to bring out recruits to India older than they are at present. From some points of view their age, in the opinion of the Commission, might be somewhat reduced. On these arguments they arrived at the conclusion that the only way of attaining the object in view, or the best way of attaining it, was by reverting to the school-leaving age. Now there is considerable force in these arguments and it cannot be denied that there are disadvantages attaching to a high recruiting age. But the Government of India are aware that both Indian Members dissented from these propositions, and as has been stated by the Hon'ble the Mover, it is doubtful whether the weight of the evidence taking it not numerically but according to its intrinsic value was really not against the view which the Commission adopted. The number of opinions both in India and in England against the school-leaving age limit is indeed remarkable. It has been strongly urged too that present day conditions and the difficulties of modern administration demand that members of the Indian Civil Service should at the beginning of their Service possess better character, judgment, steadiness of purpose, self control and that assured knowledge of men and affairs which are more likely to be derived from a complete and matured education in the liberal arts and sciences. As has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Member, it is doubtful whether this education could be secured by training in special subjects after competition; and it may be argued that the possession of these qualities is more important than the undoubted fact that younger men are more adaptable, more receptive and more ready to learn the language, and conditions of the East.

" Again, the Government are satisfied that great weight must be attached to the contention that the higher limits are more suitable to Indian conditions and cannot ignore the advantage of having a common age limit for all entrants alike. The difficulties that would beset Indian candidates who have to go home at the early age proposed by the Commission are indeed apparent, and they have been pointed out to you with greater ability than I could hope to do, by the Hon'ble Mover.

" Lastly, I may observe that representations against the Commission's scheme have been received, as I think the Hon'ble Mover said, from various authorities including the Universities of Edinburgh, Aberdeen and St. Andrews, and the Hebdomadal Council of the Oxford University. Such representations are entitled to great weight. I do not desire to take up further time with an exhaustive catalogue of the endless pros and cons of this controversy. I trust I have said enough, however, to make it quite clear that while we are not unaware of the advantages which might be secured by adopting the recommendation of the Commission, we are fully conscious of the disadvantages attaching to that system and of the advantages which might be secured by an examination at a later age, and we will attach due weight to all these arguments.

" Again, I should like, before I sit down, to repeat my statement on one point. The Government recognise very readily that this is a question on which Indian interest is naturally very keen and deserving of particular attention, and I can assure my Hon'ble friend and his supporters that we shall not lose sight of their interest in our deliberations on this question."

RESOLUTION re AGE FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Having regard to the extremely sympathetic reply of the Hon'ble the Home Member, I should be doing wrong if I detained the Council ; but the very hopes that he has inspired in us, that the recommendation of the Commission will not be followed and the keen interest evinced in the matter by the Indian public are reasons for trying to strengthen the hands of the Government of India against the recommendation of so weighty a body as the Public Service Commissioners.

"The Public Service Commissioners largely proceed upon the views of some of the Local Governments and of administrators in high office, and the only observation I may be permitted to make in this connection is that the gentlemen who were responsible for the Government at that time were largely if not all gentlemen who had been trained under the old system when recruitment was between 17 and 19. To use the words of Mr. Davidson, Master of Balliol College, Oxford.

'In 15 or 20 years time the men at the top of the tree in India will be naturally those appointed under the system of 1894, and if that is almost inevitable all is not going on smoothly in the service they will be apt in their turn to attribute the defects to the renewal, if it should be now renewed, and the selection at school-boy age.'

"Then, Sir, another argument which I may be permitted to urge in this connection is that there would be an alteration of policy every 10 years which is highly to be deprecated.

"The third argument which I would urge upon the attention of this Council is the fact that if the limit of 17-19 be accepted, that would correspond to the examination for the second class clerkships in the United Kingdom, and there would be a great danger of the service being largely recruited from the class which in England would compete for the second class clerkships. This is a point which has been pointedly drawn attention to in the evidence of Sir John Struthers. It has also been pointed out—and this has not been alluded to pointedly in the Commission's report—that if the age limits were reduced it would be impossible to expect a large number of highly educated men to compete for the Civil Service. I am not now talking of Indian interests; I am talking of purely British interests and the type of men we are likely to get. It is absolutely necessary that the present limit should not be reduced. My Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sastri has already alluded to the difficult question of marriage. May I also point out, Sir, that hereafter the policy of the British nation would and must be to encourage early marriage as was done in America years ago and consequently the observation of the Commissioners has absolutely no force whatsoever at the present moment. I may also point out that when a young man has secured a permanent footing and stays in England for three years match-making would be more active than when the apprenticeship period is only one year.

"I may also point out, with regard to the suggestion of some Members, that the gentlemen who have been coming out of late have not been as sympathetic as the older men, the younger men, with whom the Oxford Professor spoke repudiated with some indignation the suggestion that they have less interest in the country and less care for the Indians than their predecessors. There is also great force in the observation that the chief defect of the Indian Civil Service, as observed by outsiders, chiefly among the senior men, was their inability to see defects in the system, and to bring them out at a still younger age, while their minds were still more liable to be moulded into grooves would only accentuate this.

RESOLUTION re AGE FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

[Mr. Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy.]

[24TH SEPTEMBER, 1917]

“ With regard to the type of men we have been getting, the evidence that was taken in London was almost unanimous that the best type that could be secured in England was being secured under the present system, and if there were brilliant men under the old system, still the average of the present system is considerably higher than formerly. This is what Dr. Warren says :—

‘ My impression is that the rank and file were not so good under the old system. There were more failures. I should certainly say that under the present system India was getting from Oxford, and I believe it is the same with Cambridge, a very able, industrious, moral, vigorous lot of men.’

And the other professors also are equally emphatic. Professor Lodge says :—

‘ The majority of the men between 78 and 91 were on the whole less able and less thoroughly trained than the people who have been elected under the present system. At a lower age a young man is not qualified to judge of what his future career should be.’

Then Mr. Stanley Leathes says :—

‘ To lower the age for entry is a leap in the dark to a large extent. At 22 or 23 the man is more formed and the results of the open competition are more certain at the later age than at the earlier age.’

“ There is another great difficulty that has been pointed out and that is that very special incentives would have to be devised in order to prevent the young men who have secured a place from being idle; and as has been pointed out by one of the Members of the Commission, Sir Murray Hamnick, in the past the experience was that it was very difficult to devise such expedients. Then from the point of view of physical fitness the medical evidence was that it would be wrong to send these young men before 22; and if 17 to 19 be the age, certainly there would be a chance of a large number coming out at the age of 20 or 20½, and the medical opinion as I have said is distinctly against any man coming out to this country at that age. As I have already pointed out, the administration has become more complex and it is absolutely necessary to get the best university men, more necessary than in the old days. May I say, Sir, that the recommendation of the Commission follows to a certain extent the old ideals? The mercantile community both in England and in India thought that if they put their young men into the Universities they would be absolutely unfit for their careers. At present, I believe, the policy is that it is absolutely necessary to have a University education, and I think it is wrong to lower the age, because difficulties were found in some instances of the inadaptability of the young men to learn the drudgery of the routine. There are Indians to take up that portion of the work; and I do not think therefore that is a serious difficulty in the way. As was put by one of the professors, it is a leap in the dark and it might be that you may draw blanks or prizes under the system that is proposed, much in the same way as many Hindu fathers draw blanks or prizes in selecting bridegrooms from school boys because of the fear that if they waited long enough they would not be able to procure eligible husbands for their daughters. I know of many instances in which these marriages have ended unhappily. There was another idea at the back of the minds of the Commissioners, that they should spread the net as wide as possible in order to catch the best young men from England at as early an age as possible before the Home service becomes an attraction to them. But I fear that the results would be nearly as good as in the case I have illustrated already. I hope, Sir, that the Government of India will therefore positively decline to act upon the recommendation which has been made.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy :—“ Sir, I desire to express my full sympathy with the Resolution just moved by my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Sastri. My friend has marshalled his facts and stated all his arguments with such sobriety and moderation, and has given so many cogent reasons in support of his Resolution that it is hardly necessary to say anything further on the subject. Particularly after the very sympathetic and considerate manner in which the Hon'ble Home Member has dealt with the question any prolonged debate on this subject becomes wholly superfluous. Reading between the lines of the reply given by the Hon'ble the Home Member it would be perfectly apparent to every one that the Government of India is conscious of the hardship involved in the recommendation of the Public Services Commission. All the facts have been now laid before Government and we hope and pray that the Government of India will seriously consider the question of the great hardship involved in this matter and will not give effect to the recommendation of the Public Services Commission. With these few words I warmly support the Resolution."

RESOLUTION re TERMINATION OF CONTRACT WITH EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The Hon'ble Sir Ibrahim Rahimtoola :—“ Sir, I beg to move the following Resolution :—

‘That this Council recommends to the Governor General in Council to give the required notice to the Managing Company of the East Indian Railway in accordance with the terms of the existing contract.’

“The Resolution as originally sent in March last was intended to raise a discussion of State versus Company management. Under the terms of the contracts now subsisting with the various Managing Companies it is provided that notice of termination of contracts has to be given at the end of the period mentioned in the contracts. The first contract with the East Indian Railway falls due in 1919 and under the terms of that contract notice has to be given two years before, that is, during 1917. As I have said it was my intention to raise the question of taking over the management of the Railway, the urgency of the matter was that notice had to be given in 1917. I therefore gave notice in two parts, the first requiring that notice should be given to the Railway Company as required by the terms of the contract and the second recommending that the management should be taken over by the State. I have had a talk on the matter with the Hon'ble Member in charge and I have agreed to have a separate Resolution in the Delhi session as Government have ample time to decide the question of giving notice ; as the contract does not terminate until 1919, there will be plenty of time to discuss the matter in the Delhi session, and I have therefore confined my Resolution to that part only which is really urgent and relates to the giving of notice. I trust Government will accept it and give the necessary notice so that the question may be considered whether there should be a renewal of the contract on different terms with the existing Company, or whether a new Company is to be brought in, or whether the East Indian Railway Company is to be brought in under separate Management. There will be ample time for the consideration of these questions in the Delhi session and I therefore trust Government will accept the Resolution I have moved."

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"Sir, I am glad to say that we are able to accept this Resolution. The Secretary of State a short time ago proposed to us that in any case notice should be given to the East Indian Railway Company, and the Government of India agreed with him that, whatever the future of the East Indian Railway may be, it is quite clear that notice ought to be given and notice will be given accordingly during the current year. As I have said, I am glad to be able to accept the Resolution."

The Resolution was adopted.

RESOLUTION re THE APPOINTMENT OF A MIXED COMMITTEE TO EXAMINE THE WORKING OF THE INDIAN RAILWAYS ACT.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah:—"Sir, the Resolution which I beg to move runs as follows:—

'This Council recommends to the Governor-General in Council that a mixed committee be appointed to examine the working of the Indian Railways Act and to make their recommendations at an early date.'

"Now, the Council is perhaps aware that when the Indian Railways Act of 1890, was passed we had two previous English Acts, one was the Act of 1888 and another of 1873. On examining the Indian Railways Act of 1890, I find that instead of following the model of the later English law, namely, the Act of 1888 the earlier Act of 1873 has been followed. That is an anomaly, which I have no doubt will be explained by the Hon'ble Member in charge. But it is quite possible that the reasons were that some of the guaranteed Railways, the Bombay Baroda and Central India and the Great Indian Peninsula Railways were in different circumstances when the Government framed the Act of 1890. But, Sir, I submit that the time has come for overhauling that Act and particularly the provisions which will place the administration of Indian Railways on a sounder footing. Personally, I would like to see provision somewhat on the lines of the English Act regarding a permanent Commissioner to hear complaints embodied in the Act. Perhaps, the Council is aware that Mr. Robertson was appointed some time ago to inquire into Railway administration and that after a very careful inquiry he made an important report in 1903. In that Report he pointed out that the Railway Commission which is provided for in the Act of 1890, has never been taken advantage of for

RESOLUTION re THE APPOINTMENT OF A MIXED COMMITTEE TO EXAMINE THE WORKING OF THE INDIAN RAILWAYS ACT.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

obvious reason and that under section 26 of the Indian Railways Act a Commission can only be appointed when asked for by the Governor-General in Council and what is more, it is so expensive, so costly, and probably the party asking for a Commission may have to pay the costs. Section 26 of our present Act reads thus :—

‘For the purposes of this Chapter, the Governor-General in Council shall, as occasion may, in his opinion, require, appoint a Commission styled a railway commission (in this Act referred to as the Commissioners) and consisting of one Law Commissioner and two Lay Commissioners.’

Then it provides for the costs.

‘The costs of and incidental to any proceedings before the Commissioners or the High Court under this Chapter shall be in the discretion of the Commissioners or the High Court as the case may be .....’

‘The point that I wish to bring to the notice of the Council—I do not wish to go into the details of the constitution of the Commission as provided for in this Act because it is quite unnecessary to go into those details—is that you here have a commission appointed if any body asks for it, it is not a permanent commission, under the statute, it is not a commission, as I shall point out to the Council, such as we have under the English Act. And, further, the part relating to the costs, is rather an important matter to consider. Now, Mr. Robertson, who as I told the Council before, had gone into this question at great length and this is what he said in his report :—

‘Under the provisions of the present Indian Railways Act, the calling into existence of the Railway Commission to hear complaints against the Railways is considered so costly an undertaking that the commission has never once been created.’

“In his report he also recommended that to afford the public and the Railways the greatest advantages of which the commission is capable, it should be required to hold its courts not only at a few chief centres but where exceptional circumstances arise at the place nearest and most convenient to the complaint, having regard to the general convenience of all others interested. Now the English Act of 1888 provides quite a different machinery, and that is contained in section 2 of the English Railways Act which constitutes the commission. Section 2 runs as follows :—

‘On the expiration of the provisions of the regulation of Railways Act, 1873, with respect to the commissioners therein mentioned there shall be established a New Commission styled the Railway and Canal Commission (in this Act referred to as the Commissioners) and consisting of two appointed and three ex-officio Commissioners, such Commission shall be a court of record.....’

“Section 5 empowers the Commission to hold sittings in any part of the United Kingdom, and in such place or places as may be most convenient for the determination of the proceeding before them.

“Therefore, Sir, what I urge is this, that instead of having a provision such as is contained in our sub-section 26, we ought to have a permanent Commission which will be available to any complainant, and what is more, they can sit in any part of the country where the complaints can be heard and investigated. Mr. Robertson in his report made his recommendation and urged regarding this matter the following point which I shall give in his own words. Paragraph 61 of his report says.—

‘The Commissioners in addition to their duties on the Board, should be employed in association with a Law Member when a question of Law arises as Commissioners for the purposes of Chapter V of the Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890) which regularises Railway Commissioners and Traffic facilities the present Act being revised on the lines of the English Railway and Canal Traffic Act of 1888 so as to permit of the Railway Commission always being in session.’

“Another thing that I wish to bring to the notice of the Council is this. At present the control of the Government of India as I understand is nil over

RESOLUTION re THE APPOINTMENT OF A MIXED COMMITTEE TO EXAMINE THE WORKING OF THE INDIAN RAILWAYS ACT.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

the Railways. We know that cases are not unknown where the Railway Board have been able to get round the Secretary of State for India in certain matters over the heads of the Government of India. As far as I understand, Sir, the Railway Board is not constituted or established so as to give any control over it to Government under the statute, and the Agent or Traffic Manager of a Railway Company is not in any way subject to the control of the Government of India. I know that there is a Member in the Secretary of State's Council who is called the Railway Director, and through him, no doubt, the Secretary of State is very often approached and influenced, but I have not been able to find out any statutory power which vests in the Government of India any authority to interfere with the Railway Board or the Agent or the Traffic Manager of any Railway Company. I submit, Sir, that we ought to take more powers, and the Government of India ought to have more control over the Railways than it has at present.

"The next point that I wish to bring to the notice of the Council is this. The complaints which I would divide into various heads might be heard by this Commission which I propose should be created by the statute. The complaints would be first of all from commercial and trading firms with regard to rates and with regard to preference which might be given, and in that the commercial community of this country is very much interested. With regard to this complaint it is not unknown that sometimes preference is given and therefore it would be much more satisfactory if any such complaints were made to the Commission which would be an independent tribunal and it would hear both sides, namely, the Railway Company or those representing the company and the complainant.

"Then the next item which might be considered is this: passengers' complaints. With regard to passengers' complaints we know that it is a very well known fact in India that there is a great deal of overcrowding, which is visible to any casual traveller at any station when travelling, and that is a matter which requires very careful attention and it ought to be put right. Then there are many other matters such as ventilation, lighting, sanitation, and particularly the refreshment rooms. These are only a few suggestions which I want to put before the Council to show why a committee should be appointed, and I do not say that every one of these questions will have to be embodied in the Act. These are some of the suggestions that I put before the Council in order to support my resolution that it is time that a committee should be appointed to consider all these questions and make such recommendations as the committee may think proper with a view to modify the present Act of 1890. Then also the question of public safety may be considered. We know, Sir, that accidents happen and in the case of an accident at present, as far as I have been able to make out, you have merely the railway officials and somebody representing the Government or the Police. Those are the two bodies who have any voice in the matter of inquiring into any railway accident. There again it is desirable in the case of any serious accident to have some non-official representative at the inquiry. There might be a panch, or there might be one or two citizens who should be associated with the Railway authorities, and they should have a voice in the inquiry in the case of any serious accident. At present, the inquiry is made by the Railway authorities and nobody else practically.

"Then the next question that is also of great importance is in regard to the railway employees. Now I am not dealing with the bigger employees, nor am I dealing with the clerks and railway officials, but the largest number employed by the Railways belong to the humbler class, namely, the labourers, and so far as those employees are concerned we know there have been strikes, and particularly a recent strike in Bombay, viz., the Great Indian Peninsula Railway strike. I am quite sure, Sir, that if there was any machinery such as Conciliatory Boards or a Commission which could have inquired into this matter, the strike would not have lasted as long as it did, and it was certainly a tremendous loss to the Railway which is after all a State Railway, and a loss to those poor strikers. Perhaps the Hon'ble Member knows that outside or private intervention was objected to but eventually His Excellency the Governor of Bombay had to intervene and it was really that intervention which put an end to that strike. Therefore I say it is absolutely essential that there should be some machinery by which these strikes can be dealt with, and a body which would hold the scales even between the Railway Company and the labourers should be constituted to deal with the matter. In the past I believe some such procedure was adopted. I think there were strikes in 1906 and 1907, and particularly I may mention the strike which took place on the Eastern Bengal State Railway when the drivers and foremen caused a temporary dislocation, and also on the East Indian Railway when the European and Eurasian drivers of Howrah struck, and that really was a very serious strike, and it was only terminated by the appointment by the Government of a special Board of conciliation based on the lines of the Boards recently introduced into England to consider the representations of these men, and the Conciliation Board dealt with the question of higher pay, of mileage allowance and extra pay for working overtime and on holidays and so on. That was done in the case of the strike in Howrah on the East Indian Railway line. But there is no provision in the statute for it in India; that was only done to meet that particular case. We know perfectly well that as we go on, although we do not wish to have these troubles and nobody wants these troubles less than I do, we know that the labour question must grow in importance. In England, where labour is so well organised and so powerful you have, notwithstanding that, provisions for dealing with these labour questions satisfactorily, and therefore I say it is essential that in this country we should have some definite provisions and machinery by which these questions can be dealt with. I would draw the attention of the Council to Section 31 of the English Act which lays down the provision with regard to complaints to the Board of Trade about unreasonable charges by Railway Companies. I do not wish to trouble the Council by reading the section which also lays down the machinery to deal with complaints about unreasonable charges by Railway Companies. It says:—

RESOLUTION re THE APPOINTMENT OF A MIXED COMMITTEE TO EXAMINE THE WORKING OF THE INDIAN RAILWAYS ACT.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

'The Board of Trade, if they think there is reasonable ground of complaint, may call upon the railway company for an explanation and endeavour to settle any differences between the complainant and the railway company.'

"You also find that, what is more, the Board of Trade—

'Shall from time to time submit to Parliament reports of the complaints made to them under the provisions of this section, and the results of the proceedings taken in relation to such complaints, together with such observations thereon as the Board of Trade think fit.'

"Therefore I would submit that in all these matters, not only these complaints and these grievances, if any, put forward should be investigated by a proper body constituted under the statute, but the reports of the proceedings should be submitted to the Imperial Legislative Council.

"Well, Sir, these are some of the points which I submit are such as require very careful consideration and hence I submit, Sir, that our Act needs modification and revision. I would therefore ask the Council to accept this Resolution.

"Then, as to the constitution of any Committee that might be appointed, to consider these various points, I submit that it should be a small Committee. After all, on most of these points we have the model and the experience of England, and there would not be much difficulty in following that model and experience, save and except in such matters of detail where the circumstances and the conditions of this country are different. Therefore, I would submit Sir, that a very small committee should be appointed consisting of one member who should represent the commercial class, one member who should represent the travelling public, while the rest of the members of the committee might consist of representatives of the Government and the Railway Companies. But the committee should be as small as possible. Then that committee, if they wanted any information, would take such evidence as they might require or call for such information as they might require on these various questions. The reason I advocate a small committee is that it would be able to proceed without delay to inquire into the matter and make recommendations."

TO EXAMINE THE WORKING OF THE INDIAN RAILWAYS ACT:

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah; Sir George Barnes.]

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes:—"Sir, if my Hon'ble friend has in mind the appointment of a Committee forthwith to overhaul the Railways Act of 1890, and to consider what amendments may be desirable I am afraid that it is not possible to meet his views, but if he likes to bring forward his Resolution again after the conclusion of peace, I can promise him that it will be considered very carefully and very sympathetically.

"With a great deal of what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member, I entirely agree, but I do not think that the present time is the right time for action. As my Hon'ble friend well knows, the greater part of the Railways Act is of a highly technical nature, and it would not be practicable to attempt a revision without the skilled assistance of technical experts both on the committee and as witnesses. Now at the present time all our railway experts, all our technical railway experts have got more to do than they can possibly get through. Many of them have joined the Indian Army Reserve of Officers, and a still larger number are being employed on railway service overseas. It is no secret that during the past year we have built 500 miles of railway in Mesopotamia, and all this length of line is manned by officials from the Indian railway systems. East Africa too has drawn for its railway personnel upon India. Thus on the one hand Indian railways have been depleted of many of their skilled men, and on the other the Indian railways are carrying a heavier traffic than they have ever carried before. In these circumstances it would not be wise or right to detach men from the urgent war work in which they are engaged, to discuss possible amendments to the Railways Act. I do not wish the Hon'ble Member to understand that I do not think that the revision of the Railways Act is not one of the pieces of work which we ought to keep in view. The Act has been in existence for a long time, and like all other Acts requires to be kept up to date, but it is a good Act and on the whole has worked well, and I do not think that it can be said that there are no urgent grievances to remedy or wrongs to set right. If any such exist for which legislation is necessary then I must point out that the remedy is legislation directed to the specific grievances or wrongs, and not a roving inquiry into all the details of a technical Act.

"If I may use a simile, we are at present unfortunately in the position of a household which is being attacked by a band of ruffians intent on murder, and my Hon'ble friend Mr. Jinnah is in the position of a member of the household who while the attack is proceeding wishes to discuss whether the sofas and chairs in the house would not be the better for a set of fresh covers. While the war is with us, though it is far removed from us in distance, our whole energies must be devoted to the war, for the result matters quite as much to India as to England. The railways are of such essential importance for the prosecution of the war that I feel, and I think my Hon'ble friend when he thinks it over will agree with me, that no step should be taken which would weaken our railways at this juncture.

"There are certain matters that my Hon'ble friend referred to relating to the Railways Act. I do not propose to deal with those in detail. I would like, however, to say one word with regard to the last subject to which he referred, namely, the subject of strikes. I think he is under the impression that some machinery for dealing with strikes is contained in our English Railway Act of 1888. This is not the case. There is no machinery for dealing with strikes to be found in our Railway Act. Strikes do not occur only on railways: they occur with all forms of labour, whether the labour is employed on a railway, in a mill or in Government service; and we all know there is a strike going on at the present moment among the postmen at Bombay. I think that the machinery which my Hon'ble friend must have had in his mind is that contained in the Conciliation Act of 1896. That Act as a matter of fact is being considered by the Government of India at the present time with a view to its provisions being applied to India. This Conciliation Act of 1896, gave the Board of Trade power to inquire into the causes of a labour dispute and to appoint a conciliator. I think I had better read a few words from the second section of the Act, for the whole essence of the Act is in the second section:—

'Where a difference exists or is apprehended between an employer or any class of employers and workmen, or between different classes of workmen, the Board of Trade, if they think fit, may exercise all or any of the following powers, namely, (a) to enquire into the causes and circumstances of the difference, (b) to take such steps as may seem expedient for the purpose of enabling the parties to the difference to meet together under the presidency of a chairman mutually agreed upon or nominated by the Board of Trade, (c) to appoint a conciliator if asked so to do by either party, or (d) on the application of both parties, to appoint an arbitrator.'

"I think very likely that is the sort of machinery which my Hon'ble friend had in mind; and if this Act were adopted in India it would meet his views on that point. I hope that what I have said will satisfy my Hon'ble friend. I think he will realise that it is really impossible to embark on this inquiry at the present time; but I can promise him that when the times are easier his Resolution shall have the most sympathetic consideration."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"Sir, I am very much obliged to the Hon'ble Member in charge for giving me an assurance that after the war this question will be considered sympathetically. But I must confess, Sir, that I have not been able to appreciate what difficulty there is at the present moment in appointing a small committee which will consider the question which I have put before Council and make recommendations for the modification of the Act. The Hon'ble Member may take it from me and I assure him that nobody is more anxious, than myself, that the operations of the war shall be carried on with all the energy and all the power we possess uninterfered with by any proposal of any kind which might in the very least degree minimise our efforts. But I must frankly say, Sir, that I am not satisfied that I am asking for a change of sofa-covers during an attack on the house by an enemy as the Hon'ble Member puts it. I know there is an enemy at the door, but I do not think there is any real analogy between what I am seeking to do and what the Hon'ble Member said. My proposal which I think the Hon'ble Member has really received very sympathetically is a very simple one. I have not been able to understand how it can interfere with the war. The Hon'ble Member said that a large number of railway employees are required now for other purposes. Well, we do not want the employees. All I say is this; a small committee should be appointed and should go on with this work and consider these various matters and by the time the war is over we shall be ready to consider what modification should be introduced in this Act. I may point out to Council that what I am suggesting was recommended by Mr. Robertson as far back as 1903 and I should like to know, if I may ask—the war commenced only in 1914,—why has the Government not moved since 1903?

"Therefore, there is nothing very new so far as this particular point is concerned. As the Hon'ble Member pointed out himself, there is a Conciliation Act in England of 1896, to deal with the complaints of employees. Now, why should that not also be done in India as soon as possible? Therefore, I cannot say that I am satisfied with the reasons given by the Hon'ble Member in charge for not having the committee at once. But I suppose, Sir, that if I press this resolution I shall be defeated because the decision has already been given; and I do not therefore think any useful purpose will be served by my asking for a division. I really regret that the Hon'ble Member has not accepted this resolution."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President :—"I understand the Hon'ble Member wishes me to put the resolution to vote."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"No, Sir, I beg to withdraw the resolution."

RESOLUTION re THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CENTRAL RECRUITING BOARD.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—"Sir, I beg to move that—

'This Council recommends to the Governor-General in Council that the constitution of the Central Recruiting Board be modified so as to secure at least two Indian representatives of British India on the Board.'

"The Resolution is a very simple one and here my object is what the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Commerce Department said, viz., that we should concentrate all our attention and efforts on the war. The resolution is a very simple one. The Council is aware that sometime ago a Central Recruiting Board was established as also provincial boards in various provinces with a non-official element in the latter. But the Central Recruiting Board has got no non-official element or British Indian representatives; and I submit, Sir, that if you wish, as we all wish, to utilise the man-power of India, you should have on this board at least two British Indian representatives. I say British Indian representatives, because we have already got on the board two Ruling Princes. Therefore, in contradistinction to them, I use the phrase British Indian representatives. Now, the object of the Central Recruiting Board as it is notified is as follows :—The consideration of our requirements in military personnel of every description, combatant and non-combatant, and how these requirements can best be met; consideration of how the quotas required can be best distributed among the several provinces, co-ordination of recruitment so as to ensure that the demands of the military services shall conflict as little as possible with essential industrial and economical requirements; close scrutiny of the progress of recruitment and consideration of schemes for meeting necessary or potential demands for recruitment in regard to which the present system may seem inadequate; and lastly, to ensure in short that the prosecution of the war is not hampered by any avoidable deficiency in man-power. Well, now, Sir, until I hear the Government, I cannot understand why there is not a single Indian representative on this Central Recruiting Board. I personally have not been able to find out the reason. You have admittedly a non-official element in the provincial recruiting boards; you have two Ruling Princes on the Central Recruiting Board. Why is not an Indian associated with this Central Recruiting Board? Will he not be of help to you? Do you not wish to utilise the man-power of India, and will it not be of use to you if you have at least two Indian representatives on the board? It is said, I do not say that this is correct, but it is said that India has not made her best efforts. On the other hand, when we want to utilise the man-power of India Government do not associate Indian representatives on a board of this kind.

RESOLUTION re THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CENTRAL RECRUITING BOARD.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah; Sir William Meyer.] [25TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

"Sir, it will give the matter a great impetus and it will help the objects we have in view.

"Therefore I hope that this Resolution will be accepted."

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer:—"Sir, as President of the Central Recruiting Board I rise to explain why the Government cannot accept the Resolution now before us. I hope to be able to convince my friend the Mover that in so doing I am not disregarding non-official co-operation.

"The Central Recruiting Board is, as its name implies, a central and co-ordinating body. It has to estimate, on information derived from the military authorities, the total number of recruits required for all purposes connected with the Army, in and out of India, according to existing demands and those further demands which may presently come upon us. Having thus considered what the scale of recruitment in the various branches, combatant and non-combatant, should be during the next few months, the Board has to distribute this among the various Provinces with reference to their circumstances and potentialities, assigning to each province a quota which it is asked to obtain. The principal Local Governments have, for this object, established Provincial Recruiting or War Committees, and these bodies, in accordance with the express desire of the Government of India include non-official Indian representatives such as influential land-owners, large employers of labour and political leaders. The Government of India have also enjoined on Local Governments the desirability of the co-operation of non-officials in the actual recruiting work in the districts. It was explained that they might get great assistance from their non-official coadjutors.

"The object of the Central Board is devolution, providing as far as possible that each Local Government with the assistance of its Recruiting Board which, as I have said, contains a strong non-official element, should arrange for the obtainment of recruits in the manner best suited to local circumstances and calculated, as observed in a quotation my Hon'ble friend read out, not to interfere with the progress of essential industries. For such purposes the co-operation of a non-official element is clearly most advantageous in the provinces and in the districts. But the position is quite different in the Central Board itself which is really a small official body. That Board accordingly consists primarily of direct representatives of the Government of India, civil and military; and His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, as representing the most important Province in connection with recruitment.

"Then we have some Indian Princes who attend when matters relating to their States are under consideration. I have had it put to me in private conversation that it is felt that these Indian Princes ought not to interfere with the affairs of British India. The illustrious Princes who sit on our Board would be the first to acknowledge that this is so; they have no desire to do that. But it is an important point and I wish the Council to appreciate it that our recruitment operations are not confined to British India. We are asking the principal Native States also to supply quotas month by month for the various branches of the army and non-combatant services. It is most desirable therefore that we should have on our Board Princes who can speak with authority on behalf of the Native States—Princes who, like H. H. the Maharaja of Sindia and H. H. the Maharaja of Bikanir, have rendered great personal services to the Empire; so that the presence of these Princes on the Board is really analogous to that of H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. They are representatives of Governments which are co-operating with us in recruiting work.

"But non-official Indians from the Provinces stand on a quite different footing. I have already explained how much we appreciate their co-operation in the Provincial Recruitment Boards and in the actual recruiting work in the districts. They would be out of place however in what is really an official central body; their assistance is fittingly rendered at another stage of the operations. I think therefore that the Hon'ble Mover will see that my non-acceptance of his Resolution does not involve the least want of confidence in non-official co-operation. What we desire is that that co-operation should be rendered where it can be most effective. For these reasons I am unable to accept the Resolution."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Sir, I must say that the reasons which the Hon'ble the President of the Central Recruiting Board has advanced will not satisfy Indian sentiment generally. We do not want to offer any obstruction in the great discussions that lie before the Central Board; the Resolution was moved with the desire for an opportunity being given to Indians to render such humble services as they might be able to give in connection with the work. No one amongst us has objected, none can object, to the presence of ruling Princes on the Board; we are glad to think that they have availed themselves of the opportunity of rendering invaluable services in the cause of the Empire in every way. The object of the Resolution was to give the representatives of British India, if there was any matter connected with the war in which their services could be enlisted an opportunity of rendering such assistance as they could give in prosecuting the war to a successful conclusion. In matters like this the Central Board have to deal with sentiment, feeling counts for a good deal; those who are working in the Provinces and in the Districts have to work on the feelings of their fellow-men to induce them to make sacrifices for their King and country; that feeling would be strongly stimulated if the representatives of British India were taken into confidence in considering what the aims of recruitment were. If the presence of such representatives on the Board in any way raised difficulties or they were out of sympathy in the task before the Board no one would wish them there. But I think it would be recognised, that if there were two representatives of British India selected by Government or recommended by this Council on the Board, they might be able to render some service, humble though it may be, in the task that lies before the Board. It seems to me that the Government might yet reconsider the matter and if there is no difficulty in the way of accepting the suggestion, may accept it; it would help to strengthen the feeling with which members in the provinces and districts are working to enlist people for the service of the King."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah:—"Sir, I must confess I am not convinced by what the Hon'ble Member said on behalf of Government. I must say that I can not discover any real reason for not accepting the Resolution. What is the answer? His answer is that you have got a non-official element on the Provincial Recruiting Boards.

"The Central Recruiting Board is purely an official body and therefore in that body there is no room for a non-official. But, Sir, what is the object of this 'Central Recruiting Board'? The object of it is, I have no doubt as stated in the Government Notification. I shall read the Government Notification:—

"These Provincial Boards will help to keep the Central Board in touch with every aspect of the question and it is hoped that by getting this prominence of civilian opinion the necessary military requirements may be realised without disturbance to essential national interests."

"It will be seen that the functions of the Central Board are precisely similar to those which, as the war goes on, every nation has found it necessary to entrust to a 'special authority.'"

"Further, I want to know, Sir, in England is not the non-official element associated with the Central Board? Is that purely an official body that works for the purpose of recruiting?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" In England the Central body is purely official."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—" Well, if that is so, my answer will be this, you must remember that the official authority there is differently constituted from the official authority in this country. ...."

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya :—" They are the elected representatives of the people."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. A. Jinnah :—" Yes, they are the chosen representatives of the people, they are elected by the people, and therefore it is a very different thing altogether. Now, the Hon'ble Member I think, by trying to excuse himself has accused himself. The Hon'ble Member said that it is not due to want of confidence that Government do not wish to associate the non-official element. I say that it will be understood generally that it is due to want of confidence in the people of India that the Government do not want to associate the non-official element. That will be the interpretation. Therefore, Sir, I am not at all satisfied with this answer and I feel very keenly about it. I say that the Indians ought to be represented on the Central Board and therefore I ask that this Resolution should be pressed."

RESOLUTION re WITHHOLDING APPROVAL TO LEGISLATIVE MEASURES REGARDING LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT AND PRIMARY EDUCATION.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—“Sir, I beg to move the following resolution:—

‘This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that pending the settlement of a detailed scheme of post-war reforms the administrative approval of the Government of India to legislative measures relating to local self-government and primary education be withheld, and where sanction has been already given to recommend to local Governments the desirability of suspending further action with regard to such measures.’

“I think this is a Resolution which ought to be welcome to the Government of India and to Local Governments because I think that if this Resolution be accepted, the administrations will be relieved of some work and will be able to give greater attention to war measures. But apart from that, I think that on grounds of broad policy there is much to be said in favour of this Resolution. I am not asking this in regard to any emergent measures relating to local self-government or primary education or any measures that do not deal substantially with the policy concerning the constitution of local bodies, to local finance and taxation and the question of compulsory primary education on a large scale. I think there is good reason for stating that, in view of the co-relation and mutual dependence of the various measures which form parts of the scheme of reforms which we expect to be announced, for introduction after the war, it would be wise that the Local Governments do not attempt partial remedies and introduce reforms which must necessarily be reviewed when the larger policy dictates the action to be taken by the Government. I am not dealing now with private measures; I am dealing with Government measures. Let us take the question of primary education; whether it is to be financed from

RESOLUTION 7c WITHHOLDING APPROVAL TO LEGISLATIVE MEASURES REGARDING LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT AND PRIMARY EDUCATION.

[Rai Bahadur B. N. Saha; Sir Sankaran Nair.]

[25th September, 1917.]

Imperial taxation or whether it is to be financed from Provincial taxation, or partly from local and Provincial taxation, whether it is to be an all-India measure making it necessary that there should be some relation in the method and manner of progress in the various Provinces. These are questions of vital importance which must be settled as soon as the war is over, and I am encouraged in my hope that this question will be tackled in the manner it deserves from the sympathetic pronouncement of His Excellency the Viceroy in the speech that he has delivered at the beginning of this session.

Speaking of primary education His Lordship said that the Government had under contemplation various measures of far-reaching importance which could not be announced at the present moment inasmuch as they had relation to other measures of a substantial character relating to education in general. It is, therefore, necessary, Sir, before Provincial Governments are allowed to legislate in these matters that we should know where we stand, because if primary education is to be undertaken in all the Provinces from Imperial taxation, it necessarily follows that Provincial finance would be curtailed to some extent. Local finances would not be so largely available for that purpose, and it is no use permitting taxation by local bodies for this purpose. Questions of Imperial and Provincial finance are also largely dependent on what measures of reform are in contemplation at the present moment or are to be materially achieved at the end of the war. The question of Imperial and Provincial finance would have to be considered deeply when the constitution of the Legislative bodies and the relation between the Executive and Local Legislative Councils is taken up for consideration. Well in view of these large measures in contemplation, I think, Sir, it is necessary that measures dealing with such essential objects should for the present be kept in abeyance.

One of the principal reasons why local self-government is in opinion of many notable to make rapid advance is that the local bodies have not had ample resources at their disposal and I know that several Local Governments as well as the public have been devising various measures for their improvement. If that be so, Sir, then I think it would be desirable that this question should be deferred until the end of the war. The same thing may be said with regard to the composition and constitution of the local bodies and electorates. The question as to whether these local bodies should be almost wholly elected or partly elected and partly nominated, and if wholly elected whether communal representation is to be given, are questions of far-reaching importance which must be considered both with relation to the Imperial and local Legislatures and local bodies. Then the question is how far down we shall have to go in the matter of electorates, and in the case of taluk boards and district boards. These are all questions which have reference to the composition of the local Legislative Councils also. And then the question would also arise as to whether we should have to constitute a local Government Board to deal with such matters similar to the body existing in England if the Legislatures be given more powers than they are at present given with regard to local self-government. Whatever may be the future relations between the Legislature and the Executive, people feel that with regard to local self-government the Legislature ought to be and will be given greater powers than it possesses at the present moment. If that hope be realised, then Sir, I think these measures would require modification. It is with that object that I have given notice of this Resolution and I hope it will commend itself to the Council.

The Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair :— Sir, the Government cannot accept this Resolution. My friend wants the Council to recommend to the Governor General that the administrative approval of the Government of India may be refused to the introduction of any measure of any Bill into the local Legislative Councils. These Bills in the local Legislative Councils are the result of long and careful consideration by the local Government and they are sent up here for administrative sanction. Unless it appears that there are of any such Bill, we can scarcely do so. We do not know now what reforms are likely to be introduced and we are scarcely in a position to say at present that the Bills proposed to be introduced would be so very repugnant to the reforms which may be subsequently carried out that we would be justified in telling the local Government that they would be acting wisely if they did not introduce the Bill.

PRIMARY EDUCATION.

[Sir Sankaran Nair ; Rai Bahadur B. N. Sarma ; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

"It is possible but scarcely probable that a Bill might come up which is so utterly repugnant to the spirit of the reforms which we think are likely to be introduced after the war that we might be justified in refusing sanction. On the other hand, if the Bill were introduced in the local Council it would be open to any member of the local Council to move that its consideration be deferred. If it is not of an urgent nature, then the Council might do so or if in the opinion of the Council it is a retrograde measure or one of a controversial character it would be open to the Council again to defer consideration of the matter.

"So that it does not appear to me, Sir, that the matter is one for the Imperial Government to consider at this stage.

"Then again I doubt whether my Hon'ble friend has realised the scope of this Resolution and the consequences which would follow if this Resolution were passed. We have recently given sanction to a private Member of the Bombay Legislative Council to introduce a measure referring to primary education which would allow local boards to introduce compulsory education if they can do so....."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"I have excluded private Bills from the purview of my Resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair:—"Then you have to modify the Resolution. His Excellency the Viceroy has already announced to the Council that the measures which are being considered by the Government of India for the extension of Primary Education will not be announced at present.

"The only other Bills are Bills which might be introduced by Local Governments. We have none such before us now. It is possible that some may come up hereafter, but if they do and when they do we can consider, as I have already said, whether we should advise the Local Government to put them off in view of the reforms which are to be introduced after the war. On these grounds I oppose this Resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"Is it not the case that the Madras Government have under consideration at the present moment two fairly considerable Bills relating to the Municipalities Act and the Corporation Act?"

The Hon'ble Sir Sankaran Nair:—"I understand the Madras Government have these Bills under consideration."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, the Hon'ble Member in charge has assured us that if any measures which are repugnant to the sense of the reforms which are to be introduced after the war, are submitted for administrative approval, approval is not likely to be given. And having regard also to the observation that it is open to the Legislative Councils to ask for an adjournment of the consideration of such measures, and to the opposition to the Resolution, I do not think any good purpose will be served by my pressing it. I therefore beg to withdraw the Resolution."

The Resolution was by leave withdrawn.

RESOLUTION re INDIAN SECTION OF INDIAN DEFENCE FORCE.RESOLUTION re INDIAN SECTION OF THE I. D. F.[Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]

[15TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma :—" Sir, I beg to move my next Resolution which runs as follows :—

'This Council recommends to the Governor General in Council that steps be taken with a view to extend the period for the entertainment of applications for recruitment for the Indian section of the Indian Defence Force.'

"I do not think, Sir, that this is a controversial resolution or that it requires any very elaborate reasoning in support of it to commend it to the Council. I hope that the Government will be pleased to deal with the matter sympathetically, and that the Council will be able to give it its accord and support. It expresses, Sir, the keen desire which we all feel to make the Indian section of the Indian Defence Force the success that it was intended to be. We share the regret expressed by His Excellency the Viceroy in his opening speech that the experiment has not been more successful, and it is with a view to making the experiment completely successful, to give Indians an opportunity for applying in large numbers, and thus make the future Territorial Army a reality, that this Resolution has been proposed by me.

"It is unnecessary for me to go into the various reasons which have dissuaded Indians from coming forward for recruitment. The press has discussed them fully. The matter is a controversial one and I do not propose to deal with it at length. But it must be said, Sir, that wherever we went on our recruiting campaign we were met by this question—especially from the Indian student population: 'First see that the commissioned ranks are thrown open to us; otherwise how can you ask us in any fairness to enlist in the Indian section of the Indian Defence Force?' Happily, now that the Government's policy has been announced in the matter and the commissioned ranks are thrown open to Indians, and this galling restriction has been removed, there is a better understanding between the Government and the people, and I am sure that the obstacles we have had to face hitherto have now been removed. Another thing that has stood in the way has been the misunderstanding between the Government and a section of the people during recent months, to which I need hardly refer here. The atmosphere has since become clearer. There is perfect harmony between the Government and the people at the present moment, and I am sure we may expect greater co-operation among all sections with the Government in the matter of making this experiment a complete success.

"Then, Sir, I may be permitted to state that before the statutory restriction which is the only bar at present existing is removed, the question of rations also may be considered by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief sympathetically. I put an interpellation the other day which has been misunderstood. I never asked for any special treatment, and I shall never ask for any special treatment, as between different portions of the Force which stand upon the same level of equality. But having regard to the different habits of the people to whom I referred, I said that the question as to what rations they should be given might be considered. Not that I wanted more for them; but that the quality of the rations might be slightly different from the rations which are supplied to the Indian Army. But that is a minor matter of detail, although it is a question of pressing importance in some quarters. I hope this question will be satisfactorily settled. Of course the nature of the food that South Indians take is different from that of the Mahrattas just as the food that Mahrattas take is somewhat different from the food of people in Upper India or from the food that Europeans and Eurasians take. Some differences do exist and if only those differences be kept in view I am sure the difficulty can be easily removed.

"Now, Sir, that most of the hindrances to recruitment have been removed, I hope the Government will be pleased either to extend the time by an Ordinance, or by a modification of the present enactment, to give Indians the satisfaction of co-operating with the Government in this respect."

•RESOLUTION re INDIAN SECTION OF INDIAN DEFENCE FORCE.

[His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.]

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief:—"In their communiqué, dated the 31st March 1917, the Government of India fixed 6,000 as the maximum strength of the Indian portion of the Indian Defence Force. This number was fixed with reference to our general military requirements, and the numbers which we could train, arm, equip and find accommodation for. As the Hon'ble member is aware, the response to our offer of service was at first rather disappointing. In May the number of applications for enrolment were under 400, but probably as the result of certain concessions which were made in order to encourage the formation of University Corps, there was a great increase in the number of applications during the months of July and August, so that the final figures are now about 5,613, that is to say not very far short of the 6,000 which we originally asked for.

"We will not know how many of these candidates are fit for service until the results of the medical examinations have been reported to Army Headquarters. But even allowing for a large percentage of rejections, we anticipate that we shall have more enrolled candidates at our disposal than we can train during the next few months.

"The Government of India have accordingly decided not to extend the statutory period during which applications for enrolment can be received. To do so would entail legislative action for which there is neither time nor justification at present.

"When the recruits of the first batch have completed their 90 days' training, we shall be in a position to judge of their military value and shall have gained some practical experience as to the best way of dealing with the various problems which will arise in connection with the administration of the Indian portion of the Defence Force. If, as the result of such experience, it is considered desirable to increase its strength, the Government of India will no doubt consider the question of amending clause 12 (1) of the Act.

"I am in sympathy with those Indians who cannot join the Regular Army but who are desirous of receiving a military training, and so long as it is realised that this training must be a real one, designed to produce well disciplined and efficient soldiers, the Hon'ble Member may rest assured that no obstacles will be placed in their way. But, as I have said on several previous occasions, there must be no sliding back to the pre-war standards of discipline and training of the old Volunteer Force, or any attempt to substitute part-time work for the period of continuous training which has been prescribed as the minimum requisite for the instruction of the Indian Defence Force recruit.

"I must explain, however, that our resources in the way of instructors, arms, and equipment are not inexhaustible, and that we have to employ them so that they may be utilised to the best advantage. Our first care must be to provide for the prompt and efficient training and equipment of the regular soldiers required for service overseas, that is to say of the men who do the fighting. The expansion of the Indian Defence Force, which can only be utilized for service in India, must, therefore, be regarded as a matter of secondary importance, and the extent of such expansion must necessarily be determined with reference to the general military situation and our military resources and requirements.

"I am, for the reasons I have indicated, unable to accept the Hon'ble Member's resolution at present, but the question of the extension or removal of the time limit will be re-examined next year, when we will decide as to the desirability or otherwise of taking action on the lines which he suggests.

"The Hon'ble Member will, I hope, accept my assurance that I am in full sympathy with this military training movement in which he is interested; and as far as I can find trained instructors, equipment and so forth, he may rest assured that any suggestion he may put forward will have my sympathetic consideration and that I shall make every endeavour to realise his wishes. In respect of the matter to which he referred before, when dealing with the ration question, I am glad to see that our points of view are not so different as I thought at first. I regarded him as having recommended preferential treatment for different classes. I understand now that his point of view is a different one, and he may rest assured that while we must see that no preference is extended to any class, we will arrange to provide each class with such ration as may be most suitable.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma:—"Sir, in view of the sympathetic assurance given by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief that the question will be re-examined next year, I beg leave to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"Sir, I beg to move that—

'This Council recommends to the Governor-General in Council that the Government of India do represent to the Secretary of State for India that no changes should be made in accordance with any of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission in the scale of salaries, or in the rules relating to the annuities fixed for members of the Indian Civil Service which would throw any additional burden on the revenues of India.'

"I am essaying a rather hard task, and I would ask the Council to remember what I said the other day, that I appreciate fully and sincerely the great benefit that India derives from the work of these various services. My objection, as those who have read all these Resolutions that stand in my name will have discovered, is not solely to any increase in the emoluments of the Indian Civil Service; it extends to such increases in the emoluments of other highly paid services as well; so that in moving this Resolution I would beg the Council to take it that I am also referring indirectly to the Resolutions that stand in my name with regard to the other services. There is not sufficient time during this session to go through all those Resolutions mutatis, mutandis. Therefore, what I say in respect of this resolution may be applied to other Resolutions as well of a similar nature.

"I will first refer to certain figures which will show the present scale of salaries that obtain with regard to the Indian Civil Service, and take the opportunity also of stating by way of comparison the salaries that obtain in other places. Our Civil Service starts with a salary of £340 a year. In 8 years on an average they rise to £800 a year and by seniority alone they may rise to £2,000 a year. Beyond that there are the prize posts to which are affixed salaries from £2,200 a year to £6,667 a year more or less. Besides these....."

The Hon'ble the Vice-President:—"I think the Hon'ble Member means Rs. 6,667 a month."

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay:—"The Hon'ble Member has not perhaps noticed the ratio of exchange."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—"I was thinking of the salary of a Lieutenant Governor.

"Besides, the members of the Services are in the enjoyment of a Family Pension Fund, the State makes some contribution, but the bulk is contributed by the Members themselves. It is worthwhile to place in juxtaposition the salaries drawn by the men who pass the same examination, viz., the Civil Service examination in England; they begin on £200 a year, in 15 years they rise to £500, after 30 years they get £1,000, and after that they get prize posts of £2,000 a year; after 35 years' service they can retire on £500 a year. It is not, however, proper to compare the Home Service with the Indian Civil Service because there are considerations with respect to service in the East which do not apply to service at Home and therefore certain allowances must be made for the great difference in the lives of those who enter the two Services. If we take the services of those who pass the same examination and enter the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States, we find a great discrepancy; we find that they start as against the £340, of the Indian Civil Service, on £250, a year, in 15 years they rise to £800, while the Indian Civil Service rise to that in 8 years, and they can rise after 30 years to £1,500, the highest post for a member of the Service in the Far East is £2,500. Let me take the case of Ceylon, there the starting salary is £300, in 12 years, the men rise to £800; after 20 or 25 years, the precise figure is not available, they reach about £1,400, the maximum salary for a member of the Ceylon Civil Service is £2,000 a year. These figures will show that the Indian Civil Service is paid a good deal more liberally than the corresponding service in the Federated Malay States or Ceylon, countries which approximate more or less to the conditions of India and so the comparison I think I cannot be said to be unfair. The attractions of the Indian Civil Service, considering the salaries alone, are great. In addition to the salaries, as Mr. Justice Rahim pointed out, we have to consider the advantages which this Service enjoys, these are mentioned under several heads: allowances in addition to salary:—frequency of leave and amount of leave allowances, passage and outfit money, period of probation during which they receive extra rates, the higher rate of salary while employed in training work, leave for certain examinations for fitting themselves for future work, contributions by the State to Family and other Provident Funds, free medical attendance, favourable rates of exchange, exchange compensation allowance, age at which the pension is paid, the amount of pension. In all these respects you will find that the Civil Service enjoys advantages denied to other Services. I would likewise mention the list of allowances to which the Members of the Indian Civil Service are entitled. I do not imply by any means that these allowances are drawn at the same time or all the time:—acting allowance; personal allowance; special allowance; settlement allowance; charge allowance; deputation allowance; horse allowance; conveyance allowance; house rent allowance; travelling allowance; tentage allowance; Burma allowance; Presidency allowance; Frontier allowance; Sindh allowance; Baluchistan allowance; outpost allowance; Pushtu allowance. The leave to which they are entitled is also of various kinds, some of these can be combined and others cannot be combined:—Privilege leave; furlough; special leave; extraordinary leave without allowance; leave on medical certificate; study leave; subsidiary leave; I believe there is another leave called examination leave.

"A word I now must say with regard to the annuities in the case of this service; the arrangements are somewhat peculiar. During the whole period of their service members are obliged to contribute 4 per cent of their salaries to their pension or annuity, it is calculated that this amount averages £250 or one-fourth of the annuity. It has been stated that when this contribution of 4 per cent first began it was calculated that the Government would have to contribute only £500 and that the rest would be made up by the 4 per cent contribution but owing to the fall in exchange and other causes the value of the 4 per cent contribution has diminished by a half, so that the Government which began by contributing £500 towards the annuity is now contributing £750.

The proposal of the Public Services Commission with regard to salaries is that a time-scale should be introduced with a certain number of selection posts at the top. The result of this change would mean an additional burden to the tax-payer of India of 11 lakhs per year. With regard to pensions, the proposal

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[ Mr. Srinivasa Sastri. ]

is that this 4 per cent contribution should be abolished and that the whole of the £1,000 should in future be contributed by Government. This, it is estimated, will involve the State in an additional cost of 9 lakhs per year. That this is by no means necessary nor just is allowed by two members of the Commission, Mr. Fisher and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald from whose opinions I would venture to quote. They are of course distinctly of opinion that it is unfair to ask a member of the service to contribute this 4 per cent during the whole period of his work in India. They say that as he is free to retire if he pleases at the end of the 25th year of his service, this 4 per cent contribution should be made only up to that period that is for 25 years. I will only read that portion of the Report:—

‘ Though the concession, namely, the abolition of the 4 per cent contribution would be greatly welcomed by the officers affected and is not in itself exorbitant, the proposal to free the members of the Indian Civil Service from contributions to pension are generally regarded as satisfactory by young men who are considering an Indian career, and it must be remembered that if effect was given to the recommendations of this reform, Indian Civil Servants will in future enter the service earlier, retire from the service earlier and draw the pensions for a longer period. We are not therefore in favour of a general remission of the 4 per cent contribution. At the same time the requirements of the contribution from officers who have already earned their full pension seems to us open to objection on grounds of equity, and we would accordingly recommend that contributions to pensions should be determined after the conclusion of the 25th year of service.’

“ These additional concessions would be justified if there were clear proof forthcoming that the quality of the recruits that we are getting now-a-days is inferior to the quality of the recruits of former times. There is no such proof. Some evidence was tendered one way and some evidence was tendered the other way. Two or three educationists who were examined were not satisfied that there was a decided falling off in the quality of the recruit or even in the number of those who competed in the examinations. I would venture to quote in this connection an opinion which in a different context the Commission themselves have given expression to.

‘ But apart from this ’—“ this is what the Commission says—

‘ But apart from this, we are fortified in our conclusion to leave well alone by the feeling which is borne out by evidence given both in England and in India that, taken as a whole, the personnel now recruited has not in any way deteriorated and that India has been obtaining men who are keeping up the high level and the best traditions of the service.’

“ It therefore must take a very great deal of argument indeed to justify the great increase that the Commission have recommended in the emoluments of this service. But if it were otherwise, there are considerations on the other side to which I will presently draw the Council’s attention. It is well known, Sir, that India is a poor country, the average income of an Indian inhabitant being stated at anything between Rs. 23 and Rs. 30 per year. Taking the maximum estimate an Indian on the average earns Rs. 28-0 a month, which means that many millions of this country do not get even so much. The taxpaying capacity, therefore, of this country is very small and it has been, I think, often admitted even by those in authority that the administration of India is now conducted on a level which the resources of the country do not justify. It is a top-heavy administration, and if it is proposed to add to the cost of administration, the reasons must be overwhelming indeed.

“ But besides the poverty of the people generally, there is the question whether there is any room for additional taxation. If the proposals of the Commission are accepted, the State would be involved in an additional expenditure, on their own estimate, of about 42½ lakhs. This, however, leaves out of account various items which Sir Mahadev Bhasker Chaudal has reckoned up. On his estimate the Commission’s recommendations taken on the whole would involve the State in an additional expense of about 88½ lakhs a year. Even his reckoning leaves one or two things out of account, which are indefinite in their nature, but which on a loose estimate added to the whole, would bring us near to the formidable figure of a crore per year. Out of this amount the Civil Service accounts for 20 lakhs,—11 under the head of salaries and 9 under the head of pensions. Sir, this year and last year—taking the two years, we have had imposed on India additional taxation amounting to about 12 crores per year. If we are to incur the additional expenditure recommended by the Commission, it is scarcely possible to do so without laying more burdens on the taxpayer. What is the new source? Is it to be salt? We have just increased the salt tax although we were hoping that it would be reduced and reduced until it was abolished altogether. That is not to be apparent. Can land bear more? Even high authorities have admitted that it is impossible to put more burdens on the land and yet the Hon'ble the Finance Member, in introducing his budget last time was obliged to say that if the war burdens continued to grow as they did, it might be necessary even to have recourse to additional taxation on land. No one, I daresay, whether in official or non-official circles, contemplates such a contingency with equanimity, but that might happen.

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

" Besides, Sir, the Civil Service is looked upon as the premier service in this country, and what the Civil Service does other services desire to follow. If the Civil Service claims these additional advantages, we must go through the whole course and offer the other services also the concessions for which they have looked forward and which, more or less, the Commission seem to have allowed. Then how can we forget that time after time in the Imperial and in the Provincial Legislative Councils various proposals, sound and weighty, for the amelioration of the condition of the people under the heads of Education and Sanitation, Medical Relief, etc., have come up but have always had to be repulsed, not on the ground that they were not necessary, but on the ground that the State could not provide the requisite funds? Are those things to be postponed to the amelioration of the condition of a service which admittedly has not deteriorated in quality.

" Then, Sir, if any services are to benefit at all by any money that the State can spare, they are the services to which the Commission have not referred, the low-paid services in this country, the clerks, the constables, the poor school masters and people of that kind at the bottom of each service, who draw very much less than a living wage and whose claims have always been admitted by Government, but merely put off on the ground that the cost of increasing their salaries would be tremendous. In the case of a clerk whose salary goes down below 50 rupees, every additional rupee would mean that he and his children were less scantily clad; it would mean that he and his children lived in less insanitary surroundings; it would mean that he was able to provide for his children less insufficient education. It cannot be said that an addition to the emoluments of the well-paid services will bring such solid advantages. It may increase their ability to save, it may increase their ability to indulge in luxuries, it will not enable them to live more active or useful lives, if only we consider the necessities of the case. I have always thought that the members of our Legislative Councils, especially the members of this Council, where the finances of the country are administered, have many difficult, delicate and disagreeable duties. None of them seems to me to be more difficult, more delicate or more disagreeable, than this one that I am discharging, namely, to protest against any proposals the effect of which is to increase the burdens on the taxpayer. The labourer is worthy of his hire, I realise fully. I do not say that we do not get sufficient value for what money we spend on the services, but I am considering the stern limitations to the resources of the country and I am of the deliberate conviction that it is impossible, considering what large sums have to be spent on objects directly concerning the welfare of the people, that it is impossible to add to the burdens of the State in the directions suggested by the Commission. Sir, it is not in my power nor in the power of my non-official colleagues to regulate the way in which the moneys of the State are expended. Luckily, now it is possible to consider the Government of India, so far as its personnel is concerned, as distinct from the Indian Civil Service and I look upon it more or less as the serpent in the garden of the Hesperides guarding the tree with the golden apples. Will the serpent go into an afternoon siesta when the well-paid services approach to pluck the fruits of the trees, or will it hiss and dart out its tongue and emit flames of fire? I much wish that it was possible to believe that the Government of India would look upon the low-paid services whose condition has often been admitted to be a perfect scandal, I much wish that the Government of India would recognise that they had a prior claim on whatever money the Government could spare. I am fully persuaded, Sir, that if this claim was considered to be superior to all other claims, as by all canons of justice it must be, then the resources of the State will be fully taxed in meeting it. Every rupee that you can find will be used up for this purpose for one whole generation, and we can spare no money whatever for such extravaganzas as the Commission has proposed."

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.] [25TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"Sir, my friend has presented the case against the recommendations of the majority of the Public Services Commission for an increase of salaries in such excellent form that it is hardly necessary to say anything to emphasize the necessity of this Resolution being accepted by the Government, but the interests involved are very great and the result of the acceptance of the recommendation of the majority will mean a very serious injury to the interests of India. It is therefore necessary that we should endeavour to induce the Government to realise the full force of these recommendations and the need for not accepting them. My friend has already shown that the salaries in India range very high. I wish to point out that, not only are the salaries in India very much higher than the salaries which obtain in the United Kingdom, than those which obtain in Ceylon, than those which are given to those who join the far Eastern Consular Service, they are also much higher than those given in Japan and the United States. In discussing this question of salaries we do not wish to complicate the matter by any discussion as to whether those who come out to India are worth the amount that is being paid to them, whether their services are worth the amount or whether they are not even more valuable. I assume that the services of the members of the Civil Service who come out to India might well be considered to be of even greater value than what they obtain here. But the question that will remain to be considered will be whether India can afford to pay that. There are two points of view which are of importance in this connection. Those services are being obtained in other countries at a smaller price, and the question is whether India can afford to pay the price she is paying. It has been shown that in the United Kingdom the salaries are about half of what the salaries in the Indian Civil Service are. So also in other countries. And very eminent authorities who were examined by the Commission have shown that the attractions of the Civil Service have not diminished. The representatives of Oxford and Cambridge have shown that the Indian Civil Service continues to attract as good men as it ever used to attract. Mr. Stanley Reed also supported the same view. Professor Lodge of the Edinburgh University stated that India was getting a very high average of the University graduates of the present day. If for the salaries which are at present being given India is able to get a very high average of the graduates of the English Universities of the present day, there is no need certainly for an increase of salary, and if you compare the salaries for the English youths who go out to serve in Ceylon and the far Eastern Consular Services, then certainly it seems that what is being paid is much higher than the market price.

"Secondly, Sir, as my friend has pointed out, the effect of the proposed additions to the Civil Service, will mean an addition of 20 lakhs a year, but that is not the whole amount. If the premier Service, which is what the Civil Service is, receives the additions proposed, we may take it that the other

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

Services will also get the additions proposed and it will mean a total addition of 88½ lakhs a year. In view of the crying needs of this country for popular education, for sanitation, for medical relief, and in view of the need for greater improvement in the general administration and for promoting industrial development in order to increase the average income of the people, is it right that such a large increase should be proposed in the salaries which are being given at present by the Government of India?

“How do those salaries compare with the salaries in other countries? How do they compare with the capacity of the people to bear the burden which they are bearing at present? In Japan, it has been pointed out, the Prime Minister gets 12,000 yen per annum, a yen being a rupee and one anna. The President of the United States gets 75,000 dollars per annum, a dollar being equal to Rs. 3-2-0. But, as Lala Lajpat Rai has pointed out, the economic value of the rupee is about equal to the American dollar. The Viceroy of India gets Rs. 2,85,000 per annum. Take again Cabinet Ministers. Cabinet Ministers in Japan get 8,000 yen per annum, while those of the United States get 12,000 dollars a year. The Members of the Viceroy's Executive Council get Rs. 80,000 a year. Taking other Departments of the United States, the President of the General Navy Board gets 5,000; the Solicitor General 10,000 dollars; the Assistant Solicitor General 9,000 dollars. In Japan, the President of the Railway Board gets 11,500 yens a year, while the President of the Privy Council gets 6,000. Officials in the higher Civil Service get from.....to 2,400 yens. In India, the President of the Railway Board gets Rs. 60,000 per annum; the Secretary to the Government of India in the Finance Department Rs. 45,000 per annum, the Secretary to the Government in the Army Department Rs. 42,000 per annum, and the Secretary to the Government of India in the Commerce and Industry Department Rs. 48,000.

“Now, Sir, as I submitted, there are two points of view from which the matter can be approached. Do English University youths who join the services in other parts of the British Empire get as much as they get in India. If they do not and if they are willing to go and serve in those parts on much smaller salaries, why should such high salaries be paid to them here? In the second place, I submit that if it should be found—which is against the evidence recorded by the Commission that English youths do not care to come out to India on the salaries that are offered to them, that will not be a circumstance entirely to be regretted, because if the number of English youths who come out to India to join the Civil Service should somewhat diminish, all that would be necessary would be to widen the field of recruitment in India. India stands on a very different footing now to what it did 50 years ago. With all the education that our youths obtain by going out of the country they are well able to fill up some at least of the positions which our friends, the Indian Civil Servants, have filled so long. Therefore in suggesting that these salaries should not be increased, the Government should understand that we look at the question not merely from the point of view of efficiency but also from the point of view of what the people can bear. We have clear evidence that efficiency will not suffer, that we shall not get less efficient youths than we are getting at present. We have also clear evidence in the statement which my Hon'ble friend has made before the Council that in view of the great poverty of the people and in view of the activities of various Departments in the country, the addition of 88½ lakhs a year would be a most unjustifiable one. It would not be right, it would not be just, it would not even be politic. We have had during the last two years a great deal of taxation added, and with the 150 crores contributed by the people towards the war for 24 years to come the taxation must be maintained very high in order to pay 9 crores a year so as to make up that contribution. For 24 years with this high taxation maintained, what chance is there of raising any additional revenue to meet the very urgent needs of popular education, sanitation, medical relief and general advancement throughout the country. The Civil Service no doubt has rendered great services to India and it is rendering, and I hope and trust it will render even greater services during the next few years that lie before us; but that Service, I hope, will realise that if it cannot consent to a reduction of the salaries which it has been drawing for the last few decades, it certainly ought to content itself with what it is getting at present. I realise that it is really responsible for the Government of India, as the Hon'ble the Home Member said the other day in his speeches; and being the Government of India it has to recognise more fully than I fear their claim to increase in salaries would seem to indicate,—I say it should realise and I hope it will realise the responsibility which lies upon it so to administer the finances, the taxes that are raised in this country, that they will promote the well-being of the people in a larger measure than they have yet done. We have no quarrel with any member of the Indian Civil Service for the salary he may be drawing. Certain conditions were offered for service in this country; they accepted those conditions and came out. There is no desire on our part to interfere with the conditions so far as those who have already entered the Service are concerned. At present the only question we are discussing is that these conditions should not be made unnecessarily more favourable than they are at present; that in view of the great requirements of the country and in view of the poverty of the people, those conditions should be allowed to stand; and that there should be a steady endeavour made to reduce the expenditure by substituting and increasing the number of Indians qualified to take up appointments in the Indian Civil Service.

“For these reasons, I hope, Sir, that the Government will give their most serious consideration to the question which the Resolution places before them. In the years to come what we are anxious above all things is that there should be cordial good feeling between educated Indians and the members of the Civil Service, to the extent that they will recognise the justice, the reasonableness of our claims in asking that the salaries of the Service should not be increased, they will give proof of the fact that they really sympathise with the aspirations and requirements of the country; and to the extent that they do so they will earn the gratitude of the people. I hope, Sir, the Resolution will commend itself to the Government and will meet with their acceptance.”

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—“Sir, it is often said that India is a land of anomalies, and among the greatest of those anomalies are the economic and financial anomalies. The services which the Indian Civil Service have rendered in the past are no doubt very great. It has been acknowledged so, not to-day, not yesterday, but for the last 40 or 50 years. It has been also said that the Service is the most liberally paid in the whole world. My friend, the Hon'ble Pandit Malaviya, has just made a comparison of the salaries of high officials of State in different countries, especially in Japan. My friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, pointed out how the different services are paid in Ceylon and the Federated Malay States. All this shows that even taking into consideration the fact of expatriation which is always trotted out in this connection, —taking everything into consideration,—the Indian Civil Service, and all the other cognate services connected with it, are very highly paid. Not only are they highly paid; but were the course of the charges of the Civil Departments of the administration for the last 25 years traced and analysed—and anybody can refer to the officially recorded figures for himself—it would be seen that these charges are continually increasing one way or another. Appointments have been multiplied, technical and others specially. Technical appointments were greatly multiplied during Lord Curzon's time for the sake of what is called efficiency. That is one of the directions in which the charges have gone up higher and higher. I have been hammering at all these increased civil charges for years past; I have written brochures on the subject; I have forwarded copies of them to the Government of India. I have pointed out therein that while the revenue is increasing at a slow pace the expenditure is increasing at a higher pace, particularly in the civil administration. Take even the last ten years. You will find from the latest parliamentary return that while the rates of revenue are rising at a lower percentage, that of expenditure is rising at a higher percentage. I have not, of course, the actual figures before me here and, therefore, I won't commit myself; but I assure this Council that if they analyse those figures they will find that these charges are excessive already, and that they are more than the revenue can afford. That is the case; and there can be no question that an impartial commission—(not a commission of the kind of the Public Services Commission we have had which was never an impartial one in my opinion, because it was an inspired commission; vested interests like those of the Civil Service were greatly protected, and not only protected but sought to be increased as we actually find from the Majority Report)—I say if an impartial commission were appointed, composed of men from outside India, men who have, perhaps, had larger experience of administration and the cost of administration of different countries of the world they would find that we can reasonably reduce the expenditure on the Civil Services. Remember, Sir, that this scale of salaries of the Civil Service was fixed years ago, somewhere about three-quarters of a century ago—I think it was in the time of Lord Cornwallis or Lord Bentinck; and at that time the great reason assigned for such large salaries of the covenanted servants, was the expatriation. At that time there was no Suez Canal; there were very few steam navigation companies; besides, there were many other difficulties and inconveniences. Civilians were separated from their homes and families and frequent furloughs were not possible. Taking those conditions into consideration the salaries were fixed at a high rate. Consider, Sir, what has happened now. 75 years have passed since the fixing of the rates. The Suez Canal has been in operation for the last 47 years. Navigation companies by hundreds have been started here, there and everywhere. Any Civilian can go to-day within a fortnight to his home and return within three months, as many Civilians and Judges of the High Court are actually doing every year, while drawing their full salary to which they are entitled on account of the privilege leave. That being so, and many other social amenities, which were very hard to obtain in the days of Lord Cornwallis and Lord Bentinck, being available now, Civilians in Madras or Bombay or Calcutta or any other Province can at any time they like be in the midst of their homes. Yet, in spite of all these most favourable conditions, they continue to get the old rate of salaries and different kinds of allowances, which Mr. Sastri related in his speech. But it is of no use, crying wolf, for this is an old antiquated story of high civilian salaries and other charges of civil administration. We are helpless in the matter. We are helpless even to-day, notwithstanding our reformed Council. I doubt, whether this proposition will be carried, but even if it were carried I do not know whether the Government of India will give effect to it. There will be scores of reasons assigned to decline it. We all understand that these are old stories; and that there is nothing new in them. But times have changed, and I do hope, that the Government will take a very considered and reasonable view of matters, particularly having regard to the fact to which my friend, Mr. Sastri, referred, namely, the comparatively poor ability of Indian tax-payers. What is that ability? Compare it with the ability of almost all other civilised countries in the world, and we shall find it most deplorable. It is a cypher, a zero, compared with the wealth of countries like France, England, United States, Austria, and even Turkey I should say. That being the case, it should be always a consideration for the Government of India, if they are governed by statesmanship, that the ability of the tax-payers should be their first care in reference to the question of the salaries of Civilians.

[25TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

[Sir Dinshaw Wacha.]

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Sir James DuBoulay.]

"For my part I consider that old times have changed, and the time is come when the salaries should be revised with reference to the market rate prevailing all over the world. The market rate may be high or low; but fix the salaries at the market rate. Further, I would say there should be no agreements and no covenants. These covenants are most burdensome; they bring in their train costly furlough allowances, pensions, and a lot of other charges, I say all these must be abolished. Civilian gentlemen, members of the government, of course, sit down for five years and pass Resolutions after Resolutions that posts of this or that character shall carry consolidated salaries of so much or so much. But they have no such consolidation for themselves. The governing principle seems to be that those that have much shall be given more and those that have less shall be deprived of whatever the little they have. This is what they are doing now, particularly so far as the masses of the poorer servants are concerned. I consider, Sir, therefore, that a revised rate of consolidated salaries should take the place of the existing salaries and allowances on the basis of the market rate whether the supply comes from England, or Wales, or from Australia, or Canada or South Africa or even from Japan I do not care. India wants efficient but less costly service from any place in the world. But we need not go to any place in the world at all; India itself has abilities enough to work on salaries lower than those prevailing at present. The next thing is that each post must be assigned its proper adequate market salary. I do not know whether Members of the Government of India who are now drawing Rs. 6,000 per month or Rs. 5,000, really deserve that salary? Suppose we advertise for a Home Member of the Government or for a Finance Member, cannot we get one for a less sum than Rs. 6,000? I submit, Sir, that I can get you from America a good financier or administrator for Rs. 3,500 or 4,000. I am talking frankly on this subject. The Civil Service has its traditions, and those traditions are, that they must be bequeathed from generation to generation. There is nothing new that from time to time these traditions are trotted out. It has gone on for the last 75 years. These Civilian interests have become vested; and whenever vested interests are attacked, the reply is 'This is impossible, and that is impossible; you cannot do this and you cannot do that; the war is with us and we must not discuss this, that and the other.' They are all mere plausible pretexts to say non-possumus. I am sorry to have to say all this, but speak we must frankly and express our honest convictions on the subject. If we are to express the feelings and sentiments of the Indian people generally, then, I do say that the Indian Civil Service ought to be abolished, and that a new Service in its place should be created; and you can get a new Service from any part of the world, if not from India alone, and that on lower salaries. That reconstructed service will solve largely the question of economic employment, and at the same time save to the State a larger amount of revenue for purposes, as Pandit Malaviya said, of education, sanitation, and a hundred other utilities for which we are famishing. For these reasons, Sir, I think the time has come when the Government of India should take into consideration this particular Resolution of my friend, Mr. Sastri. It is a very good resolution. If it is impartially considered, I think that the Government of India ought to pay no heed to the recommendation made by the Public Services Commission, that about a crore of rupees at this juncture should be added to the burdens of the tax-payers. With these remarks, Sir, I take my seat."

The Hon'ble Sir James Du Boulay:—"Sir, I think this Council will recognise that there are rather a large number of Resolutions on the subject of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission and that the burden upon the Hon'ble the Home Member was somewhat serious; and he accordingly asked me to take some of these Resolutions on his behalf. I think that this particular resolution is not quite on the same high level as some of those with which we have been dealing hitherto. The question of pay is not on a very high level nor an inspiring subject for discussion."

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Sir James DuB. ulay.]

"The Hon'ble Pandit the other day referred to me as the colleague of the Hon'ble the Home Member; I do not wish the Council to think that I am trying to take his place, I am acting under his orders in this matter. I feel that the subject we are discussing is a very invidious one for a member of the Indian Civil Service to have to talk about at all. I think Hon'ble Members will agree with me about that. Those who assist the courts to secure justice for the country might feel it a little bit invidious to have to talk about the fees that they are paid, those gentlemen who devote the whole of their lives to the interests of their country by seeing that agriculturists are supplied with money in order to carry on the business of cultivation might feel it a little bit invidious to have to discuss the amount of the profits they get and therefore I hope the Council will bear with me in the rather embarrassing position in which I find myself. The difficulties I have found the greater in the present case because I have to reply to one, the mover of this Resolution, who perhaps more than anybody else is above such considerations, a man who is inspired by the lofty ideals of the Servants of India Society.

"Speaking briefly I should like to say that the Government have already explained their attitude towards these questions several times and the attitude of the Government in the present case is very much the same as it was in the other cases, that is to say, they wish to hear what Hon'ble Members have to say, they are not at the present moment prepared to come to any conclusion, and they will not come to any conclusion until they have had an opportunity of hearing the views of Members of this Council and of consulting Local Governments. I think the Hon'ble the Home Member was attacked the other day on the ground that in respect of one Resolution that was before the Council he only gave the arguments on one side; I think that that is the almost necessary result of the position of Government. In this particular matter we have heard the arguments on the one side, and for that reason I do not propose to refer again to the considerations which have been urged by the Hon'ble Mover, by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and by Sir Dinshaw Wacha, but I will deal with certain considerations which may be mentioned on the converse side of the question

"The majority of the Commission, as regards the salaries of officers holding superior posts made their recommendations first with the intention of securing an approximate equality of prospects as between one province and another, secondly, of abolishing the system by which the pay of certain appointments fluctuates according to the rates of pay drawn by officers next junior in the regular line to the officers holding them; thirdly, they wished to merge special appointments carrying special rates of pay in the appropriate general class of the cadre. They also recommended that the graded system, which they found the subject of widespread complaint and on general grounds unsuitable, should be replaced for the future by an incremental system of salaries divided into two compartments. As a minor point they proposed to merge exchange compensation allowances into pay. As regards the salaries of junior officers, they proposed the same incremental rate of pay as has been applied to members of the Indian Civil Service deputed to the Political Department.

"Their reasons were that the next below rule which applied to certain appointments was based on the anticipation that the fluctuations incidental to such a system would not result in rates of salary lower than those appropriated for superior posts, but owing to the blocks in promotion which had occurred this expectation has not always been fulfilled, with the result that officers holding important appointments have in certain instances come to be remunerated on the basis of a scale fixed as suitable for Assistant Collectors. Similarly in the case of salaries of junior officers, the reasonable expectation of officiating in superior posts after the completion of 8 years' service has in practice been falsified owing to blocks in promotion, and the majority of the Commissioner's remark that grave dissatisfaction on this score undoubtedly exists throughout the service.

[Sir James DuBonlay.]

"Sir Mahadev Chaubal was anxious that the minor proposals involving small increases of pay in superior posts should be carefully scrutinised but was willing, after hearing the evidence, to agree to an improvement in the pay of the lower grades of the service in view of the general rise in prices. He did not go so far as the majority but he admitted that there was a case for a certain rise of pay in the junior ranks. Mr. Abdur Rahim dissented from the majority but he had very little to say about the pay of superior appointments, he dealt with junior officers and urged that, if as suggested, the pay of those in the Political cadre was fixed on a calculation of what members of the Indian Civil Service drew in the provinces, there need not be any extra cost at all in this direction. He overlooked the point that the pay of the Political cadre was based upon a reasonable expectation, it was actually calculated on the figures of five representative provinces as showing what was a reasonable expectation, and the fact that the present proposals of the majority indicate that the existing pay is much less than it would be if the Political Department incremental rates were given to the Indian Civil Service shows, I submit, that they are getting less than they are entitled to expect. I think Sir Mahadev Chaubal fell into a similar error. He said that the Political Department demanded an increase of pay equal to that of the Indian Civil Service. I think the fact that the political rates were calculated on the then provincial average shows that the Civil Service are not now getting what used to be considered a reasonable rate.

"Then I think it is of little use to argue as does Mr. Abdur Rahim that because the personnel now recruited has not in any way deteriorated and because India has hitherto succeeded in obtaining men who keep up the high level of the best traditions of the service there can be no grievance to remedy or at any rate there is no necessity to listen to any grievances.

"As I have pointed out, the majority of the Commission found that owing to blocks in promotion the reasonable expectations of the services were not being fulfilled, and Mr. Abdur Rahim would perpetuate the present disability and maintain rates of pay lower than what was held to be a reasonable expectation at the time that the Political Department was dealt with. Whatever has been the case in the past, it seems to me to be irrefutable that if a service as a whole considers that its reasonable expectations have not been fulfilled, discontent must arise, and it is unavoidable that such discontent must have its effect in reducing the quality of the candidates competing for the service in the future. The Commission definitely found that there were signs of that result already occurring and that young men were showing a tendency to turn their attention to the Home Civil Service rather than to the Indian Civil Service; and I think they pointed out further that there were other careers which were attracting men away in various directions at Home and that therefore fewer of them were trying to get into the Indian Civil Service. The majority of the Commission definitely said that they were satisfied that nothing less than the terms which they proposed would re-establish the attractiveness of the Indian Civil Service.

"I do not think I have very much more to say but I will refer to some of the remarks that fell from the Hon'ble Mover. When he raised this question he seemed to me to put his case rather too high. For instance, he referred to the Provident Fund as one of the advantages which the Civil Service enjoyed, but I think I am right in saying that the Civil Service pays for its own Provident Fund, there is no tax upon the Government, no tax upon the people.

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Sir James DuBoulay; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Mr. Srinivasa Sastri.]

“Then the Hon'ble Mover urged that the salaries of appointments in the Home Civil Service were less attractive than those out here. I think there are a great number of men who are not prepared to come out to this country on any terms and they would prefer to take a very much lower reward and stay at Home. I do not think therefore that the pay of the Home Civil Service is a reasonable comparison. At first sight the comparison with Ceylon is very much more to the point. But I submit that the comparison is not complete unless you take into consideration the standard of the two services. I do think that this is a matter which ought to be taken into consideration when you are deciding how the pay of Ceylon compares with the pay in India. It is not a question which I am prepared to discuss. I really cannot say whether you get the same class of men there or not but I think that that is a very important consideration.....”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—“They sit for the same examination.”

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay:—“That may be true, but it is the less highly placed men who get into that service, that is the point. I do not wish to maintain that that service is of a lower standard, but I will suggest that it is a question that should be considered if any comparison is made. There may be some members of the Colonial service here and I do not want to wound their feelings.

“A point that I did not quite understand is a reference made by the Hon'ble Member to some figure of £6,666 which he stated.....”

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri:—“I was referring to the salary of the Lieutenant-Governor. I understand the post is not reserved for the Indian Civil Service, but it is a post to which an Indian Civilian may aspire.”

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay:—“I beg the Hon'ble Member's pardon. I thought he was referring to the salaries of Members of Council which come to only 6,666 rupees per mensem not pounds per annum.

“Then there was a reference to a figure 11 lakhs for the improvement of the conditions of the service. I want to draw attention to page 40 of the Report where you will find that the figure of about 8 lakhs is put down for the Civil Service superior appointments. This includes over 1½ lakhs on account of converting the appointments hitherto held by members of the Provincial Service on a lower scale of pay into appointments to be held by members of the Bar on full pay. I think it is rather hard that this should be reckoned up against the Indian Civil Service. It also includes one lakh on account of improving the pay of certain 41 appointments to be held by members of the Provincial Civil Service. That is no improvement in the pay of the Civil Service as at present constituted. Then again on page 179 you will find a reference to some items which go to make up the 8 lakhs in detail, and among them I will just draw attention to the fact that Rs. 38,711 is for the grant of the equivalent of exchange compensation allowance to statutory Natives of India. Here again I do not think it is quite fair to reckon this as an increase in the emoluments of the Indian Civil Service as at present constituted.

“Then again the Hon'ble Mover very effectively quoted a long list of allowances which he said the Civil Service at present enjoys, but I submit we do not all get those allowances, but one or other of them may be given in exceptional cases. Another important point is that they are not allowances confined to the Indian Civil Service, the service with which we are dealing, but they apply to all the services in India, whether the Indian Civil Service, the Provincial Services, the Public Works and other Departments. In fact all the various services.

"The Hon'ble Member further suggested that it was wrong that the highest paid service, the Indian Civil Service, should receive any attention in a matter of this kind when the inferior services are very much worse paid, and he referred not only to the junior services but also to such services as the subordinate Police and others of a like nature and pointed out that these were the services which required the first attention. As I said, I am not dealing with these questions in any final manner, but what I do wish to point out is that most of the other services have received attention in the course of the last twenty years. The Hon'ble Mr. Dose tells me that the Public Works Department received some improvement in their pay 12 or 13 years ago, and the Hon'ble Mover must be aware that the pay of the superior police appointments has also been very much improved. Similarly I think that other Departments have come under review from time to time. So far as the subordinate services go, I feel very great sympathy with what fell from the Hon'ble Mr. Sastri, but I do wish it to be clearly known to this Council that the amount of improvement that has from time to time been effected in the pay of the various subordinate police services is very great and it has indeed been the subject of considerable complaint in many provinces that too much money was being devoted to the pay and prospects of the police. We had a case only the other day in which the lowest rate of pay was increased from Rs. 9 to Rs. 12,—I think it was in the Central Provinces,—the lowest ranks of the police there thus got an increase of about 25 per cent of their pay straight away. And this sort of improvement in pay has been going on very frequently and constantly, in various parts of the country.

"Then, I think, there is a certain weight to be attached to the remarks which my Hon'ble friend Sir Dinshaw Wacha made about the pay of the Civil Service being fixed in the dark ages. It is the case that prices have risen considerably and what was fixed as right and proper in the dark ages cannot hold good at the present day. He also referred to a large increase in the number of technical appointments, but that is hardly relevant to the discussion of the question which is now before us.

"I admit that I was rather afraid when Sir Dinshaw began to talk about the cancellation of the covenants of the Service that he had something up his sleeve and sure enough out it came, he wants to abolish the whole Service."

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha:—"I say it emphatically, abolish it."

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay:—"But I do think he ought to be a little bit careful before he imports a lot of foreigners.

"I have not said anything, Sir, about pensions, and I just want to refer to a point which has been brought out by the Hon'ble Mover and to say that we pay roughly one quarter of the amount of the pension ourselves and what is left is only the same pension roughly as that of a military officer who does not rise above the rank of Colonel, and perhaps that is not by comparison so very excessive. I do not propose to detain the Council any longer but just wish to emphasise once more that in the remarks I have made, I have only wanted to put the other side of the question and to repeat that Government do not propose to make up their mind about this matter till they have heard what is said in this Council, and they will listen very sympathetically to anything that may be said, but at present they are not prepared to accept the Resolution, and if it is put to the vote, they must resist it."

RESOLUTION re SALARIES AND ANNUITIES IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

[Mr. Srinivasa Sastri; Sir James DuBoulay.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—"Sir, there is hardly much for me to say. As regards the reasonable expectations of the Service, I can only say that these expectations are not in my opinion so reasonable that they should be gratified at the expense of a poor country. If they are in the covenant, one has no alternative; we are as keen for the maintenance of national honour as anybody; if there is a covenant to say that every officer in the service shall in the eighth year of service be in the enjoyment of the emoluments of a superior post, we have no option but to put him in that post, but if there is no covenant, however plausible the expectation may seem, it is not reasonable.

"As to the removal of grievances and disabilities, I should like to make one observation. Grievances and disabilities are easily created. If the Government of India are willing to listen to grievances from a certain quarter, you may be sure the grievances will be produced in abundance. You may double the salaries and emoluments of the service and still in the course of ten years there will be some disabilities, some inequalities to level, and the Government of India will be called upon to take more money from the taxpayer. Within the last two years, Sir, the Indian Civil Service were allowed several lakhs of compensation for nothing but for promotion deferred.

"There is only one other thing I wish to say. I was speaking of the Family Pension Fund, I did not know that the Civil Service enjoys a provident fund besides. I was speaking of the Family Pension Fund, to which I said the State makes a certain contribution. If the State does not make any contribution, I withdraw that statement. But whether there is any contribution or not, the Commission proposes that the whole management of the Fund should hereafter be a burden on the State which would amount to £40,000.

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—"Is not the Hon'ble Member referring to the General Provident Fund which is for other services than the Civil Service?"

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—"No, Sir, I was not referring to the General Provident Fund."

The Hon'ble Sir James DuBoulay :—"I think I am right in saying that the State does not contribute to the fund of the Indian Civil Service."

The Hon'ble Mr. Srinivasa Sastri :—"Sir, I ask you to put the resolution."

Transplantation of winter rice has been almost completed in Lower Burma and in irrigated tracts of Upper Burma. Reaping of early sesamum has been nearly completed and cultivation of peas and of other miscellaneous crops is proceeding in Upper Burma. Plucking of cotton has commenced in Sagaing. Standing crops are generally doing well. Cattle are healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon is nominally at Rs. 80 per hundred baskets and is considerably below the normal. The market for white rice is quiet at Rs. 202 annas 8 per hundred baskets for specials.

Assam.—The weather is seasonable. More rain is wanted in the Surma valley. Harvesting of autumn rice and jute and transplantation of winter rice have been nearly finished. Manufacture of tea continues. Sowing of pulses is in progress. The outturn of autumn rice and jute and prospects of other crops are fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from four districts. The price of common rice has fallen slightly.

Bengal.—During the week the rainfall was fair. More rain is, however, needed for the winter paddy crops. Transplantation of winter paddy is now nearly completed and weeding is going on. The condition and prospects of the crop are reported to be good. Steeping and washing of jute continue. Harvesting of the autumn crops is now approaching completion. Insect attacks on the rice crop are reported from certain places in the Burdwan Division. Cattle disease is reported from seven districts. The average price of common rice for the Province is practically stationary.

Bihar and Orissa.—During the week rain was general over the Province, the fall being heavy in parts of Bihar and light to moderate in Orissa and Chota Nagpur. Harvesting of autumn crops and weeding of winter paddy are in progress. Standing crops are doing well. The price of common rice shows a downward tendency. The supply of fodder is generally sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from several districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—Rain has fallen again throughout the Provinces retarding agricultural operations and damaging crops in places. Otherwise the condition of standing crops is good. A large part of the Ballia tahsil is flooded. Harvesting of summer crops and preparations for the sowing of winter crops are progressing generally. Prospects are favourable. Cattle disease continues but the condition of agricultural stock is, on the whole, good. Fodder and water are sufficient. Prices are almost stationary.

Punjab.—Light or moderate rain was general during the week. More rain is not wanted at present. The condition of standing crops is generally fair except in the southeast where it is below the average. Excessive rains and floods have damaged cotton, millets and maize especially in the southeast. Sugarcane is doing well. Picking of cotton and reaping of maize and other autumn crops continue. The yield of cotton is expected to be below normal and of other crops generally normal. His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointments of the undermentioned officers to be Companions of the Distinguished Service Order in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field:—

Maj. Frederick Ernest Koebel, Sikhs, Ind. Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and resource. He rallied his men when the left flank was seriously threatened, and by his energy and fine example saved the situation. He subsequently commanded his battalion with great ability. He has displayed marked gallantry in every action in which he has taken part.

Lt. Robert Henry Stable, Infy., Indian Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He assumed command of his battalion early in the action, and displayed great coolness and courage under heavy fire. He set a magnificent example to his men throughout.

* * * *

His Majesty the KING has been graciously pleased to confer the Military Cross on the undermentioned officers and warrant officers in recognition of their gallantry and devotion to duty in the field:—

2nd Lt. Ian William Galbraith, Lrs., Ind. A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. On his second day at the front he showed great pluck and initiative when in command of a patrol in attacking an enemy patrol of double his strength. Although the whole of his patrol was wounded, and he himself sustained a shattered leg, they drove off the enemy patrol with loss.

*Lt. (A.-Capt.) Kenneth Alfred Garrett, Sikhs, Ind. A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He carried out a successful attack under very heavy fire against a strongly fortified enemy position.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He commanded a patrol with complete success. His careful reconnaissance and arrangements beforehand greatly contributed to the successful issue of the enterprise.

*Capt. Humphrey Gilbert Grace, Cav., Ind. Army.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He led his squadron with great gallantry, and compelled a largely superior force of the enemy's cavalry to withdraw. He has previously done fine work.

* * * * *

Capt. Noel Frank Coote Mulloy, Lrs., Ind. Army, attd. Horse.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in leading his squadron during a raid. Coming suddenly under heavy fire, he quickly grasped the situation and charged at the head of his men, killing many of the enemy. Owing to his promptitude and skilful leadership at a critical moment, his own losses were comparatively small.

2nd Lt Brian Palliser Tieque O'Brien, Gurkha Rif., Ind. A.

For conspicuous gallantry and ability in leading his company in the first phase of the attack. He was twice wounded early in the day, but continued to command his company up to the main position, where he was again severely wounded.

* * * * *

Lt. Wilfred Philip Oddie, I.A.R.O.

For conspicuous gallantry in action. He led his company with great dash, captured a strong point in the enemy's front line, and maintained his position against superior forces.

Capt. Eric Wingrove Spurgin, Lrs., Ind. A.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He twice led counter-attacks against strong enemy attacks upon his post. Although wounded during the first charge, he succeeded both times in turning the enemy out of the position they had temporarily gained in front of his post.

Asst. Surg. John Wilson Woodsell, I.S.M.D.

For conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He displayed great courage and determination in tending the wounded under very heavy fire. His devotion to duty saved many lives.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL ASSEMBLED UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1915
(5 & 6 Geo. V, Ch. 61).

The Council met at the Council Chamber, Viceregal Lodge, Simla, on Wednesday, the 26th September, 1917.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY BARON CHELMSFORD, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., G.C.M.G., Viceroy and Governor General, presiding, and 55 Members, of whom 48 were Additional Members.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi

1. "(a) Will Government be pleased to make a statement showing Province, Government grants to and the proportion of such grants to the total income of Municipalities?"

(b) Is any portion of the Government grants in any Province debited to Imperial revenues? If so, what proportion of the total Government grant does this portion represent?"

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

"(a) A statement* is laid on the table.

(b) No portion of the Government grants shown in the municipal accounts is in the major Provinces debited directly to Imperial revenues. Grants made by the Government of India are made to Local Governments and to Administrations who may hand them on in part to municipalities. The Government of India have no information to enable them to answer the second part of this question. Information might be elicited by questions in the provincial Legislative Councils."

*Vide Appendix A.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi ; Sir C. Sankaran Nair ; Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.]

[26TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

The Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Manindra Chandra Nandi asked :—

Bengal Municipalities.

2. “ (a) Is it a fact that the incidence of income of the Municipalities in Bengal is much lower than in most other Provinces of India ?

(b) If so, is this largely due to the comparatively small grants received by the Bengal Municipalities from the Government of Bengal ?

(c) What are the considerations that determine the amount of Government grant to Municipalities in each Province ? ”

The Hon'ble Sir C. Sankaran Nair replied :—

“ (a) If by the expression ‘ incidence of income of municipalities ’ is meant incidence of income per head of population, then the answer is in the affirmative so far as other Provinces in India are concerned, with the exception of Bihar and Orissa. Any comparison however based upon these figures is apt to be vitiated by variations in the size, character and wealth of the towns which in different Provinces are classed as municipalities.

(b) It is impossible to give any satisfactory answer to this question, because the system of making Government grants to municipalities differs in different Provinces, e.g., it may be the practice in one Province to effect works intended for a municipality through the provincial Public Works Department ; in another case the subsidy may be handed over to the municipality for the carrying through of the work.

(c) The Government of India have not the material before them to enable them to answer this question. But information might be elicited by questions in the provincial Legislative Council.”

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru asked :—

The Indraprastha Hindu Girls' School, Delhi.

3. “ (a) Is it a fact—

(i) that the Chief Commissioner of Delhi called Miss Gmeiner, the Lady Superintendent of the Indraprastha Hindu Girls' High School, Delhi, Miss Priest, and the Honorary Secretary of that school, to see him and at that interview took exception to Miss Gmeiner's association with the Home Rule League, Delhi, and told her that unless she withdrew from the League he would withdraw his sympathy from the school ;

(ii) that the Committee of the school decided not to dismiss Miss Gmeiner ; and

(iii) that Mr. Johnstone, the Personal Assistant to the Chief Commissioner, wrote a letter to the Assistant Secretary of the school in which he said : ‘ As you are no doubt aware from the communications which have passed between your Honorary Secretary and the Chief Commissioner on the subject, the grant-in-aid has been held in suspense for such period as Miss Gmeiner, the Lady Superintendent of the school, continues to act as Honorary Secretary of, or to take an active part in, the management of the Delhi Branch of the Home Rule League ’ ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state the amount of the Municipal grant and any other aid given to the school and withheld from it now the number of the girls reading in the school on the date on which the order withholding such aid was passed, and the year when the school was established ;

(c) Will Government be further pleased to state whether the Chief Commissioner of Delhi has acted in this matter in pursuance of any general policy of the Government of India or whether he has acted upon his own responsibility ? ’

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Sir William Vincent ; Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy ; Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma.]The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

(a) (i), (ii) and (iii) The facts are substantially as stated. For further particulars the Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer given to a question put by the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda on the same subject on the 24th September.

(b) The school was established in 1904. As regards the amount of grant-in-aid and the number of pupils the Hon'ble Member is referred to the information given in reply to the question put by the Hon'ble Mr. Chanda on the same subject.

(c) The Chief Commissioner, Delhi, did not act in pursuance of any general or particular instructions of the Government of India but on his own responsibility."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy asked :—

4. "(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the Circular letter issued by the Patna High Court on 22nd May last (No. 1949-1960—LVI-32 English Department, Civil), informing all the District Judges of Bihar and Orissa and the Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpur that 'a vakil of another High Court who desires to practise in the courts subordinate to this Court (Patna High Court) must adopt one of the two courses: either (1) he must be enrolled as a vakil of this Court, a condition attached to this being that he must remove his name from the roll of the Calcutta High Court before the long vacation of 1917; or (2) he must get himself enrolled as a pleader in the ordinary way as in a case of first admission, i.e., he must be qualified for admission as a pleader under the rules laid down in General Rules and Circular Orders (Civil), Volume I, and the mere fact that he is a vakil of the Calcutta or any other High Court will not necessarily entitle him to practise as a pleader in courts subordinate to this Court.'

Circular issued by the Patna High Court regarding Vakils.

(b) Is the above Circular letter of the Patna High Court consistent with the provisions of section 4 of the Legal Practitioners Act?

(c) If not, will Government be pleased to take suitable action in the matter?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"The Government of India have no information on the subject, but the framing of rules for the admission of pleaders to subordinate courts is within the competence of the High Court, and the Government have no power in the matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. B. Dadabhoy asked :—

"Will your Excellency permit me to put a supplementary question? Will the Government be pleased to draw the attention of the Patna High Court to my question?"

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"A copy of the Hon'ble Member's question will be forwarded to the Patna High Court desired."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur B. N. Sarma asked :—

5. "(a) Are British civilians in Government employ on military duty in the United Kingdom paid only the military pay due according to their rank in the Army, or are they paid military or civilian pay whichever is higher? Pay of civilians on military duty.

(b) If there is any departure in the Indian practice from that obtaining in the United Kingdom in this respect will Government be pleased to state the reasons for that departure?"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[*His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief;
Sir Dinshaw Wacha; Sir George
Barnes; Pandit Madan Mohan
Malaviya; Sir William Vincent.*]

[20TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

“(a) Civil servants and other Government employees serving in the Army in the United Kingdom receive their military pay under the ordinary rules and also receive through their civil departments direct their civil pay less army pay and army separation allowance.

(b) Government servants in civil employ in India who join the Indian Army Reserve of Officers receive, while serving within Indian limits, salary at civil rates according to the next below rule, or military pay and allowances whichever is greater; while employed overseas they receive military pay and allowances of rank plus civil furlough pay.

Government servants in civil employ in India who enlist in the regular army receive while in colour service, in addition to army pay and allowances, privilege leave pay up to the extent of the privilege leave due, and thereafter the furlough pay of their civil appointments.

The method of paying civil servants on military duty at home was not taken into consideration when the rates for Government servants in India were sanctioned, though so far as civil officers serving in the I. A. R. O. in India are concerned, there is no material difference between the practice at home and that in India.

The rates of pay were fixed by the Government of India at the beginning of the war with due regard to the prevailing conditions, which were in many respects entirely different to those in the United Kingdom.”

The Hon'ble Sir Dinshaw Wacha asked :—

Industrial
in India.

6. “Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number of individuals and firms, British and Indian separately, to whom concessions of various kinds have been granted for purposes of industrial development, from 1st January 1913 to 30th June 1917, and the nature and terms of the respective concessions so granted?”

The Hon'ble Sir George Barnes replied :—

“Two statements* furnishing the information required by the Hon'ble Member are laid on the table.”

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya asked :—

Internments in Bengal.

7. “(a) Is it a fact that in Bengal among the persons dealt with either under the Defence of India Act or under Regulation III of 1818, there has been one case of death and one of suicide?”

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state the circumstances attending those events?”

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

“During a period of about two and a third years the number of persons who have been dealt with in Bengal under the Defence of India Act is 978. Of these, 179 are at the present time domiciled with their relatives, 565 in villages away from their homes, while 234 have been released or otherwise dealt with. Among this number there has been one death due to natural causes, viz., in the case of the detenu who died at the Jessore Sadr Hospital of typhoid fever; one absconder from domicile was killed by a villager while he was committing a dacoity. There have been two suicides: in one case, there was no assignable reason known; the Police Superintendent had visited the detenu on the day before his death, and the detenu's own brother had been with him on the night of his death. In the second case the detenu had had fever from which he had recovered after being nursed by the local Police, and the verdict of the District Magistrate was that the man had taken his life owing to depression after fever. Amongst persons restrained under the provisions of Regulation III there have not been any deaths or suicides."

The Hon'ble Mr. Mahomed Ali Jinnah asked :—

1. "(a) Will Government be pleased to state what is the result of the enquiries made into the cases of Mahomed Ali and Shaukat Ali ?

Messrs.
Mahomed Ali and Shaukat Ali

(b) Do Government propose to release them ? "

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent replied :—

"Restrictions under the Defence of India rules were imposed upon Messrs. Mahomed Ali and Shaukat Ali not merely for violent methods of political agitation but because they freely expressed and promoted sympathy with the King's enemies, thus endangering the public safety. The Government of India have made further inquiries regarding these persons and on a careful consideration of the information and opinions received, and on a re-examination of previous papers, the Government of India are not satisfied that the attitude of these persons has materially changed in this respect, or that these restrictions can safely be removed."

The Hon'ble Mr. Mahomed Ali Jinnah asked :—

9. "(a) Has any correspondence passed between the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India relating to the creation of the Indian Munitions Board ?

The Indian
Munitions Board

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to place the correspondence on the table ? "

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief replied :—

"(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

The correspondence* asked for by the Hon'ble Member is laid on the table."

GOLD IMPORT BILL.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" My Lord, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the acquisition of gold imported into British India."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Meyer :—" My Lord, the Bill I have obtained leave to introduce, a copy of which is already in the hands of Members, provides for the acquisition by the Government of India of gold imported into British India. This is an emergency enactment intended to continue, during the war and for six months thereafter, the powers obtained by us under Ordinance No. III of 1917. The general reasons which made it necessary for us to take the powers in question were fully explained in the Press Communiqué issued at the time of the promulgation of the Ordinance and are, I think, well known to Honourable Members. Briefly, it may be said that our object is not in any way to check remittances of gold to India, but to ensure that such gold as is imported is used in the most effective way possible for strengthening our currency position. We have already acquired £5 million of gold in this way, and we hope that by the same means we shall be able to add further to our stocks of this metal. The gold which we acquire is placed in the Paper Currency Reserve, where it increases the metallic backing to our note issue.

GOLD IMPORT BILL.[Sir William Meyer.]

"The provisions of the Bill, however, differ from those of the Ordinance in one important respect, namely that whereas in the Schedule to the Ordinance the rates at which the acquired gold should be paid for were laid down, the Bill provides that gold acquired will be paid for at rates prescribed by the Governor-General in Council. As a consequence of the recent increase in the rates at which the Secretary of State sells his Council drafts, he has decided that a modification should be made in the rates payable under the schedule to the Ordinance for imported gold. As was explained in a Press Communiqué issued on the 19th instant, while he continues to sell immediate telegraphic transfers at 1s. 5d. per rupee, the rate payable for gold will be Rs. 14-8 per sovereign in the case of sovereigns, and in the case of other gold or bullion, Re. 1 for 7-79321 grains troy of fine gold. These rates were fixed by the Secretary of State in consultation with the authorities responsible for the maintenance of the central gold reserve of the Empire with the object of securing the greatest possible advantage to India without conflicting with general Imperial interests; and they are so calculated, making due allowance for all expenses incidental to shipping gold, that neither premium nor discount shall attach to remittances of gold as compared with Council remittances at present rates. In the event of it being necessary for the Secretary of State to make further changes in his Council Bill rates, corresponding alterations will have to be made in the rates payable for imported gold, and it would therefore obviously be impracticable to follow the arrangement adopted in the Ordinance of laying down definite rates in a Schedule. It is intended, however, in order to avoid disturbance of existing contracts, or hardship to those who shipped gold to India on the strength of the terms of the Ordinance, to pay for all gold shipped up to and including the 25th September at the rates prescribed in the Ordinance, and an announcement to this effect was made on the 20th instant. Future shipments will be paid for at the revised rates mentioned above, which we shall now formally prescribe when this Bill passes into law. Should it become necessary to make any further alteration in the rate, it is the intention to allow a similar concession in the case of gold in transit at the time when such alteration is made.

"It is perhaps desirable that I should take this opportunity to make it quite clear that the rates prescribed under this Bill will relate purely to gold acquired for currency purposes, and that there is no intention of altering the internal parity at 1 to 15 of the sovereign and the rupee. Nor will such purchase rates be applicable in the case of sovereigns shipped to the Government of India from an Australian mint, which will merely carry out the coinage of gold for the Government of India from gold supplied by them or on their account. They will however apply to gold bullion and foreign coin tendered in Australia for acquisition by the Government of India, unless such gold was shipped to Australia on a through bill of lading before the 26th instant, in which case it would be allowed the same concession as if it had been shipped to India before that date.

"I need only add that the original intention was to introduce this Bill at the commencement of the present session, so that it would not have been necessary for me to ask the Council to take the Bill into consideration and to pass it in one day. It has, however, not been possible to settle the exact lines of this legislation in time to allow of the introduction of the Bill at an earlier date, as the basis on which imported gold should be paid for has been under discussion with the Secretary of State, and has only recently been settled.

I explained the object of this Bill when I asked for leave to introduce it and I have received no criticisms and no notices of amendment in regard to it. The Hon'ble Mr. C. A. Kincaid :—"My Lord, I beg to move that the Bill to amend the Sir Currimbhoy Ebrahim Baronetcy Bill, 1913, be taken into consideration. My Lord, on the last occasion when I dealt with this Bill, I explained in detail the causes which led to the introduction of this amending Bill. It is not necessary for me to repeat them now, and if any Hon'ble Member was not present on the last occasion when I moved that the Bill be introduced, he can find all the information he wants in the Statement of Objects and Reasons."

The motion was put and agreed to.

BILL TO AMEND THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE AND THE COURT-FEES ACT.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"My Lord, the Bill to introduce which I now ask for leave, has already been before this Council in a modified form. In March 1914, Sir Reginald Craddock introduced a Bill to amend the Criminal Procedure Code and the Court Fees Act. This Bill was circulated in accordance with the usual practice to Local Governments and others for opinion. When the various opinions were received it was found that the Bill as originally introduced was open to criticism in various respects, and the Government of India decided that the best method of dealing with the question was to appoint a strong but small Committee to examine the various criticisms received, and for that purpose a Committee on which I may say the legal element was very strongly represented, consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Lowndes, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Piggott, The Hon'ble Mr. Kumarswamy Sastry, the Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha and the Hon'ble Mr. James Walker, was convened. They examined and revised this Bill very thoroughly in the light of the various criticisms, and so many additions and changes were made that the Government of India thought it would be better to abandon the bill originally introduced, and to place the revised Bill before the Council as a new measure. If leave to introduce this Bill is given, it will be circulated to Local Governments and ample opportunity for discussing the various proposed modifications of the law will be afforded when the motion is made to refer the Bill to a Select Committee. I therefore do not propose at this stage to deal with the merits or details of the Bill at all, nor do I think that I could usefully add anything to the value and weight of the Report which is an annexure to the Bill. That Report is a very full one and describes in detail the reasons for the various changes.

"I now move, my Lord, to introduce the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, and the Court Fees Act, 1870"

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir William Vincent :—"My Lord, I now introduce the Bill and move that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the Local official gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments may think fit."

The motion was put and agreed to.

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (VALIDATING) BILL.

[*Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ;
Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru.*]TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (VALIDATING) BILL.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:— My Lord, I beg to move that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, be taken into consideration. The Council will remember that when the Select Committee presented their Preliminary Report on the 21st February 1917, they had agreed that it was necessary to validate certain mortgage deeds which had been executed under the practice which obtained particularly in the United Provinces, whereby a witness attested the execution of a deed after receiving a personal acknowledgment—from the executant that he had put his signature to the deed, though he had not seen him actually sign it. The question that was then left over for further consideration was whether claims which had been already defeated on the ground that the attestation so made was not made in accordance with law as was decided by their Lordships' Privy Council, should be restored. The matter was referred to the United Provinces Government, and after considering the opinion of the United Provinces Government, the Select Committee has recommended that certain claims should be restored, namely claims which had been wholly or in part dismissed, rejected or withdrawn after the 30th day of July 1912, and before the commencement of this Act in a court of first instance, by reason only of the fact that some person who purported to attest such deed or instrument as a witness on having received before signing his name thereon a personal acknowledgment from the executant of his signature, did not see the executant sign it. Consequently it has been provided in the Bill my Lord, that within six months from the commencement of this Act an application may be made for the restoration of such a claim. But in order to guard against any injury being done to transferees for value in good faith, it has been provided that the Court to which such an application is made, shall have discretion to refuse the restoration of any claim if it thought that such a restoration would prejudice the rights of any transferee for value in good faith under any transfer made since the 30th day of July, 1912, that is since the date of the Privy Council decision in question. The Select Committee also felt that in the event of a decree being passed upon such an application for restoration, the person against whom the decree would be passed should not be compelled to pay interest at the contractual rate up to the date of the final decree that may be passed against him, but that interest should be allowed at the contractual rate only up to the date of the original dismissal, rejection or withdrawal of such claim and for a period of 6 months thereafter, and that any interest which may be allowed after that period and until restoration should be at the rate of 6 per cent. The Select Committee have also thought it fit to provide that issues of fact which had been already decided by a Court, in which a claim was dismissed, rejected or withdrawn in the beginning, should not be re-opened if they had been heard and finally determined by it. These provisos have been introduced in order to guard against any injury being done to any party, concerned in the transaction.

“ The Bill as it now stands, my Lord, provides for two matters. It provides, that the claims of honest creditors should not be defeated merely by reason of a lax practice having been followed in the matter of attestation. It also provides that no injury shall be done to debtors by reason of this enactment and that they shall be dealt with as fairly as they would have been dealt with if this Privy Council ruling referred to above had not come into force. With these remarks I commend the Report of the Select Committee to the consideration of the Council, and I hope it will be accepted.”

The Hon'ble Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru:—“ My Lord, coming as I do from the province to which this Bill relates, I think it is necessary that I should state a few facts with regard to the local conditions and circumstances.

TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (VALIDATING) BILL; HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru ; Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ; His Excellency the President.]

[26TH SEPTEMBER, 1917.]

So far as clause 2 of the Bill is concerned, I do not think that I shall be justified in raising any objection to that clause. But I must confess that although I have signed the Report of the Select Committee, my mind is not free from doubt as to the utility of clause 3 of this Bill. My Lord, I am perfectly well aware that the Local Government has supported this idea, but at the same time in a matter like this one cannot forget that the High Court, which ought to know better than the Local Government, has not favoured it. My Lord, clause 3 of the Bill provides for the restoration of suits which have been dismissed wholly or in part. Well, no doubt there are certain provisions added to clause 3 which are of a saving nature, and if I refrain from opposing clause 3, it is only because my doubts are not sufficiently strong to justify me in voting against this clause which has been so earnestly put forward by my Hon'ble friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and which, to a certain extent, has received the support of the Local Government. I must say that in supporting this Bill, my mind is not free from doubt, and I will give only a qualified support."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya:—"My Lord, I beg to move that the Bill as amended be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Excellency the President:—"It only remains for me to close this Session and express the hope that Hon'ble Members will carry away the desire and intention of formulating quietly and dispassionately the views which they wish to place later before Mr. Montagu and myself.

"This is the first occasion on which Resolutions other than those of a purely non-contentious nature have been admitted for discussion at the Simla Session. I think the discussions which have taken place have not been without value, and certainly points have been argued with great force and ability.

"But before I formally declare the sitting closed, I should like to make one or two remarks on the proceedings of this past Session. I have been steadfastly anxious that the tone of our debates here should give a lead to India, and anyone can see that the Government have been scrupulous in their endeavour to discuss even the most contentious questions with studied moderations.

"Still it is in the clash of debate that great issues are forged, and so far as is consistent with the dignity of this Council, I would not for one moment wish to see our discussions here shorn of their force and vitality. Our proceedings would be hollow and unreal if Hon'ble Members, official and non-official, were not free within the recognised limits of controversy to express in temperate language views deliberately formed and honestly held. But I would remind them that this is a matter in which there must be give and take.

"I look to find in India the highest standard of mutual dealing among men engaged in public affairs, even though their points of view may be different, and in this connection we do all honour to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab for his generous action in our proceedings here on the 19th instant. It was the act of a strong man and an honest man, and must command our admiration.

"I could not help feeling after hearing Sir Michael O'Dwyer's remarks that his generous attitude gave to one Hon'ble Member of this Council on that occasion an opportunity of displaying equal generosity in respect of a remark publicly made with reference to Sir Michael O'Dwyer. The opportunity has not yet been taken, but I am glad to hear that the Hon'ble Member in question proposes to withdraw that remark on an early occasion.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

[His Excellency the President.]

"Let me turn to other matters. I have observed that recent events have called forth misleading criticisms of the relations of the Government of India to the Secretary of State on the one hand, and towards Local Governments on the other. Since I have held the Viceroyalty my relations with the Secretary of State, both with Mr. Chamberlain and with Mr. Montagu, have been most cordial, and both these statesmen have been uniformly anxious to work in full harmony with the Government of India, and I think I may claim that my own attitude towards the heads of Local Governments has been precisely similar. In this connection let me mention the case of Mrs. Besant. We, as a Government, would surely have shown little faith in the policy recently made public or in the appeal for concord and co-operation which I made in my opening speech of this Session, if we had adopted any other course than that which we have followed. Previous to the announcement of that policy the position was somewhat difficult. We have gladly taken the opportunity that has now offered itself for opening a new chapter. The Home Member informed you on Monday that Mrs. Besant has passed her word to me that she will co-operate in obtaining a calm atmosphere for Mr. Montagu's visit. I accept Mrs. Besant's word, and I am sure her remarkable energies will be directed in the way she has indicated.

"But, Gentlemen, while our policy has been conciliatory, it must not be supposed we have altered in any degree our attitude towards the forces of disorder. The prime duty of Government is to preserve order; in time of war it is a paramount duty; it is a duty which the Indian Governments will not for one instant neglect.

"But let us look forward rather than back. Spero meliora. We are no longer groping in the dark. We have an objective given to us, and we want the help of all to steer our course to that objective.

"Do not let us then be drawn aside by ephemeral incidents, which have lent themselves to misconstruction, from the great task which we all have in hand. Every interest and class will have an opportunity of putting their views before Mr. Montagu and myself, and provided these are consistent with main principles of the policy formulated by His Majesty's Government, they will receive sympathetic consideration. Let me assure these non-official Members who represent European commercial interests, in this Council, that these important interests will of course be fully considered. Everyone, I am sure Indian and European alike recognises the historic position of the British community in India, and the debt which India owes to its enterprise and its energy. And no scheme of reform which was sound could be based on injustice to the British or to any other community. We want all the best minds and the co-operation of all classes of the community. I will not say more on this point, for does not the time itself appeal to us all, whatever our race or creed or class, to co-operate in the spirit of Macaulay's lines:—

'Then none was for a party.

Then all were for the State?'

"In declaring the Session closed, I bid Hon'ble Members good-bye and wish them all a safe journey to their homes."

The Council adjourned sine die.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday,
6th October 1917.

Burma.—During the week general rain fell throughout the Province. In Lower Burma the fall was heavy on the Tenasserim coast and good elsewhere. Tavoy reports nearly 24 inches of rain and Thaton, Amherst and Mergui, over 12. In Upper Burma including the dry zone, the fall was good. Agricultural operations for the main rice crop have been practically completed. Cultivation of miscellaneous cold weather crops in Upper Burma is proceeding. Plucking of cotton has commenced. Standing crops are generally in good condition. Cattle are healthy. The price of unhusked rice at Rangoon has risen slightly to Rs. 82 per hundred baskets but is still considerably below normal. The market for white rice is strong.

Assam.—The weather was seasonable. Harvesting of autumn rice and of jute has been nearly finished. Manufacture of tea and sowing of pulses continue. Transplantation of winter rice has been practically finished. Prospects of standing crops are fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from five districts. The price of common rice continues to fall slightly.

Bengal.—During the week there was heavy rain accompanied by storm over the greater part of the Province. The fall was heavy in the western and northern parts of Bengal and generally moderate elsewhere. The recent rain has benefited the winter paddy but has retarded the preparation of lands for spring crops. Steeping and washing of jute continue. Prospects of winter paddy are generally reported to be highly satisfactory. Cattle disease exists in six districts. The average price of common rice for the Province has risen by 0.47 per cent as compared with that of the preceding week.

Bihar and Orissa.—During the week there was heavy rain in Orissa and Chota Nagpur and also in the Bhagalpur division. Harvesting of autumn crops continues. Standing crops are, on the whole, doing well. The price of common rice shows a downward tendency. The supply of fodder is generally sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from several districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is good.

United Provinces.—The rainfall during the week was light. Floods have damaged crops in the Muttra, Hardoi, Unao and Ballia districts. Cotton has suffered from excessive rain in parts of the central Doab. Otherwise standing crops are doing well and prospects have improved. Harvesting of autumn crops, preparations for spring crops and picking of cotton are going on. Cattle disease continues but the condition of agricultural stock is generally satisfactory. Fodder and water are adequate. Prices show a tendency to rise.

Punjab.—Except in the western districts light rain was nearly general. More rain is not needed at present. Standing crops are average to good except in the southeast where they are below average. Picking of cotton and reaping of maize and other autumn crops continue. The yield of cotton is expected to be below normal and of other crops generally normal. Gram and oilseeds are being sown to the normal extent. Cattle are healthy and fodder and water for drinking and irrigation purposes are sufficient. Canals are closed in some districts as irrigation is not needed. Stocks of food grains are sufficient. Prices are stationary and generally range between normal and warning rates. Price of wheat :—Rawalpindi 9, Lahore 9½ and Ambala, Ferozepore and Lyallpur 10 seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—Rain has fallen in parts of the Province. Harvesting of autumn crops is in progress. The outturn is average. Sowings of spring crops are proceeding. Cattle are in good condition. Fodder and water are sufficient. The price of wheat in Peshawar is 9½ and in Dera Ismail Khan 10½ seers per rupee.

Jammu.—Rain fell in some parts. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 9 to 13 and maize from 13 to 24 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is below the average. Cattle disease prevails in some villages of the Province. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—The rainfall was good. Standing crops are in fair condition. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are sufficient. Prices are high.

Rajputana.—The rainfall during the week was general. The maximum fall was 7 inches 32 cents in Partabgarh. The weather is cloudy. Crops are suffering in most places owing to prolonged monsoon weather. Prospects of outturn are moderate. Agricultural stock is in fair to good condition. Fodder and water are ample. Prices are steady.

Central India.—The rainfall was general. The principal falls were 5 inches in Jobat, 4 inches in Bagli, Jaora and Jhabua, 3 inches in Dhar, Barwani and Alirajpur, 2 inches in Mehidpur and Khargon, and 1 inch in Manpur, Indore city, and Garoth. Autumn crops are being harvested in Gwalior and in the Southern States and weeded elsewhere. Land for spring crops is being prepared in Gwalior, Bhopal, Bundelkhand and the Southern States, but the operation has been retarded in the latter by rain. Standing crops are in an unsatisfactory condition in Gwalior and Malwa owing to rain but in fair condition elsewhere. The probable outturn is below average in Gwalior and fair elsewhere. Damage by insects is reported from Gwalior and by rain elsewhere. Agricultural stock is generally in good condition. Pasturage is sufficient. Prices are high in Bhopal and steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—The weather is clearing up in the northern districts where preparation of land is in progress. The rest of the Province continues to have rain and an immediate break is necessary. Excessive rain has caused some damage to standing crops except rice and sugarcane in parts of several districts. Harvesting of rice has commenced in places. Fodder is ample and cattle are healthy. The price of rice has fallen but that of other food grains has risen slightly.

Feudatory States.—Some damage to crops on account of excessive rain is reported from six States. A break is needed. Harvesting of rice has begun.

Bombay.—The rainfall during the week was heavy in Gujarat, the Konkan and the Deccan. Standing crops are in good condition except for slight damage by rats in parts of Karachi and two talukas of Thar and Parkar, by floods and insects in four talukas of Nawabshah and by continuous rain in Kaira, Broach, Surat, five talukas of Thar and Parkar, parts of Khandesh, Kathiawar and Palanpur. Harvesting of autumn crops is progressing. Sowing of spring crops continues in parts of the Deccan and the Karnatik. The fodder supply is generally adequate. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Cattle are in good condition. Drinking and irrigation water is sufficient. Prices of food grains are generally steady.

Hyderabad.—The rainfall during the week was heavy in parts of four districts and fair elsewhere. The average fall was 1 inch 43 cents. Autumn crops have suffered from heavy rain. Early rice crop is in fair to good condition though it has suffered from blight in parts of Andol and Surayypet. Lands for spring crops are being prepared. Sowings are progressing but have been interfered with by rain. Cattle disease prevails in fourteen talukas. Variations in prices of grains are insignificant. Coarse rice sells at 7½ and white juar at 9½ seers per rupee in Hyderabad city. The highest price of juar in districts is 6 seers per rupee in Bidar and the lowest 19 seers per rupee in Raichur.

Mysore.—The rainfall during the week was good in Kadur and Shimoga and light elsewhere. The price of ragi has fallen in Shimoga. Markets are well supplied. Weeding and transplanting of paddy and ragi are in progress. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects are good. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Rainfall 1 inch 92 cents. Rice is in good condition. Picking of cardamoms and reaping of dry crops continue. Prices of food grains are high. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was very heavy in Malabar South Kanara and Cochin, heavy in the Vizagapatam Agency and Madras, good in Ganjam, the Vizagapatam Littoral, Godaveri, Kistna, Kurnool, Banganapalle, Nellore, Chingleput, Chittoor, Travancore and the Nilgiris, and light to fair elsewhere. Standing crops are in fair to good condition generally but rain is required in parts of three districts. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding normally with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding normally. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water supply is sufficient except in parts of Ganjam, Nellore, South Arcot and Central except Trichinopoly. Pasture is sufficient except in parts of two districts. Fodder is generally available. Prices are steady.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

ARMY DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATION.

Simla, the 18th October 1917.

No. 1760.—The following gracious message from His Imperial Majesty the King Emperor to the Joint Committee of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem and the British Red Cross Society is published for general information:—

“During past twelve months I have had constant opportunity of witnessing afresh both at home and in Flanders the great work of mercy carried out by united efforts of the British Red Cross and the Order of St. John.

“In every theatre of the war regardless of distance, discomfort or danger the task of alleviation, removal of pain and suffering and of ministering to those in need is performed with unparalleled devotion by men and women who have taken service under the Red Cross.

“The prompt and unstinted provision of medical and general stores and comforts is an all-important work and one of the main responsibilities undertaken by the Joint Committee.

“In hospitals and convalescent Homes, hospital trains, motor ambulances and launches our sick and wounded as well as those of our Allies are I know indeed grateful for the aid and co-operation which the Joint Societies bring to the medical services of the armies, nor have the needs of our prisoners of war been forgotten in allocation of your funds.

“I trust therefore that there will be no falling off of generous financial support on the part of every one at home and in Dominions Overseas without which this work cannot be maintained.

“During the war I have had great satisfaction in sending to the Joint Committee on October 20th a donation of five thousand pounds. This year for “Our Day” collection on eighteenth it is a pleasure to me to contribute ten thousand pounds to mark my appreciation of what has been achieved by the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John in the past and my deep sense of the importance in continuing these achievements in the future.”

Department of Education
Education.

SIR,

In the Home Department letter, no. 380-C., dated the 25th January 1917, local Governments were informed of the proposals of the Government of India as regards the procedure to be followed in dealing with the report of the Public Services Commission. In paragraph 3 of that letter it was stated that the Government of India would, in the first place, form provisional conclusions regarding the Commission's recommendations involving general principles and of general application and that local Governments would be informed of these conclusions at an early date. It is hoped that the Government of India will shortly be able to make a communication to local Governments in accordance with the arrangement above described.

2. In forwarding the report of the Commission to the Government of India in October 1916, the Secretary of State suggested that they should give early consideration to the recommendations of the Commission regarding the Education Department. He added that the recommendations embodied in annexure IV to the Commission's report aimed at removing many anomalies now existing in this service which constituted a source of discontent and appeared to cause embarrassment to Government. The Government of India, in submitting their proposals for the procedure to be followed in dealing with the report, informed the Secretary of State that endeavour would be made to expedite preliminary secretariat work as much as possible, and that his special request for early consideration of the Education Department case had been noted. The Secretary of State, moreover, in dealing with another case in January 1917, invited a reference to his previous suggestion and expressed a hope that the Government of India would be able to give very early consideration to the proposals of the Commission regarding the educational services.

I am accordingly directed to say that the Government of India desire in the case of the Education Department, to depart from the general line of procedure pursued in dealing with the report as a whole, and I am to address you regarding certain important proposals relating to that Department. It is not proposed in the present communication to deal with questions of leave or pension, as these must be decided largely in accordance with the principles adopted for other services, nor is it proposed to touch for the present on the service for women which the Commission have recommended. The Subordinate Educational Service again was not included in the scope of the Commission's enquiries. The present reference is intended to deal with the main features of the constitution of the Department qua the 'Indian' and 'Provincial' Services. Though it will be open to local Governments to make suggestions regarding any of the further detailed recommendations of the Commission bearing on these main features, the object of the Government of India at the present stage is to obtain the views of local Governments at the earliest possible date in respect of the fundamental principles on which the Department should be reorganised. The recommendations of the Commission on this subject are summarised in paragraph 36 of their annexure IV, and the present communication is concerned mainly with nos. (i) -(vii), (x) and (xvii) of the recommendations as there summarised.

3. Apart from a certain number of miscellaneous appointments outside the cadre, the existing Department consists of two branches, the collegiate and the administrative, and transfers from one of these branches to the other are fairly frequent in some provinces, but rare in others. The higher branch of the Department again consists of two services, the Indian Educational Service and the Provincial Educational Service, which are nominally parallel to each other but in practice, at any rate so far as pay is concerned, are quite unequal. The former service is recruited in England and consists almost entirely of Europeans who draw a salary rising from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,000 per mensem with certain additional allowances. The latter service is recruited in India and its members draw as a rule a graded pay varying between Rs. 200 and Rs. 700. Proposals for the reorganisation of these services may be framed either in the way adopted by the Commission, though not necessarily in close accord with their specific proposals, or on alternative lines such as are suggested below. The Governor General in Council desires that local Governments will take into their consideration both these alternative proposals and favour him with their opinion upon them.

4. The proposals made by the Commission are explained in annexure IV of their report and need not be repeated here in detail. The Commission adhere to the present distinction between the collegiate and administrative branches, but they desire that transfers from one to the other should not be permitted except under sanction of Government and to meet the public interest. Moreover, in addition to the main cadre of the Education Department to which reference will presently be made, they recommend the organisation of (a) a body of 20 professors recruited either in England or in India, and (b) special recruitment to certain posts which would otherwise fall under class II.

5. As regards the former, it will be noticed that the Commission attached considerable importance to this portion of their scheme as representing a basis for building up a system of higher studies and original research. But they found great difficulty in deciding the relationship of these posts with the existing system of affiliating universities. They suggested, therefore, that such posts might be attached to (a) Government colleges, or (b) the affiliating universities along the lines now attempted by the Universities of Calcutta, Madras and Allahabad, or (c) a post-graduate institute of research.

These proposals are open to obvious criticisms. For example, a Government college professor is, and must be, insufficiently in contact with other colleges to be able to influence the higher teaching of the university as a whole ; again, a professor of an affiliating university is almost entirely out of touch with the main stream of college work and also finds it difficult to conduct research work with students whose past training he has been unable to influence or to guide ; and a research institute of the character contemplated by the Public Services Commission is impossible of early realisation. It might also be urged that the proposed body of higher professors will tend to debase the position of the ordinary college professor, whose duties are possibly of even greater importance and difficulty than those of the former. The Government of India, however, are in agreement with the Commission in thinking that there is a real need for a body of specialists in the several departments of study who would improve the methods of instruction in colleges and the courses of study in the universities, and would also inculcate a spirit of research, especially in those subjects termed " orientalia " in which India should take a leading part. It will probably be more convenient to consider at a later date the constitution of this class of posts and the method in which they should be brought into being, but it is impossible to neglect altogether this issue in the present reference.

6. So, too, as regards the other special posts referred to in paragraph 3 of annexure IV, it will probably be necessary under any form of organisation to make provision for a class of appointment outside the cadre, as is indeed done under present arrangements. The Government of India do not ask for any detailed proposals regarding the exact number of posts which should be included in this class. If however any special posts of importance should be so included to which the Commission have not referred, it is hoped that local Governments will specify the character of such posts.

7. Outside the subsidiary but important matters to which reference has been made, the main proposals of the Commission will result in the amalgamation of the Indian Educational Service and the Provincial Educational Service and, after this amalgamation has been effected, in a division into class I and class II, the distinction between which should be based on the type of work to be performed by each officer. The manner in which this distinction could be carried out is indicated with a certain amount of detail in paragraphs 5 and 6 of annexure IV. The new class I proposed by the Commission is designed to consist, in the first place, of 264 appointments, including (a) the present Indian Educational Service, comprising 199 posts, whose incumbents would be transferred en bloc to the new class I, and (b) posts equal to about one-third of that number to be filled by persons recruited in India either direct or by promotion from the Provincial Service.

Regarding future recruitment to these 264 posts, it is recommended in paragraph 11 of the annexure that the present proportions of recruits obtained in Europe and India respectively, which would under the adjustment above indicated amount roughly to 3 : 1, should be maintained in the future for the existing number of posts taken as a whole, on the understanding that if no candidate from Europe of sufficient merit applied for any particular vacancy which would ordinarily be filled in Europe, there should be no hesitation in making the appointment for that occasion only in India, provided that a better candidate were there forthcoming. It is also recommended that additional posts which may be found necessary hereafter should be filled half by men trained in one country and half by men trained in the other. In this way it was expected that the percentage of the service recruited in India would gradually increase while that taken from Europe would diminish in proportion.

On the administrative side half of the class I posts to be filled up in India are to be reserved for direct recruits, and half given to class II officers provided qualified candidates are available. On the collegiate side, the proportion is to be two-thirds and one-third respectively (paragraph 15 of annexure).

Class II is to be as large as the work to be done requires (paragraph 7), and recruitment for it is to be entirely in India (paragraph 12). The proportion of class II posts to be filled by promotion from the Subordinate Service is left to be determined by the local authorities (paragraph 15).

8. It is proposed by the Commission that both classes should be paid on an incremental scale (paragraph 21). For class I officers who are recruited in India a general scale of Rs. 350—50—1,250 a month is recommended, whilst for those who are recruited in Europe, whether statutory natives of India or not, the Commission propose a salary of Rs. 550—50—1,250 a month. This would bring all officers, irrespective of any selection, on to equal grades of pay after 18 years' service at the latest (paragraph 22). The Commission also provide for selection grades for all alike, wherever recruited and whether statutory natives of India or not, of 10 per cent. of the cadre on Rs. 1,250—50—1,500, and of a further 10 per cent. on Rs. 1,500—50—1,750 a month in all the major provinces except Assam.

For class II the same general scale is proposed as has been recommended for the provincial civil and police services and other such services which are recruited in India. This would give a scale for all provinces, exclusive of Burma, where a special scale is proposed, of Rs. 250— $\frac{40}{3}$ —150— $\frac{50}{3}$ —500 a month for the main body of officers; with selection grades of Rs. 500—40—700 a month for 15 per cent. of the total cadre (paragraph 22). These changes are estimated to involve an additional cost of over 9 lakhs per annum (paragraph 23).

9. Such are the main features of the organisation proposed by the Commission and the Government of India would be glad to receive the comments of local Governments on the advisability or otherwise of following the principles laid down. It is desired that special consideration be given to the following points:—

(a) Whether a distinction between class I and class II can in practice be made according to the work done in the manner suggested by the Commission and whether the scales of pay proposed for the two classes are suitable.

(b) In this connection special attention should be given to the proposed differentiation in pay between the members of class I recruited in England and in India respectively and to the general considerations put forward in paragraph 55 of the report. In other words, is there to be a distinction of pay in class I, e.g., according as its members are recruited in England or in India or should all officials of this class draw the same pay?

(c) In the event of there being a distinction of pay between officers who are deemed to possess European qualifications and others, should Indians be admitted to the former category merely on the ground that they happen to be in Europe when recruited or should there be a condition that Indian officers deemed to possess European qualifications should have received education in Europe for a specified number of years?

10. The Government of India desire that the Commission's scheme should be examined as above suggested, but they recognise that it appears open to criticism in various respects, of which the following appear to be some of the most important:—

(a) The Public Services Commission of 1886-7 were of opinion that the recruitment of educational officers in England should be confined as far as possible to principalships of colleges and professorships in those branches of learning in which European standards of knowledge had not been reached in India. Officers so recruited in England were to receive a scale of remuneration based on the attainments required and the duties to be performed. It has been represented that these proposals have not been carried out. The fact that at the time of the present Commission's enquiry there were only six Indians in a service of 199 members tends to support this contention. Instances are adduced of Indian officers of distinction who have been unable to obtain admission to the Indian Educational Service; and, on the other hand, attention has been drawn to the alleged inferiority of many of the officers recently appointed in Europe to the service. By allotting one-quarter of the new class I posts to members of the present Provincial Educational Service or others recruited in India, by giving some definite opportunities for promotion in the future to men of proved merit in class II, and by insisting that, for the posts for which recruitment will be made in England, Indians trained in that country will be eligible, the Commission have attempted to remedy the defects of the old system, while it may be hoped that with the improved conditions of service a better type of candidate for the class I posts will be forthcoming than in the past. The question is, however, whether the Commission's proposals are sufficiently effective, and one point that needs special consideration is that referred to in paragraph 9(a) above. It may often be desirable that the teaching of the junior classes in colleges should be conducted by the more experienced and competent officers, and it does not therefore follow that participation in the higher teaching is a claim to inclusion in class I. It is in connection with problems of this sort that the opinions of local Governments will be specially valuable, and the Governor General in Council hopes that they will be able to suggest some practical means of distinction between class I and class II which will not depend primarily upon racial grounds.

(b) Critics of the new proposals may again contend that the main bulk of the educational work in this country should be discharged by Indians serving on Indian rates of pay, and that its guidance and control should be very largely in their hands. Europeans, they would argue, however experienced or scholarly, are unable to understand adequately the needs of Indian students or to enter into their lives with sufficient intimacy or sympathy. Such critics would therefore urge that instead of placing the Education Department, as suggested by the Commission, in that group of services in which a mixture of East and West is desirable, it should be included in the third of the categories described in paragraph 32 of the Commission's report. On the other hand, it may be maintained that while the bulk of the educational service in India should ultimately be manned by Indians recruited in this country and that a knowledge of the minds and habits of the people may be of more value than European training, this contention is under present conditions true only up to a certain point. A uniform service working under Indian rates of pay might reach only a dull level of mediocrity. It seems essential at the present moment to attract the best possible material, European as well as Indian, into educational employ.

On the scholastic side the establishment of some twenty research professorships could do little to raise the general level of university teaching, especially under the affiliating system. For the present therefore, until the new type of unitary or teaching universities has been more generally evolved in India, it seems necessary to give more scope to the capacity of efficient college professors.

Similarly, on the administrative side, provision ought, it is urged, to be made for Western capacity* and experience. Even if it were accepted that this branch of the service should in the main be organised upon lines primarily contemplating an Indian staff, it appears of importance to pitch the salaries of some of the more influential and responsible posts on a scale which will attract the really able men, whether Indian or European.

(c) A further criticism of the proposals is that they are not adapted to the general trend of Indian educational policy, at any rate in the region of higher education. The progress of the Indian universities in the matter of higher teaching, both in the number of students attending the classes and in the specialised nature of the courses, demands more and more the assistance of highly specialised scholars and a certain measure of concentration of institutions. In paragraph 45 of their educational resolution of 1913 the Government of India declared their preference for the teaching as distinguished from the affiliating university. The proposals of the Dacca and Central Provinces Universities Committees, the Patna University scheme now under consideration, and the recent changes made in Calcutta for post-graduate teaching are all in the direction of an increased university control over certain forms of teaching and of a certain measure of concentration. Should this line of policy be developed in future and be extended to other parts of India, it is urged that the establishment of a Government service, with its regular conditions of pay, prospects, promotions, and transfers, will not be consistent with the needs and requirements either of new unitary and teaching universities or of reformed affiliating universities. If universities are to conduct certain forms of teaching, they should obviously do so through the agency of their own professors and not through the members of an outside service.

There seems, therefore, some need for re-adjusting the present proposals to suit such future possibilities. It is true that there are many difficulties in the way of the fulfilment of such a policy, but it would be unwise to embarrass its development by the reconstitution of the educational services on lines ill-adapted to the requirements of the universities of the future.

(d) It has also been suggested that the line of distinction between the administrative and professorial sides of the service should be drawn even more clearly and decisively than has been done by the Commission. Transfers between the two have evoked a certain amount of criticism in the past and, under any circumstances, are open to some objection. There is to-day an increasing need for specialised knowledge which a man who has been an inspector for some years cannot hope to have retained. Again, a professor can scarcely hope to attain the necessary intimacy with the Indian system of administration and that satisfactory knowledge of educational theory and practice, which are required from a successful educational administrator.

On the other hand, it may be urged that it is undesirable to have too rigid a line of distinction: that the men in the higher administrative posts would be the better for having had some actual experience of teaching in India; and ~~the~~ professors would profit by having had some experience of administrative work.

(e) It may be contended also that the proposals are rather too rigid and that too little scope is given for the employment of men of experience or of ripe scholarship from outside for short periods of time. Indian university education needs, at times, the services of men who have already achieved some distinction in scholarship or some experience of educational administration in other countries.

11. In setting out the above criticisms the Government of India must not be deemed to be prejudging the matters in issue. Their present object is merely to clarify these so as to assist in obtaining the well considered opinions of local Governments. The same remarks apply to the alternative suggestions which follow, which are intended to elucidate opinion and not to forestall it. Nor in so far as they may prove acceptable, are they necessarily intended for immediate adoption but rather to indicate what may reasonably be accepted as the main policy of future development. For without a definite goal in view it is impossible to devise any satisfactory scheme for the reorganisation of the educational services.

12. (A) It has already been suggested in paragraph 6 of this letter that a certain number of posts in the Indian Educational Service should be turned into special appointments. In accordance with the Commission's proposals, a number of posts roughly equivalent to one-third of the Indian Educational Service (reduced by the exclusion of special appointments) would be added and filled in India. It might be considered whether a larger proportion of Indians might not at once be obtained by the additional transfer of the posts in the Indian Educational Service now vacant owing to the war and other causes (some 37 in number) to that portion of class I which will be recruited in India either by direct recruitment or by promotion. If this were done, taking into account, on the one hand, the reduction in the cadre by the special appointment of research professors, and the probability, on the other hand, that a considerably larger number of Indians will be appointed in England by the Secretary of State from among those educated in that country, the Indian element in class I would, at the outset, more nearly approximate to the European. The Government of India, therefore, would be glad to hear from local Governments (a) whether, in their opinion, it would be possible to obtain from the Provincial Educational Service or by direct recruitment so large a number of suitable Indians in this country, and (b) whether it would be to the interests of Indian education immediately to fix the proportion of Europeans and Indians at half and half.

(B) In order to prepare the way for a larger recruitment of Indians than is provided for by the Commission, it would also be necessary to fix a scale of pay which could easily be adapted to such altered circumstances in the future, for it would be a matter of great difficulty to reduce the scale of salaries after the proportion of officers has become very largely Indian. For class I, therefore, pay on the analogy of that recommended by the Commission (paragraph 58) for services requiring high initial qualifications, viz., Rs. 300—<sup>50</sup>/<sub>2</sub>—500—50—1,050, might be accepted, subject to the grant of special allowances for posts of special importance. There might also be a special allowance of Rs. 200 a month for officers recruited in Europe which should be given also to those few Indians now serving in the Indian Educational Service on full rates of pay. Selection grades would be created, as proposed by the Commission, and would be open to members of class I whether recruited in England or in India.

(C) In view of the difficulties referred to in paragraph 5 above, it might be better to hold the twenty research professorships in abeyance, at any rate for the present—a course which would make it the more desirable to accept the Commission's proposals regarding the selection grades. Should, however, the constitution of unitary and teaching universities become the general policy in the future, it would probably be the best course to transfer a number of posts from the selection grades of class I to the establishments of these universities. It would be premature at present to discuss how and by whom appointments would be made to these new posts, but recruitment would no doubt occasionally be from the ranks of class I of the Government service, provided it were possible to find applicants with the necessary specialised qualifications. Such appointments would give a certain number of officers more favourable opportunities for teaching and research than they can have under the existing system.

Similarly, in reference to the administrative side [vide paragraph 10 (b) ante] it may be considered advisable by local Governments to treat the directorship of public instruction in the manner proposed in paragraph 26 of annexure IV to the Commission's report.

It might also be considered whether a certain number of the posts which would ordinarily be included in class I should not be removed from the cadre and left open to be filled by any persons who appear to be peculiarly fitted to discharge the duties attached to them, with the addition to the ordinary salary of such allowance as seemed called for by the qualifications and experience of the person specially selected. In other words, special need may arise from time to time for securing the highest possible talent to fill some of the posts in the educational service, such as a particular inspectorship or the principalship of an important college or the headmastership of a certain high school. There should, in such cases, be a certain latitude of selection which would afford to local Governments the scope necessary for securing the services of the most highly qualified persons irrespective of race, creed or departmental claim. The Government of India would be glad to receive suggestions from local Governments as to what posts might thus be earmarked and some rough estimate of the additional cost involved.

13. The object of the suggestions made in the preceding paragraph is primarily to effect, as regards the immediate future, a stage of transition between the past, when education was very largely in the hands of Europeans, and a time when the reverse will be the case. They are also aimed at laying down a general policy for the future organisation of the Department. It is also desirable to have always in view the possible development of affiliating into teaching universities.

Should the proposals above indicated be carried out, it is possible to postulate (a) a service consisting of two classes carrying respectively rates of pay amounting to (1) Rs. 350 rising to Rs. 1,050 with the allowances suggested in paragraph 12 (B) above and selection grades up to Rs. 1,750, and (2) Rs. 250 rising to Rs. 500 and, in the selection grades, to Rs. 700, (b) a small number of posts on the administrative side which will be filled up by Government with an eye to efficiency and merit rather than to the claims of a special service and whose incumbents would keep the Indian system of education sufficiently in touch with those of other countries, and (c) a number of specialist professors attached to teaching universities, who by their scholarship and experience would maintain a high standard of teaching in the higher grades, and influence the general administration of the universities.

With this end in view I am to invite the opinions of local Governments on these proposals in general and also on the special points (a) whether the system of what may be called European allowances is practicable, (b) whether the rates of salary suggested are suitable, and (c) whether the general idea underlying sub-paragraph (C) of the preceding paragraph is based on sound principles.

14. The Government of India would be glad to learn the views of each local Government, firstly, as to the class of scheme which they would advocate, viz., a scheme on the lines proposed by the Commission or one on the lines sketched out in paragraph 12 of the present communication, and, secondly, whether in the scheme advocated by the local Government any changes of substance are proposed in modification of the outline given in this letter. It is requested that a reply to this letter may be despatched so as to reach the Government of India by the 30th November next.

15. I am in conclusion to suggest for the consideration of <sup>His Excellency the Governor in Council
His Honour the Lieut.-Governor in Council, etc.</sup> that, in view of the importance which His Majesty's Secretary of State attached to the early submission of proposals in regard to the Department of Education, it might be desirable, with a view to expedite matters, to appoint a strong provincial committee, on which influential Indian opinion should be represented, to consider and report to the local Government upon the proposals dealt with in this letter.

16. The Government of India desire to elicit public opinion to the fullest extent upon the subject of the educational services, which has long attracted widespread interest. They have accordingly decided to publish this circular letter in the forthcoming Gazette of India.

(1) The existing rate of subscription to the Provident Fund of one-twelfth of the salary of the employé will be continued.

(2) The contribution from the railway of an amount equal to the subscription to the Provident Fund sanctioned in Railway Board's letter No. 400-F.-16, dated 19th July 1916 will be maintained at that level.

(3) The rate of interest on deposits will be guaranteed at 4 per cent. per annum with effect from 1st April 1914, in the case of the State Railway Provident Fund and of the Provident Funds of the Assam Bengal, Bombay, Baroda and Central India, Great Indian Peninsula and Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways whose provident fund securities have been taken over by Government.

The difference between the amount of interest already credited to individual accounts and the amount due at the guaranteed rate of 4 per cent. per annum from 1st April 1914, should be allowed for in making payments to members of the Provident Funds of these railways, vide 4 (b) below. As under the Secretary of State's orders the guaranteed rate of 4 per cent. per annum is applicable from 1st April 1914 the above procedure applies to the accounts of all members who have retired since that date.

(4) Subject to the limitations defined below all members of the Provident Fund who were or have been in the service of the railway on or from 1st April 1916 will be entitled on retirement to have their Provident Fund assets recalculated on the assumption, so far as interest and bonus are concerned, that they have subscribed from the beginning of their service at a rate of  $8\frac{1}{3}$  per cent. of salary.—

(a) The concession should be granted to each subscriber in respect of the periods of service during which he belonged to a Provident Fund or was prevented from doing so by the non-existence of a Provident Fund on the line on which he was employed ; but not for any period during which he voluntarily abstained from membership, or was debarred by a rule or rules rendering ineligible for membership employés of the class to which he belonged or by any other rule or rules. The concession also is not to be granted to any member who, having had at the introduction of the present rules the option of subscribing to a Provident Fund at  $8\frac{1}{3}$  per cent. of pay, elected to subscribe at a lower rate.

(b) In giving retrospective effect to the above concession the charges to revenue in any year should be limited to the actual disbursements made to officers and subordinates retiring during the year. No immediate credit by charge to revenue should therefore appear in individual accounts.

(c) Any amounts under the terms of this concession which may be due to subscribers after the winding up of the accounts of a company on the termination of its contract will be treated as Government liabilities.

Note 1.—In the case of the Bengal and North Western and Rohilkund and Kumaon Railways this rule is subject to the Companies agreeing to fall in with the general terms.

(5) All subscriptions to the State Railway Provident Fund will be on a rupee basis and the accounts of those subscribers who have elected the sterling basis will be recast with retrospective effect.

- (6) Forfeited bonuses will in future be credited to the fine fund.
- (7) Subscribers to the State Railway Provident Fund proceeding on leave out of India entitling them to draw allowances from the Home Treasury after the issue of these orders will be allowed to pay their subscriptions by deduction from such allowances.
- (8) The subscriptions of an open line officer temporarily transferred to construction or survey work will be calculated on his actual salary and not (as now) on his open line rate of pay.
- (9) The whole bonus of 100 per cent. will be treated as a charge on working expenses.

NOTE.—Railway Administrations may submit, in consultation with Government Audit Officers, proposals for any amendment of the existing contracts between the Secretary of State and the Companies wherever a modification in this respect is considered necessary.

- (10) (a) The rate of interest to be allowed on retrospective bonus in respect of any half year since the establishment of the Provident Fund will be that at which interest for the half year was actually credited in the accounts of the member.
- (b) The rate of interest to be allowed on retrospective bonus in respect of the period before the establishment of the Provident Fund will be settled on receipt of proposals from each railway.

Gratuities.

(11) The subordinate staff of Indian railways will continue to receive the gratuities for good, efficient, faithful and continuous service sanctioned in Railway Board's letter No. 2263-R. E., dated 8th September 1911 subject to the conditions promulgated from time to time.

(12) A gratuity for similar service may be granted to gazetted officers, subject to the following limits at the discretion of the Railway Board as regards State Railways' staff and of the Boards of Directors of Companies Railways as regards Companies' staff, viz :—

(i) Conditions of eligibility for gratuity—

- (a) Completion of 30 years' service, or
- (b) Attainment of the age of 50 years; or
- (c) Retirement on account of permanent incapacity due to bodily or mental infirmity; or
- (d) Abolition of appointment due to a reduction of establishment, if other suitable employment can not be found for the officer.

(ii) Amount of gratuity admissible—

- (a) For service not exceeding 18 years, a half month's pay for each year of service, subject to a maximum of six months' pay.
- (b) For service in excess of 18 years, 6 months' pay plus half a month's pay for each year after the eighteenth, subject to a maximum of 12 months' pay or Rs. 25,000 whichever is less.

NOTE.—Government of India, Public Works Department Circular No. XIV-Railway, dated 5th November 1894, and the orders contained in Railway Board's letter No. 1822-R E., dated 9th June 1913 and No. 2421-E., dated the 14th July 1914, to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, governing the grant of gratuities for special services rendered and for compensation for inadequate provident fund benefits, etc., will be considered as withdrawn from the date of the introduction of these rules.

(13) Subordinates promoted to officer grades may be given the gratuity admissible to an officer calculated with reference to their entire service. The orders in Railway Board's letter No. 213-F.-16, dated 21st February 1917, are hereby withdrawn.

(14) Employés on the London office staff of the Companies (who are members of the provident fund) will not be regarded as eligible for gratuities on retirement.

(15) In the event of an officer dying while in service, the gratuity for which he would have been eligible if he had then retired on account of ill health will be paid to his widow or children dependent on him.

(16) The service for gratuity of an officer or subordinate who has served on two or more railways will be cumulative provided that on each occasion of transfer from one line to another the sanction of competent authority is obtained. The apportionment of gratuities in such cases will be in accordance with the principle that gratuities on retirement granted by one railway to employés who were taken over from another railway should be shared between the two railways in proportions based on a consideration of the length of service and pay under each employer in the manner shown by the following illustration. A subordinate who retires after twenty years' service on Railway A., and ten years' subsequent service on Railway B., is eligible for a gratuity of 15 months' pay at the time of retirement. Railway A. should bear the portion of the gratuity represented by twenty half month's pay at the rate drawn by the employé at the date on which his service terminated on Railway A.; Railway B. should bear the remainder of the gratuity. A similar procedure should be adopted in respect of officers' gratuity also.

2. These orders will (except as otherwise stated) take effect from 1st April 1916.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of the foregoing Resolution be forwarded to the officers noted on the reverse* for information.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Season and Crop Prospects for the week ending Saturday,
13th October 1917.

Burma.—During the week light to moderate rain was general throughout the Province. Over 6 inches fell in Insein, Thabon and Pakokku hill tracts. Transplantation of winter rice has been completed in Lower Burma and in irrigated tracts of Upper Burma. Cultivation of miscellaneous cold weather crops is progressing. Reaping of early sesamum and plucking of cotton are proceeding. Standing crops are generally in good condition. Cattle are healthy. The price of unhusked rice in Rangoon remains unchanged at Rs 82 per hundred baskets and is considerably below normal. The market for white rice is weak at Rupees 200 per hundred baskets for specials.

Assam.—The weather is, on the whole, seasonable. Harvesting of autumn rice and ~~rice~~ has been almost finished. Manufacture of tea and sowing of pulses still continue. Transplantation of winter rice has been practically finished. Prospects of standing crops except cotton are fair to good. Cattle disease is reported from six districts. The price of common rice has fallen slightly.

Bengal.—During the week heavy rain fell in parts of northern Bengal, causing slight damage to standing crops. The rainfall was light to moderate elsewhere. The condition and prospects of winter paddy continue, on the whole, to be very satisfactory, in spite of the heavy rains, floods and gales that occurred during this and the previous weeks. Weeding of winter paddy and harvesting of jute and other autumn crops are nearly over. Cattle disease is reported from four districts. The average price of common rice for the Province remained stationary with a slight tendency to fall.

Bihar and Orissa.—During the week the rainfall was general over the Province, the fall being mostly light. Harvesting of autumn crops is approaching completion. Preparation of lands for spring crops is going on. Standing crops are doing well. The price of common rice has fallen in nine districts, risen in two and remained stationary in the remaining districts. The supply of fodder is generally sufficient. Cattle disease is reported from seventeen districts. The condition of standing crops in the Feudatory States of Orissa is generally good.

United Provinces.—During the week rain was received in the south east of the Provinces. Harvesting and threshing of autumn crops, preparation of land for spring crops, picking of cotton and sowing of gram continue. Sowing of spring crops has commenced in places. Standing crops are doing well and prospects are favourable. Agricultural stock is in good condition but cattle disease is reported from twenty-seven districts. Fodder and water are ample. Markets are well supplied. Prices are generally stationary with a tendency to rise in places.

Punjab.—The weather is generally dry. The condition of standing autumn crops is generally good in the western districts and below average to average elsewhere. Sugar-cane is doing well. Picking of cotton and reaping of maize and other crops are in progress. The yield of cotton is below normal to normal and of other crops generally normal. Sowings of gram and of other spring crops continue and are generally normal. Germination is good. Cattle are healthy and fodder and water for drinking and irrigation purposes are sufficient. Prices are generally stationary but have risen slightly in some districts. They range generally between normal and warning rates. Price of wheat :—Lahore and Rawalpindi 9, Lyallpur 9½ and Ambala and Ferozepore 10 seers per rupee.

North-West Frontier Province.—The week was rainless. Harvesting of autumn crops is in progress with average outturn. Sowing of spring crops is proceeding. The condition of cattle is good. Fodder and water are sufficient. The price of wheat in Peshawar is 9½ and in Dera Ismail Khan 10 seers per rupee.

Jammu.—No rain fell during the week. Prices are fluctuating. Wheat sells from 9 to 13 and maize from 13 to 24 seers per rupee. The condition of standing crops is below average. There is no cattle disease. Fodder is sufficient.

Kashmir.—Report not received.

Rajputana.—Rain fell in a few places. The maximum fall was 2 inches 80 cents in Tonk. The weather is generally clear. Crops have been damaged in most places by excessive rains. Harvesting of autumn crops and preparation for spring crops are in progress. Prospects of autumn crops are moderate. Agricultural stock is in fair to good condition. Cattle disease is reported from Dungarpur, Jhalawar, Tonk, Bharatpur and Dholpur. Fodder and water are ample. Prices are steady.

Central India.—The rainfall during the week was general and sufficient throughout. The weather is clear and cool. Autumn crops are being harvested in Gwalior, Malwa and the Southern States. Land for spring crops is being prepared everywhere but the operation has been retarded in Gwalior. The condition of standing crops is unsatisfactory in Gwalior and Malwa and fair elsewhere. The outturn of autumn crops is below average in Gwalior and fair elsewhere. Crops have been damaged everywhere by rain and in parts of Gwalior by insects. Agricultural stock is in good condition except for cattle disease in small portions of each Agency except Malwa. Pasturage is sufficient. Prices are high in Bhopal and steady elsewhere.

Central Provinces.—During the week Nimar and Akola had about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  and  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inches of rain respectively. Ten other districts received light showers nowhere exceeding 94 cents. An opportune break has now set in which has greatly facilitated preparation of land for spring crops and has improved the condition of standing crops. Harvesting of rice and other minor crops is in progress. Fodder is ample and cattle are in good condition. Variations in prices are unimportant.

Feudatory States.—The weather is cloudy with occasional rainfall. Reaping of rice continues and preparation of land for spring crops has been started.

Bombay.—Good rain fell during the week in the Presidency proper but was slightly injurious to crops in parts of Kaira, Broach, Khandesh and Kathiawar. Elsewhere standing crops are flourishing except for slight damage by rats in some talukas of Thar and Parkar, by insects and floods in four talukas of Nawabshah and by insects in two talukas of Thar and Parkar and parts of Sukkur. Harvesting of autumn crops is progressing. Cotton picking has commenced in parts of Thar and Parkar and East Khandesh. Sowing of spring crops continues in parts of the Deccan and the Karnatak. The fodder supply is generally adequate. Agricultural stock is sufficient. Cattle are in good condition. Drinking and irrigation water is sufficient. Prices of food grains have risen slightly in Gujarat and are generally steady elsewhere.

Hyderabad.—The rainfall during the week was light and isolated. The average fall was 38 cents. Autumn crops have suffered from excessive and continuous rain. The early rice crop is in fair to good condition though it has suffered by blight in parts of Andol, Suriapet and Karimnagar. Spring crops are being sown. Sprouts are in fair to good condition. Cattle disease prevails in fifteen talukas. Variations in prices of grains are insignificant. The highest price of juar in districts is 6 seers per rupee in Parbhani and Bidar and the lowest 19 seers per rupee in Raichur.

Mysore.—The rainfall during the week was light in Kolar and good elsewhere. Prices of food grains are steady. Markets are well supplied. Ragi and paddy are being harvested. Standing crops are in good condition. Prospects are good. Cattle are generally healthy. Water and fodder are available.

Coorg.—Rainfall 4 inches 22 cents. Rice is in good condition. Picking of cardamoms and reaping of dry crops continue. Prices of food grains are high. The public health is fair. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Madras.—The rainfall during the week was heavy in South Kanara, good in Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Godavari, Sandur, Salem, Trichinopoly, Pudukkottai, Madura, Malabar, Cochin and the Nilgiris, nil in Cuddapah, Madras and Travancore and light to fair elsewhere. Standing crops are in fair to good condition generally but rain is required in parts of three districts. Harvesting of paddy, sugarcane and dry crops is proceeding normally with outturn fair to normal generally. Sowings of paddy and dry crops are proceeding normally. The condition of cattle is generally good. The water-supply is sufficient except in parts of Ganjam, Nellore, South Arcot, Central except Trichinopoly, Madura and Ramnad. Pasture is sufficient except in one district. Fodder is generally available. Prices are steady.

TO THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, FINANCE DEPARTMENT, SIMLA.

SIR,

I have the honour to submit my report on the operations of the Currency Department, the movement of funds, and the resource operations of the Government of India for the year 1916-17.

I.—Introductory.

This is the third report in succession dealing with the working of the Indian currency system under war conditions, and it seems desirable at the outset to take stock of the position, and to recapitulate very briefly the more important features of the war's influence upon India's currency arrangements. In his report for 1914-15, Mr. Howard noted with satisfaction that, although it was inevitable that India should be directly and immediately affected by the general dislocation in the world's finance and trade which followed on the outbreak of the war, nevertheless the Indian currency system could justly claim that it had been able to meet the crisis better than that of almost any other country. The first shock of the international upheaval caused, it is true, a run on the Government savings banks and some panic encashment of currency notes, while there was naturally a rush to remit money to England, necessitating the sale by Government of sterling drafts on London. There was, however, a relative absence of any real stringency, and the temporary want of confidence soon passed away. Within a few months after the commencement of the war it became clear that conditions were settling down—money began to return to the savings banks, the circulation of notes revived, and by February 1915 the balance of trade in favour of India had set up a firm demand for remittance to this country in the shape of Council bills. The year 1914-15 provided, in fact, a practical test of the efficiency of what has been called the 'Gold Exchange Standard' in saving from depreciation in an international crisis the currency of a silver-using country. <sup>Inter</sup>

The year 1915-16 appeared to afford further confirmation of the ability of the Indian currency system to meet the problems arising from war conditions. India's trade rapidly adapted itself to the abnormal conditions prevailing, there was a marked revival in the demand for money to finance her exports, the stability of the sterling exchange was maintained, and the popularity of the note issue, which had at once responded to the increased facilities for encashment provided on the outbreak of the war, showed a gratifying increase. Towards the end of the financial year there was, indeed, so strong a demand for remittance to India, that heavy "special" sales of Council bills were being made, and the rate for immediate transfers was forced up to ls. 4<sup>5</sup>/<sub>8</sub>d., while the effect on the internal currency was a heavy absorption of rupees and a record figure for the active note circulation.

2. It is owing to the continuance and intensification of those conditions during 1916-17 that the year under report presented a set of problems entirely different from those of the two preceding years. It was not that there was any real change in the character of external conditions, but the far-reaching nature of the results produced by the latter became for the first time apparent and prominent. The cumulative effects of (1) a great and increasing demand for India's exports at high prices, (2) the restriction of her imports, mainly due to the exacerbation of war conditions in the chief producing countries, and (3) the obliteration of the gold points, have, in fact, combined to create a situation which is as complex as it is unprecedented, and which was certainly not contemplated when the Indian currency system was formally put on its trial before the Royal Commission of 1913. In the following paragraphs I deal first with the main facts regarding these three causes, and shall then endeavour to show what their effect has been upon the demand for remittance and exchange conditions generally, the demand for internal currency, and the financial resources of the Government of India.

II.—India's Foreign Trade.

3. The statement below gives in a condensed form the statistics of India's external trade for the last eight years :—

(In lakhs of rupees.)

Year.	Gross exports of private merchandise.	Gross imports of private merchandise.	Net exports of private merchandise.	IMPORTS OF FUNDS AND TREASURE. (All on private account.)						Balance. Net export transactions + Net import transactions.

AVERAGE FOR 5 YEARS.	2,24,11	1,45,84	78,27	41,35	18,23	10,63	7,21	87	76,29	-2
1914-15 . .	1,81,59	1,37,93	43,66	(b) -2,27	1,65	6,50	10,01	85	16,54	+27,12
1915-16 . .	(a) 1,97,38	1,31,99	65,39	(b) 23,71	-2,68	1,54	5,58	90	29,05	+36,94
1916-17 . .	(a) 2,40,88	1,40,62	91,26	47,07	1,77	11,51	-8,32	52	57,55	+33,71

(a) These figures include exports of wheat on Government account with a value of 6,90 lakhs in 1915-16 and 2,34 lakhs in 1916-17, and also tanned hides exported on Government account with a value of 1,91 lakhs in 1916-17.

	1914-15	1915-16
(b) Council bills and transfers . . . . .	10,79.	31,05
Sterling drafts on London . . . . .	13,06	7,34
	-2,27	23,71

It will be seen from the above that in respect of the excess of exports of merchandise over imports the year 1916-17 has broken all records. The figures given for the apparent net balance in favour of India, after allowing for imports of funds and treasure, need, however, correction in many particulars. Thus, as explained in paragraph 10 below, the import of funds by means of Council bills does not represent by any means the whole of the private remittances made to India through Government agency; the imports of treasure include certain transactions which do not affect the balance of trade ; while the figures as a whole do not exhibit the considerable buying of exchange in respect of India's "invisible imports," i.e., remittances made from India otherwise than in payment for imports appearing in the trade returns. The effect of these and other factors upon India's credit balance has been fully explained and examined in previous reports, notably in Appendix I of Mr. Howard's report for 1913-14. In the succeeding Section of the present report I give figures, so far as these can be ascertained, for the principal items which, in addition to the figures shown in the above statement, must be taken into consideration in making up India's balance of accounts.

4. A detailed account of India's external trade during the year has been given in the Review of the Trade of India, published by the Department of Statistics, and I need only refer here to one or two of the more prominent features. The value of the merchandise exported from India in 1916-17 showed an increase of about 44 crores over that for the preceding year ; to some extent this increase in value was due to an increase in prices (notably in the case of raw jute), though on the whole the value of India's exports in 1916-17, calculated on the prices of 1915-16, showed an increase of over 10 crores.

Special mention should be made of the continued increase in the value of the exports of jute manufactures, which during 1916-17 reached the enormous figure of 42 crores, being double the annual average of the five years preceding the war. The number of bags and yards of cloth exported show a material increase over those of 1915-16, with the result that the great prosperity of the Indian jute mills, noticed by Mr. Howard in his report for that year, has continued unabated ; in the case of most mills the ratio of net profits to paid-up capital showed a further remarkable increase, and the process of applying undistributed profits to the redemption of debentures and to the strengthening of the companies' financial positions generally was further pursued. Another most important article of export was raw cotton, the shipments of which somewhat decreased in quantity but greatly increased in value, viz., by 9½ crores. As regards cotton manufactures, exports increased by a third, and the output of the Indian cotton mills reached a record figure.

5. There was an increase of about 18 crores in the value of the imports of merchandise, due almost entirely to a higher level of prices, there being an actual decrease in the volume of all the principal articles of import. This was specially marked in the case of piece-goods. During 1915-16 a substantial reduction in the stocks of piece-goods had occurred, and during 1916-17 it is probably correct to say that India could have absorbed considerably more than was imported. In spite of a decrease in the quantity imported, due mainly to war conditions prevailing in the manufacturing countries and to difficulties of freight, the value of the imports of piece-goods showed an increase of nearly 10 crores over the previous year. Similarly in the case of sugar, the decrease in value of imported sugar was 7 per cent, but in quantity 15 per cent, and, if the comparison be made with the pre-war year 1913-14, the quantity decreased by as much as 45 per cent, though owing to the abnormally high prices which have prevailed, the value increased by 3 per cent.

6. The statement in paragraph 3 above shows that the net imports of sovereigns and gold bullion were 13,28 lakhs. This figure includes, however, 9,08 lakhs of raw gold, imported from South Africa and held at Bombay on behalf of the Bank of England, which must be excluded from the trade balance, and the net private imports of gold will then stand at 4,20 lakhs as against an average for the quinquennium preceding the war of 28,86 lakhs. In normal times the great excess of exports of merchandise over imports would, to a large extent, have been liquidated by imports of gold. If it were possible to attribute the abnormal conditions of the year under report, and the various problems to which they gave rise, to the predominance of any one particular factor, it would probably be correct to single out the impossibility of shipping gold to India in liquidation of the trade balance, and the consequent concentration upon the only other method for such liquidation, namely, remittances through Government by means of Council bills, the unprecedented demand for which threw an intense strain upon the resources of Government in India, which were already heavily burdened by war expenditure.

7. As regards silver, the table in the margin shows the monthly imports and exports on private account during the year. There was an apparent net export of 3,32 lakhs, but of this 1,16 lakhs represents silver coin minted at Bombay on behalf of the Egyptian Government, and must be excluded, as not affecting the trade balance, leaving a net private export of 2,16 lakhs. The latter figure includes 15 lakhs of rupees exported by a Bank to East Africa on behalf of the Government of that country. The shipments of rupees from India made by the Government of India to Mesopotamia and elsewhere, which amounted to 125 lakhs, are not included in the above figures.

The fact that there was a net export of silver, instead of, as usual, a considerable net import, may be attributed to the remarkable divergence between the London and Indian prices of bar silver which obtained throughout the greater part of the year; there was sometimes a difference of as much as five rupees per hundred tolas between the price of foreign bar silver in India and the cost of replenishing stocks by fresh importations. The import of silver was thus rarely profitable, and, as a further consequence, there was a notable subsidence of speculation. The internal demand for silver, for use in the arts, etc., was to a very large extent met by the supply of what are known as "country" bars, i. e., bars made up from old stocks of jewellery, etc. The existing high prices tempted many people, who had bought their silver jewellery in the years when the general level of prices was very much lower, to realise their profits, and the supply thus obtained was practically sufficient for the bazaars' demands.

III.—Adjustment of the Trade Balance.

to balance.

8. It has been already mentioned that the trade figures given in the statement in paragraph 3 above give a very incomplete idea of India's foreign transactions. A true balance-sheet would include all transactions which resulted in a buying or selling of exchange, in other words, which necessitated a change of Indian currency into some other currency, or vice versa. The trade figures, which show an excess of nearly 91½ crores of exports of merchandise over imports, or, after allowing for Council bills and imports of funds and treasure, an excess of about 33½ crores, include however some transactions which have not really affected the balance of trade, and must therefore be excluded, while they exclude many more transactions which ought to be included. I will first deal with the corrections which have to be applied to the figures as they stand, before dealing with the additional items which have to be considered in making up our national accounts.

It will have been seen from the footnote to the statement summarising the trade figures that the exports of private merchandise include certain exports of wheat and hides on Government account which, it might be thought, should be excluded. No correction, however, need be made in respect of those exports, as the money was paid to the exporting firms in London, and ordinary documentary bills were drawn against the exports and negotiated in India, so that the effect on India's indebtedness was just the same as that of an export on private account. We must, however, for reasons* which have been explained in previous reports, deduct from the imports the value of the railway plant and rolling stock imported; the deduction to be made on this account for 1916-17 is the comparatively small figure of 1,57 lakhs. A large correction must be made in the figures for the imports and exports of treasure. The trade figures show that the net imports of sovereigns and gold bullion were 13,28 lakhs, but these figures include, as has already been mentioned, 9,08 lakhs of raw gold imported from South Africa and held at Bombay on behalf of the Bank of England, which must be excluded from the trade balance, as it gave rise to no exchange transactions, and was not imported in settlement of any indebtedness to India. The correct figure for the net private imports of gold will therefore stand at 4,20 lakhs. Similarly, as regards silver, a deduction of 1,16 lakhs must be made from the net export of 3,32 lakhs on account of the silver coins minted at Bombay for the Egyptian Government, leaving a net private export of 2,16 lakhs.

9. Allowing for the above corrections, the trade figures as given in paragraph 3 above should stand as follows :—

	(Lakhs.)
Net exports of merchandise . . . . .	92,83
Net imports of gold . . . . .	4,20
Net imports of silver . . . . .	—2,16
Net import of Government securities . . . . .	52
Balance of trade to be liquidated . . . . .	90,27

This means that the number of rupees that were seeking to be exchanged into external currency, such as sterling, dollars, yen, etc., in order to pay for India's imports, were outnumbered by the external currency, seeking to be exchanged into rupees in payment for India's exports, to the extent of about 90 crores. Speaking very generally, it may be said that the necessary balance of rupees has been found mainly in two ways—(A) by rupees placed at the disposal of trade by Government, and (B) by rupees brought forward by people in India who have had to make remittances elsewhere, i.e., who have had to turn their rupees into external currency, for some purpose other than in payment for an actual import of goods.

10. (A). Remittances through Government.

These may be taken at about 59 crores, the details being as follows :—

	(Lakhs.)
(1) Council bills . . . . .	47,07
(2) Net payments of money orders and postal orders in India . . . . .	3,30
(3) Telegraphic transfers and Supply bills issued on India from places in Persia, Mesopotamia and elsewhere . . . . .	4,50
(4) Paid to a Bank in India on behalf of the East African Government, which repaid the amount in London . . . . .	3,67
(5) Remittances to India, from certain Crown Colonies, for which special facilities were given . . . . .	20
(6) Currency notes returned from Mesopotamia and encashed in India . . . . .	80
	59,04

The above figures speak for themselves. The amount of Council bills was the highest reached for ten years, while the amount of money remitted to India by means of money orders and postal orders was also exceptionally high.

11. (B).—Remittances from India on account of "invisible" imports.

The conditions of the year under report have been so altogether abnormal, that to arrive at an estimate of the amounts to be allowed for under the various classes of remittances mentioned in the Appendices to the last three reports—always an elusive matter—has been particularly difficult, and I have been obliged to make the examination much less detailed than was formerly the case.

The problem is to ascertain what buying and selling of exchange the occurred for purposes not connected with import or export transactions shown in the trade accounts. If, for example, a company, operating in India but domiciled in England, has to remit, say, £100,000 in profits, it is a buyer of exchange to that extent, and although the remittance does not represent, and is not necessitated by, an actual import of goods, it will help to liquidate the balance of trade just as if it had been in payment for £100,000 worth of piece-goods. Per contra any remittance from the head office of a company to a branch in India to enable it, let us say, to carry out extensions, acts in the opposite direction, though it will readily be understood that in the exceptional circumstances of the year the items thus appearing on the credit side of the account were very few; such information as I have been able to obtain points, indeed, to the fact that they may be regarded as negligible, and for all practical purposes it is sufficient to concern ourselves with remittances from India.

12. Through the courtesy of the Exchange Banks I have been able to obtain certain information, which gives at any rate some idea of the extent and purpose of the remittances made from India during the year other than remittances made in payment for imports. My information is that the amount of such remittances was certainly not less than £15 millions, and may possibly have extended to £17 millions. Owing to the exceptional conditions of the year, and to the fact that the methods by and conditions under which debts have been settled have undergone some radical changes since the commencement of the war, it has not been possible to classify the above amount among all the various heads mentioned in previous reports. From the information supplied to me I think, however, that the following classification, which is by no means exhaustive but which covers the greater part of the amount in question, may be taken as fairly accurate:—

- (1) The remittances from India for investment abroad went almost entirely into the British War Loan, Exchequer Bonds and Treasury Bills. Their amount was somewhat less than is perhaps generally believed, being almost certainly not more than £5 millions, of which about £3 millions was for investment in the British War Loan.
- (2) A number of people resident in England, who hold shares in Indian companies, decided, in view of the great appreciation in values that has followed the general prosperity in India, to realise their profits, and about £1½ million was remitted on this account.
- (3) A large number of companies operating in India are domiciled in England, and their profits have had to be remitted home. The amount of such remittances by all companies, excluding railway companies, during 1916-17 are estimated to have been not less than £4½ to £5 millions.
- (4) My information is that remittances by railway companies of their profits amounted to £1½ million.
